Bolivia and Paraguay Reopen Border Warfare

VICTORY AT ARMS RENEWS AGITATION BELIEVED COOLING

Paraguayan Fort Boqueron Stormed and Captured in Reprisal for Attack on Fort Vanguardia

PRESIDENT PRAISES ACTION OF SOLDIERS

Airplanes Bombard Posts of Paraguay on Pilcomayo River; Minister Leaves, Defies Bolivia.

La Paz, December 15.—(United News.)—New and bloody fighting between Bolivians and Paraguayans has broken out.

Bolivians defeated Paraguayans and captured and occupied Fort Boqueron.

President Hernando Siles told a crowd of 20,000 persons tonight that Bolivian forces had administered a heavy defeat to Paraguayan soldiers in the Gran Chaco region.

The president's announcement followed publication of an official communique by Minister of War Hector Suarez.

The communique said:

"After the recent bloody outrage which the Bolivian army suffered at Fort Vanguardia—without our forgetting our international duties in the oath given to maintain peace—we declared before the League of Nations that Bolivia was undeniably bound as a duty to demand satisfaction and take military measures of a defensive character.

"This was in view of the fact that Paraguay was concentrating forces at many advanced positions to a point nearby our lines and it was logical to expect new incidents would occur.

"Glory to Heroes."

"Our logical forecasts were carried out as Paraguayan military detachments menaced our Chaco forts, provoking a bloody encounter with our troops who heavily defeated the Paraguayans, after which we occupied Fort Boqueron.

"The Bolivian army carried out its duty.

"Glory to the heroes sacrificed for the honor of the flag.

"La Paz, December 15, 1928."

Great excitement prevailed through the city after the announcement.

After President Siles told the huge crowd gathered before the government house of the occupation of the fort by Bolivian soldiers, the strains of the national anthem rang through the city and 20,000 voices joined in song.

President Speaks.

Military bands gathered quickly and everywhere about the capital groups marched to war tunes and the national anthem.

President Siles, addressing the great throng that gathered in front of the government house, said:

The newspaper El Norte announced tonight that Bolivian troops captured

Flu Epidemic Not Dangerous, Dr. William Brady Says

By William Brady, M. D.
Editor "Health Talks."

The influenza outbreaks at present giving me anxiety to the people in various parts of the country, notably California and some of the southern states, are evidently not the severe type of disease that overwhelmed the country in the great epidemics of 1918 and 1920.

It is probably not the same disease at all. The present epidemic is unlikely to become dangerous in any locality.

From all the reliable information at hand today I am inclined to believe that the present alarm is nothing more than an exaggerated view of the usual annual prevalence of our old friend, the cri (common respiratory infection). I believe the doctors are for the time being calling it flu mainly because patients, always susceptible to suggestion from the newspaper stories, come to the doctors complaining that they believe they've got a touch of this flu. You may not understand how this can be, but if so, you've never practiced medicine, that's all.

The health authorities are still as helpless as ever to cope with real flu, of course. We know no more about the nature or cause of that mysterious disease than we did when the great epidemic paralyzed the country.

Our ignorance of the specific cause of real flu should occasion no more anxiety than does our ignorance of the actual nature of what you and your doctor may conspire to call a "cold," or maybe the "grip."

HOOVER IS GIVEN ARGENTINE MEDAL

President-Elect Honors Liberator and Confers With Former President of Bolivia on Peace.

Buenos Aires, December 15.—(AP)—Herbert Hoover, president-elect of the United States, today talked with Eusebio Ayala, former president of Paraguay and who came here recently as chairman of the Paraguayan delegation to the commission which has been seeking a solution of this country's boundary dispute with Bolivia.

Whether they discussed the possibility of mediation by the United States in the situation which arose from fighting on the border last week was not revealed. It was believed, however, that Senor Ayala went over the Paraguayan view of the dispute.

Mr. Hoover remained this morning at the home of Ambassador Bliss, resting up from the strenuous program of yesterday. There were a number of callers, each of whom had a few words with the distinguished visitor.

The luncheon today was given by Jose Canilo, mayor of Buenos Aires. Thirty guests were present, made up of national and municipal officials and members of the diplomatic corps. Later Senor Canila guided Mr. Hoover on a tour of inspection about the port of Buenos Aires. Particular interest was shown in new piers adjoining the old docks and erected after an effort of several years at a cost of millions of dollars.

Receives Gold Medal.

Mr. Hoover was then taken to the city hall, where he received a gold medal as the gift of the municipality. Then he went to the cathedral and deposited a wreath on the tomb of the Argentine liberator, General Jose de San Martin, a statue of whom stands in Judiciary square in Washington.

One of Mr. Hoover's pleasant experiences today was the exchange of messages with Secretary Kellogg in

Holiday Rush Is Under Way At Postoffice

500 Extra Men Will Be Taken on Monday To Expedite Mailings.

BY CARY WILMER.

Christmas is still a little over a week away but as far as local postoffice authorities are concerned, the holiday season has already started and beginning Monday morning, 500 extra men will be taken on to expedite the handling of the millions of pieces of Christmas mail which will include cards and packages of all descriptions.

Each piece of mail must be cancelled, assorted, sent to the trains by means of trucks and then taken to practically every corner of the globe. During the rush season, a force of over 1,400 men will be employed in the l l office alone and 40 extra trucks will be pressed into service.

An additional sub-station will be opened at Buckhead Monday for the convenience of people in that vicinity during the holiday rush season, Postmaster E. K. Large announced, and will remain open until the end of the h idays.

Prompt Service Striven For.

"We are making every effort," Large stated, "to give prompt and efficient service in spite of the enormous amount of extra mail that it will be necessary to handle, and we hope to have enough extra help on hand so that no one will be forced to wait mo e than five minutes at any window. People can cooperate with us by being extremely careful in addressing mail and wrapping packages securely."

In addition to the extra force of men which has been employed, a large quantity of equipment has been dragged from its resting place in the attic and pressed into service. This includes tables, distribution boxes and similar paraphernalia as a rule rarely seen by the outsider but vital for the task of assorting mail.

Some idea of the extra work necessary in the postoffice at this time of the year may be gleaned from the fact that the cancellation machines which handle only letters and postal cards, are taking care of approximately 200,000 pieces of mail a day, which already is more than the average, and this figure during the peak of the Christmas rush will reach 1,000,000 daily, Mr. Large states.

The ground floor of the main postoffice has been generously provided with [illegible] and a quantity of twine and heavy paper for wrapping packages and as soon as it becomes necessary, a number of extra sets of scales will be set up in order to expedite service.

Everything will be done, in fact, except to actually buy the presents for you and even this end of it has not been overlooked entirely. Not to be outdone by merchants who advise you to say it with flowers, candy, cigars and countless other articles which come into particular prominence at this time of the year, the postoffice department is exhorting you to "say it with money orders," the "it" in this case meaning "Merry Christmas."

SALVAGE STOPPED AS WAVES POUND ON LINER CELTIC

Cobh, Irish Free State, December 15.—(AP)—The liner Celtic, on the rocks at the entrance to Cork harbor, was still being pounded by heavy seas today and the vessel's position was so precarious that salvage men could not go aboard. Their tugs had to take refuge in the harbor. Much cargo remains in the ship which is feared is doomed.

CITY COMMISSION NAMED BY MAYOR AS ADVISORY BODY

25 Business Leaders Will Study and Aid Government's Functions; Baltimore Plan Followed.

Twenty-five of Atlanta's outstanding successful business executives will compose a commission to study and aid the functions of the Atlanta city government during 1929, Mayor I. N. Ragsdale announced Saturday following the dispatch of letters to the business men notifying them of their appointment to the newly-created municipal advisory body.

In announcing the appointment of the commission, Mayor Ragsdale expressed the belief that the aid and advice of the business executives will be of great benefit to the city, as Atlanta will have her leading commercial executives helping to solve the problem of conducting the business of the municipality on a more economical and efficient basis. The men appointed by Mayor Ragsdale to the commission are executives who guide and direct in large enterprises where the maximum of efficiency is vital to the economical conduct of their business.

Unselfish Service.

The labor of the commission is to be one of unselfish service, and, "if it accomplishes results for the betterment of our city government, every taxpayer will be benefitted and indebted to its work," Mayor Ragsdale said. "I hope that the commission will receive the full cooperation of every department of our government, and of the citizens in general, and I am sure it will."

This action was taken by the mayor following the visit here of William J. Casey, of Baltimore, who outlined the results obtained by a similar commission at Baltimore appointed by the mayor to study and aid the functions of city government. Mr. Casey was invited to speak in Atlanta by Mayor

LEAVE FOR SCENE OF FIRST FLIGHT

World Pilgrimage to Site Where Wrights Conquered Air Heads Toward South.

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—An international pilgrimage to the scene of man's first successful airplane flight, upon the twenty-fifth anniversary of the event, was headed south tonight with Orville Wright, the first man to fly, as its guest of honor.

Two hundred men and women prominent in aviation made up the party which arranged to leave Washington by steamer tonight on the first lap of its pilgrimage to the sandy seashore of Kitty Hawk, N. C., where Orville and Wilbur Wright first flew December 17, 1903. The party will arrive at the scene of the first flight Monday morning, just 25 years after the Wright Brothers startled the birds by appearing among them. They will reach Old Point Comfort, Va., tomorrow morning and visit the Langley Memorial Aeronautical Laboratories at Langley Field, Va., in the afternoon.

The steamer will carry them to Norfolk early Monday morning, where the party will continue by automobile to the sand-swept wastes near Kitty Hawk. A cornerstone for a government memorial to the Wright Brothers will be laid atop Kill Devil Hill, from which the Wrights carried on their first experiments with gliders. A bronze tablet mounted on a huge granite boulder will be unveiled upon the spot where the first plane took off with Orville Wright at its controls.

Amelia Earhart, Reed Landis, American war ace; Brigadier General Lord Thompson, former British minister of air; Pierre Etienne Flandin, vice president of the French chamber of deputies; William F. Whiting, secretary of commerce; Dwight F. Davis, secretary of war; F. Trubee Davison, assistant secretary of war for aeronautics; Edward P. Warner, assistant secretary of navy for aeronautics; William P. MacCracken, assistant secretary of commerce for aeronautics; Senator Hiram Bingham, president of the National Aeronautic association, and scores of fliers, airplane designers and aerial technicians were in the party.

It Won't Be Long Now!

Daring Raid Nets Bandits $1,200 Cash

Grocer Is Detained in His Own Store for More Than Two Hours.

After being forcibly detained in the rear of his grocery at 774 Highland avenue for nearly two hours by two young, smartly dressed bandits, L. R. Denny, of 1132 Virginia avenue, was forced, at the point of a gun, to open the store safe and hand over to the bandits approximately $1,200 in cash, according to reports made to police early this morning.

Denny told Call Officers Hardy and Carroll that the two youths entered the store at about 10:30 o'clock Saturday night shortly after the clerks had left for the night and after he had locked the day's receipts in the safe. They ordered some ginger ale and oranges and then, as he was filling the order, drew guns and forced him to the rear of the store.

Switching off the lights they then locked the front door and forced him to clear away several garbage cans from the rear door and opened this, apparently to provide a good avenue of escape in the event of attack from the front.

They then sat in the darkened rear of the store intermittently cursing and striking him in the face with their hands or the butts of their guns, he said, in apparent efforts to intimidate him. During this time a patrolman, making his rounds, came to the front of the store and tried the door but he was kept from summoning aid by their muttered threats, Denny stated.

Shortly after midnight a drug store located in the space adjoining the grocery store closed its doors and the employees went home, leaving that business section deserted.

The bandits then forced Denny to the safe and compelled him to open it and hand over all of its cash contents, after which they fled from the store by the front door and made their escape in a motor car driven by a negro.

Denny described both men as being very young, neither being apparently more than 20 or 21, and stated that both were smartly dressed. He said he could readily identify both and also stated that one of them had been in the store once before and at that time had purchased considerable goods.

CARBONDALE, ILL. MERCHANT IS HELD IN FATHER'S DEATH

Carbondale, Ill., December 15.—(AP)—Three minutes after he returned from the funeral of former Mayor J. C. Hundley, his father, and Luella Hundley, his step-mother, Victor A. Hundley, 30, a coal dealer, was arrested on a charge of slaying the elderly couple Wednesday night.

Anxiety for King Lessens As Bulletins Say Fever Lower and Heart Strong

CONGRESS ACTIVE FIRST TWO WEEKS

Boulder Dam Bill Passed, Appropriations Well on Way and Treaty Bout Next on Schedule.

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—Congress, at the end of the first two weeks of its short session, found itself today with appropriation bills well along toward enactment; with the Boulder dam bill through the senate and back in the house for agreement, and with a place made before the senate for the naval cruiser construction bill, which was given right of way by the republican steering committee.

All of these measures were looked upon two weeks ago as difficult subjects. With another week before the Christmas recess begins, however, house and senate has made progress which could not be predicted with any degree of accuracy when the senate began with a membership tired from the exertions of the national campaign.

The house today finished up general debate on the agriculture department appropriation bill, the third of the big supply measures to come up for consideration, making it certain that Speaker Longworth's promise that the three would be enacted before Christmas would be fulfilled. The senate had before it a bill dealing with the products of prison labor, but the session was long enough only to allow Senator Burton, of Ohio, to take his seat, and to permit Senator Bruce, of Maryland, and Senator Gillette, of Massachusetts, to give expression to their views about the Kellogg treaty to outlaw war and the condition of the American navy.

Mr. Bruce was not complimentary to the treaty, calling it a "stab in the air," "anaemic" and "futile." Nevertheless the senator said he would vote for it.

Senator Gillette called for more cruisers, in view of the British attitude toward armaments. He denied any warlike attitude toward any nation, however.

The house received the Boulder dam

Two Additional Specialists Called in To Employ Raytherapy To Hasten Ruler's Convalescence.

London, December 16.—(Sunday)—(United News.)—The United News was officially informed at Buckingham palace at 1:30 a. m., that there had been no change since the evening bulletin and that the king was resting comfortably. All was reported quiet at the palace.

Additional specialists worked over King George last night to save him from death.

The king, wasted and emaciated after 25 days of painful and severe illness, held on valiantly, but he was exhausted. It was feared his overtaxed heart would give out.

X-Ray Treatment Used.

The medical staff of eight specialists, who have been attending the king, was augmented today by Dr. Frank Howitt, a Harley street specialist in raytherapy, and by Dr. Robert Stanton Woods, expert in electrolysis and radiology. It was the first time they had been called into the case.

The doctors announced that it had been decided to use raytherapy in treating the king.

There was unprecedented activity among the physicians and almost constant coming and going at the palace.

The night bulletin was issued after a consultation among the five doctors who signed it. The bulletin follows:

"Buckingham palace, Saturday, 7:20 p. m.:

"His majesty has had a quiet day with some sleep. Though the pulse remains steady and the fever is now moderate, the exhaustion persist. It has been decided to employ raytherapy as part of the treatment.

"Signed

"STANLEY HEWETT,
"R. S. WOODS,
"FRANK HOWITT,
"HUGH RIGBY,
"DAWSON OF PENN."

Heart Trouble Feared.

The calling of Dr. Howitt was taken to indicate that efforts would be concentrated on maintaining the king's strength by violet ray treatments. Dr. Woods' presence indicated that constant watch would be kept on the progress of the infection in the king's right lung by radio photography.

Dr. Woods is a noted authority on pericarditis with effusion. His sum-

J. M. M'MICHAEL HELD BY POLICE PENDING PROBE

Detective John Lowe Says Web of Tangible Evidence Is Being Built Around Prisoner.

SUSPECT ADMITS KNOWING BRANDON

Prisoner Sent Suit of Gray Clothes to Cleaning Plant Day After Undertaker Was Slain.

J. M. McMichael, 30 years old, is being held incommunicado at police headquarters in connection with the slaying two weeks ago of Robert M. Brandon, vice president and general manager of the Barclay & Brandon Undertaking company. He is booked as a state's prisoner on a blanket charge of "suspicion."

McMichael was arrested Saturday morning by Detectives John W. Lowe, L. D. Cody and C. N. Ellis at his home, 106 Harris street. Lowe, who has headed the police investigation of the Brandon murder, said that a web of tangible evidence had been built about the prisoner, that a gray suit, similar to one worn by the slayer had been placed in a cleaning plant by McMichael the day following the murder and that a dark gray, well-worn and dirty hat, bearing bloodstains was found in his rooms.

"We do not have enough evidence to file a charge of murder," he admitted Saturday night, "but we do have enough to hold this man for further investigation. All I can say now is that we believe we are on the right track."

PRISONER ADMITS KNOWING BRANDON.

McMichael, questioned in the offices of Chief of Detectives A. Lamar Poole, Saturday afternoon at first denied knowing Brandon but later, under a severe grilling by Lowe admitted that he had known the undertaker for some time and had had several small business deals with him.

"The fact that McMichael sought to conceal his acquaintance with Brandon leads us to believe that he may be our man when we consider the other evidence," Lowe said.

McMichael has not been questioned regarding the actual murder, Lowe said, explaining that the detectives preferred to await more evidence before laying their "cards" before him.

The detective adds that in obtaining the evidence which lead to McMichael's

CHICAGO SCHOOL WORK HALTS ON PLOT PROBE

Awarding of Contracts Suspended Pending Conspiracy Charge Investigation.

Chicago, December 15.—(AP)—Awarding of contracts for construction work on Chicago school buildings was suspended today and State's Attorney Swanson began an investigation of charges that school board employees were engaged in a conspiracy to sell contracts.

H. Wallace Caldwell, president of the school board, announced that he had been collecting evidence of the alleged conspiracy since he took office early this year. He turned the matter over to the state's attorneys office.

"From the time I first went into office, I have known that the awarding of contracts for school construction work has been tinged with graft, Mr. Caldwell said. "At this time I have no incriminating information, but I have ordered all contracts held up pending a complete investigation."

The purpose of $10,000 fund placed in escrow for the disposition of a broker was one of the principal items under inquiry. A group of cut stone contractors who had been excluded from school contracts for four years gathered the fund together and commissioned Roy W. Ammel to break the monopoly held by the terra cotta manufacturers.

Charges were made that this $10,000 fund was to be distributed among certain school board members or employees in return for contract favors. Ammel, however, did not obtain any contracts, and the fund remains intact in a bank.

The charges were answered by Max Davidson, spokesman for the cut stone contracting group, who declared it was a legitimate deposit made to guarantee good faith toward Ammel. Davidson welcomed an investigation of the fund, denying implications of graft or bribery, and asserting Ammel was hired merely as a broker on commission basis.

BOLIVIA-PARAGUAY RENEW BORDER WAR

Fort Rojas Silver after a bitter encounter.

The newspaper said that Bolivian airplanes bombarded Paraguayan positions on the banks of the Pilcomayo river.

"Colonel Ayala during an interview added that there was no divisions in Paraguay, that men and women were like-minded and that all Paraguayans were brave people, which is true," said the president.

"But without words will prove that we are also brave.

"Viva the army. Viva the commander of our forces in the Chaco. Viva Bolivia."

Bolivia Remains Firm.

The announcement came at a time when renewed war-like activities had been evident throughout the day. Crowds had gathered to read the government's replies to the League of Nations council and the international permanent committee at Montevideo.

Notes for both bodies had urged that Bolivia and Paraguay avoid disastrous conflict and mediate their boundary difficulties which had come to a climax over the Fort Vanguardia incident, December 6, when 22 Bolivian soldiers were killed in a sudden fight with Paraguay troops in the Gran Chaco country.

Replies to both notes sharply said that Bolivia must have a "satisfaction" and "proper reparation" from Paraguay for an "unexpected attack upon the national honor and dignity" and on Bolivian military forces.

WAR MATERIALS POUR INTO BOLIVIA.

Sante Fe, Argentina, December 15. (AP)—A large quantity of war materials destined for Bolivia passed through this city today by the North Central Argentine railway. Four airplanes of German manufacture, unarmed but suitable for war purposes, were included in the shipment.

Washington, December 15—(United News.)—By administering a heavy defeat to Paraguayan soldiers in the Gran Chaco and by capturing Fort Boqueron, Bolivia has exacted reparations demanded from Paraguay for the "attack upon her national dignity," and may now be in a better position to accept proposals of conciliation, Bolivian Minister Eduardo Diez de Medina declared tonight following receipt of reports from La Paz. The minister said that he had received advices from his government briefly outlining the most recent developments, but he declined to make the information public.

Asked for an opinion as to the probable effects which today's events in the Chaco would have upon attempts now being made to effect a pacific settlement of the Bolivian-Paraguayan dispute, the minister said:

"Bound To Retaliate."

"Bolivia was bound to require reparations from Paraguay for the attack on Bolivia's national dignity, and inas-much as the government of Paraguay did not seem disposed to offer such reparations Bolivia, without abandoning her attitude of willingness to submit the issue to any of the conciliatory means suggested, had to exact from her aggressor the moral reparations required."

"I believe that now that this prior demand of Bolivia has been fulfilled by the events that took place today that my country will feel in a better position to accept any of the offers which have been made to her for a conciliatory settlement, since this would be in accord with her invariable policy of international justice and American concord," Medina said.

Extraordinary Session.

Prospects of an extraordinary session of the inter-American conference on conciliation and arbitration or of the special mediation committee of the conference being convoked tomorrow to deal with the latest crisis in the Bolivian-Paraguayan situation was the subject of immediate speculation among delegates.

Victor Maurtua, of Peru, chairman of the special mediation committee of the conference, confined to his bed in the Hotel Mayflower with a severe cold, told the United News, in a message relayed by Senora de Maurtua, that the convoking of an extraordinary session of either body was unlikely.

"It is our intention to await the replies of both Bolivia and Paraguay to the notes sent by Secretary Kellogg as chairman of the conference yesterday, before taking any further action here," Maurtua said.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS HAS DONE ITS BEST.

Lugano, Switzerland, December 15. (AP)—The council of the League of Nations again acted today in an effort to bring a peaceful settlement to the Bolivian-Paraguayan border dispute.

In addressing tonight new exhortations to the governments of Bolivia and Paraguay, the council has "given of its best" as one member put it, to secure an amicable solution of the conflict.

By this action, it is felt the council has given testimony of its belief that political quarrels in Latin America which menace world peace are as much within the scope of the league work as conflicts in Europe itself.

The decision to cable a second appeal to the two South American states was taken at a secret session after the adjournment of the last public session of the 53rd council. According to league officials, three Latin American members advocated action which would be strong enough to prove to the people of Latin America that the league possesses real value for them and that they may look to it for help in time of international political difficulty.

Several members of the council, among them Sir Austen Chamberlain, are understood to have advised making haste slowly without seeking to avert the council's duty. There was some discussion of the position of the Pan-American conference now sitting in Washington and its possibilities of mediation and incidentally of the attitude of the United States and the sister republics of South America.

Complete agreement, however, was easily reached on the text of the appeal. This emphasizes the necessity of peaceful settlement and gives special importance to article XII of the covenant whereby member states are committed to settle disputes by an arbitral or judicial means or through an inquiry by the council itself and are enjoined from resorting to war until three months after a decision is reached.

If either Bolivia or Paraguay now requests a council inquiry it seems likely that M. Briand, who will remain here until Monday, will convoke a special session of the council, perhaps at Paris.

ATLANTA REALTOR SPENT $4,000 IN SEARCH OF HEALTH

A. C. Witherington Says Sargon Is Only Medicine That Ever Reached His Troubles; His Statement Remarkable.

The following remarkable statement was made by A. C. Witherington, manager of the lease department of the John J. Thompson Co., well-known realtors with offices in the Candler Building. Mr. Witherington is a member of the Atlanta Real Estate Board and is prominent in both business and social circles. His home is located at 422 East Virginia Avenue, in College Park.

His statement follows:

"I would not consider making a public statement recommending any medicine that would be misleading. Before making up my mind to issue this statement I gave the matter much thought and I reached the conclusion that by doing so I might be of some service to others suffering as I have suffered. For this and no other reason I am giving this endorsement.

"I realize that I am making a broad statement when I say that I have spent $4,000 in the past five years for medicines for myself and family.

"Sargon has proven to be the best medicine I have ever used. No one can tell me about stomach trouble, for I have gone through with enough suffering to have put me out long ago. I never knew what it meant to digest my food: My stomach would bloat from gas and pains would shoot across my breast and many times it was an effort to even breathe. When I was travelling I used to carry a box of soda along with me to be ready at all times.

"My system became infected with malaria several years ago when I was travelling down in Florida and I have never been able to entirely rid myself of it. My muscles and joints would get so sore that I was not able to do a day's work. My color was as yellow as gold and my general health was very much impaired. After spending much money and going through much suffering I reached the conclusion that my trouble was from a sluggish, inactive liver. My liver has been in such bad condition that it actually hurt me to stoop over. Now since taking Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills I have been convinced that it was an inactive liver that caused me all the suffering.

"I was so badly constipated I had to take strong laxatives daily and always suffered from this complaint. I have used two bottles of Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills and while I am not making a statement that I am cured, I can truthfully say that the Sargon treatment has done me more good than anything I have ever used. My color is improving. I feel much stronger and my general health is much better.

"Sargon Soft Mass Pills are excellent. Their laxative action is so gentle—there is no trace of cramping or griping, yet at the same time they are thorough and dependable.

"I can say the Sargon treatment has given me new vitality and a sense of fitness I have not experienced in months."

The Sargon representative can be found at Jacobs' main store, 6 and 8 Marietta street, where hundreds call daily to learn more about this remarkable medicine. Sargon is also sold by the other Jacobs stores all over Atlanta.—(adv.)

morning also apparently confirmed the general fear for the strength of the patient's heart. Dr. Howitt is physician in charge of the physiotheraphy and massage departments of the Prince of Wales general hospital at Tottenham.

It was understood the raytheraphy treatment mentioned will be used as a new method of attack against the general infection as well as the local infection in the right lung. It can be used to subject the body to artificial sunlight generated by electricity. The rays have the same tonic effect as the undiluted rays of the sun at high altitudes.

Since discovery of the medical value of the X-ray and radium treatments, ray theraphy has made great strides in the destruction of diseased tissues. It is, sometimes used in the treatment of cancer and as an accessory to surgery.

No Cause for Alarm.

Ray theraphy's healing powers are effective to a considerable depth through minute capillary glass or gold tubes containing radium emanation, also by surgical needles.

It was said reliably that palace circles considered last night's bulletin satisfactory and no immediate cause for alarm, although a long struggle is necessary. Mention of the moderate temperature was considered good.

Dr. Woods and Dr. Howitt left the palace at 7 p. m. Dr. Rigby, the surgeon, who arrived at 6:45, left at 8 p. m.. Lord Dawson and Sir Stanley Hewett were in fairly constant attendance day and night. Lord Dawson left during the evening and Sir Stanley remained for the night.

The scene in the palace, where the king lies near death in the same room where Edward VII, his father, died, can be pictured from meager details that have been allowed to come out.

The bearded ruler of the British empire, his slight frame emaciated by the ravages of his illness, lies on a white sheeted bed, made as unadorned and efficient as a hospital bed to aid in treating him.

Two nurses, chosen from among the most skillful in England, are in constant attendance. Their movements are noiseless on the heavily carpeted floor. The queen is allowed to see the king at intervals. The nurses are supposed by etiquette to leave the room at such times, but they remain at the express wish of the queen, who wants nothing to interefere with the constant care of the patient.

King Knows Family.

The king apparently is not in a coma, and can recognize his family, since it was reported that when the Prince of Wales saw him yesterday, the king asked about the lions the prince shot on his African hunting trip.

The Prince of Wales and the Duke and Duchess of York dined at the palace last night.

The Duke and Duchess of York left the palace at 11 p. m. The Prince of Wales followed shortly afterwards.

COOLIDGE MESSAGE PRAISED BY PRESS.

London, December 15.—(AP)—The Sunday Observer tomorrow will say that the excellent qualities of King George are appreciated by the whole world but best by the nation which speaks its own tongue. "President Coolidge's few words of friendly sympathy have scattered the fogs of misunderstanding," the newspaper says.

The editorial asserts that the entire English world finds itself at one. "A common anxiety," it explains, "has united two peoples so closely that the good will which comes of the contact will surely persist long after the immediate cause of it has ceased to operate."

The Sunday dispatch says that the common concern over the monarch by English-speaking peoples shows that Americans are indeed "a branch of the Anglo-Saxon family.

"In this hour of national anxiety," it says, "nothing has touched the heart of the British people more than the ready, generous sympathy expressed by all sorts and conditions of men and women in America. Mr. President Coolidge has himself sent a message of sympathy to the king and the reply of the queen shows how acceptable to the royal family in their long watch this expression of fellow feeling from the head of the American commonwealth."

PRINCE GEORGE WIRES THANKS TO COOLIDGE.

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—Prince George, youngest son of King George, who is hurrying to London from Bermuda on account of his father's illness, sent a telegram today to President Coolidge from the steamship Berengaria. It reads:

"I desire to offer you, Mr. President, my grateful thanks for your kind message given to me by Mr. Prentiss Gilbert, and to assure you that upon my arrival in England I will convey it to the king and queen. I venture to express my thanks to you, Mr. President, and to the officials of your government for the courtesy and kindness received upon my arrival and stay at New York."

The message to which the prince referred was a verbal one that Mr. Gilbert, an envoy from the department of state, conveyed to the prince on behalf of Mr. Coolidge. It was to the effect that the president hoped King George would continue the improvement reported from London on the day the prince sailed from New York.

Balmy Weather To Stay Today, Forecast Says

Springlike weather conditions which took the city more or less by surprise Saturday will be in vogue again today, according to the official forecast of C. F. von Herrmann, head of the local weather bure . who says that fine, clear weather will be with us for one more day at least.

Temperature Saturday ranged from a low point of 41 up to a maximum of 60 and Mr. von Herrmann says that approximately the same extremes will be registered today.

CONGRESS ACTIVE FIRST TWO WEEKS

bill, but took no action. It must now decide whether to approve senate amendments to the measure, which it has already passed, or send it to a conference to smooth out the differences betwen the two branches of congress. Friends of the bill expressed the hope that a conference might be avoided.

Moves to extend the life of the radio commission were started in both the senate and house, where bills were introduced by Chairman Watson, of the senate commerce committee, and White, of the house merchant marine committee, to carry out this purpose.

Orville Wright, here to attend the international aviation conference, was presented to the senate by Vice President Dawes. Congress has just awarded him the distinguished flying cross.

The way apparently was cleared for Senator Watson, of Indiana, to assume the republican senate leadership upon the retirement of Vice President-elect Curtis. Senator Jones, of Washington, announced he would not be a candidate. Jones is Watson's senior in senate service.

Representafive McKeown, an Oklahoma democrat, offered the house a bill to make possession of both firearms and liquor a penitentiary offense. His measure would provide that this punishment go to any one manufacturing liquor with a firearm handy.

COOLIDGE PRESSES FOR TREATY PASSAGE.

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—President Coolidge late today called to the white house two members of the senate foreign relations committee whose attitude toward the Kellogg treaty to outlaw war has yet to be made clear and in a conference which lasted nearly an hour expressed his intense desire that the senate ratify the pact and at the same time attach no reservations. The treaty is expected to come to a vote in the committee on Monday.

The two senators, Johnson, of California, and McLean, of Connecticut, both republicans, refused to discuss their talk with the chief executive, but a short while later a brief announcement of what had taken place was made through Everett Sanders, Mr. Coolidge's secretary.

Earlier in the day the senate heard the first words of opposition to the treaty to be uttered on the senate floor. These came from Bruce, of Maryland, who, nevertheless ended his speech with a declaration that he would vote for the ratification because he felt that the pact, although faulty in itself, was calculated to bring the United States into the League of Nations and the world court.

The position of both Johnson and McLean has yet to be clearly determined. Johnson's attention has been monopolized virtually since the session began by his Boulder canyon dam bill which finally was approved yesterday by the senate.

G. O. P. LEADERSHIP IN SENATE SURE FOR INDIANA SOLON

Washington, December 14.—(AP)—An apparently clear path to the republican leadership in the senate for Senator Watson, of Indiana, was indicated today with the withdrawal of Senator Jones, of Washington, from the contest.

HOOVER IS GIVEN ARGENTINE MEDAL

Washington over a special hookup of radio and telegraph lines. The text of the messages, which included expressions to and from President Coolidge, was not given out here, as it was thought advisable that any announcement as to their content should come from Washington.

Is Star in Talkie.

Mr. Hoover also recorded a few words on a talking news reel. This was the first "talkie" made in South America.

Members of the Hoover party said that he was delighted with his reception here, the beauty of the city and its modern aspect having created a profound impression. His close contacts with President Irigoyen, other Argentine officials and many private citizens have given him an opportunity for first-hand study of conditions here in relations to economic and diplomatic exchanges with the United States.

President Irigoyen, whose nickname, "The Mole," is descriptive of his policy of shunning pulicity, has broken all his own rules. Last night, after the banquet, he personally conducted Mr. Hoover and his son, Allan, on a sight-seeing tour of the boulevards. Then he drove them to the home of Ambassador Bliss. This was an unprecedented procedure for the president of Argentina.

Give him a New HICKOK Belt-Set

"But he has a Belt"—that remark sounds old-fashioned today when every well-dressed man needs at least 4 Belt Sets. Perhaps HE would like the Belt Set shown in the first panel above. It harmonizes beautifully with a blue or dark grey suit. The box is of imported French design, hand colored—a Masterpiece.

You will agree that the Belt shown in the second panel above is handsome—but that is only half the story. It is an amazing Belt—it S-T-R-E-T-C-H-E-S. But is it a Leather Belt? Yes, genuine leather. You are sure to give him a real thrill with this Belt—he has never seen one like it before.

Next we have a Sports Belt—more daring in color and texture. Picture it on smart Golf Knickers. The Buckle and Beltogram in two colors are in perfect color harmony with the Belt. He will be grateful for such a set. He may even give it—and you—credit for taking a few strokes off his score. Formal wear calls for dignity—a perfect setting for the beautiful Belt Set shown in the fourth panel. The sets on this page are only a few of the combinations shown by Daniel Bros. WILLIAM QUARLES DIES AT RESIDENCE; FUNERAL MONDAY

William E. Quarrels, 70, died late Saturday afternoon at his residence, 226 Moreland avenue, after an illness of several weeks.

A native of Cartersville, Mr Quarles came to Atlanta more than 45 years ago. He was a blacksmith and at various times was connected with several local railroad shops and other concerns. He retired from active work nearly 20 years ago.

Mr. Quarles was well known as one of the charter members of the local, No. 1, Brotherhood of Railway Blacksmiths and Helpers, which was founded here more than 30 years ago. He was active in the work of this union until recent years.

He is survived by two sons, Charles and Emory, and a sister, Mrs. Will House, of Cartersville. Another son, D. Arthur Quarles, who died some years ago. Funeral services will be conducted at 11 o'clock Monday morning from Spring Hill chapel. Dr. W. T. Hunnicutt will be in charge and burial will be in West View.

WOMAN IS ROBBED OF PURSE AND $27 WHILE IN THEATER

Miss Ruby Pruitt, of 12 Elbridge avenue, was robbed of a purse containing about $27 Saturday night while attending a local theater, according to reports made to police. Miss Pruitt told officers that she had laid the purse on a vacant seat beside her and did not notice that it was missing until she left the theater.

Miss Anna Banks, a student at a local boarding school, was robbed of a purse containing approximately $27 early Saturday night when she left the pocketbood with her coat outside the dining hall as she went in to dinner.

GROOM ARRESTED ON HIS HONEYMOON AS HIT, RUN DRIVER

South Hill, Va., December 15. (United News.)—In the same town where he and his bride planned to spend their honeymoon, C. L. Massett, of Selma, N. C., found himself under arrest tonight as a hit-and-run motorist.

The car in which the eloping couple were driving, hit and killed Robert King, at Wise, N. C., yesterday, a few hours after the Massett's were married. When the couple reached here last night Massett was placed in jail, while his 18-year-old bride spent the night in a hotel.

North Carolina officers arrived here today and plan to take Massett back to face charges. Massett said he failed to stop after hitting King because he feared mob violence.

KENNETH BURKE WINS DIAL AWARD FOR HIS WRITINGS

New York, December 15.—(AP)—The annual award of $2,000 given by the Dial for distinguished service to American letters goes this year to Kenneth Burke, of Andover, N. J., the magazine announced today.

"A specialized and as it were laboratory interest in aesthetics is felt in his criticism, his fiction and his translations," the magazine says of the prize winner. Burke, a native of Pittsburgh, attended Ohio State and Columbia universities.

Mrs. Tommie Neely.

Covington, Ga., December 15.—(Special.)—Mrs. Tommie Neely, 75 years old, of Almon, Ga., died suddenly at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charlie Dobbs, Saturday morning. She is survived by four sons, Jeff, Charlie and Fred, of Almon; Tom Neely, of Atlanta; three daughters, Mrs. Charlie Dobbs, Mrs. Marvin Hammonds and Mrs. Charlie Hammonds, all of Almon, and a number of other relatives. Funeral services will be conducted at the Salem church Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. Rev. J. M. Manning, assisted by Rev. W. B. Fruit, will officiate. Interment in church cemetery.

GEORGIA FREIGHT RATE HEARING IS ENDED AT CORDELE

Cordele, Ga., December 15.—(Special.)—Examiner Hill for the interstate commerce commission concluded a hearing here Saturday on complaints against rates on sulphate of ammonia from Pennsylvania points to Cordele and on watermelon rates, Cordele to Kentucky points.

The complaints were conducted for the Cordele interests by R. L. Askea. Ten or twelve leading rate lawyers for the trunk line railways were here in the case.

SUSPECT IS ARRESTED IN BRANDON MURDER

arrest he had been given information which "placed McMichael near the scene of the murder if not actually on the scene at the time Brandon was killed."

The undertaker was shot and fatally wounded on the night of December 3 as he drove his motor car through the downtown streets, the fatal shot, a bullet wound in the temple having been fired as he neared his undertaking establishment at the corner of Baker and Ivy streets.

DETECTIVES BELIEVE WITNESSES MISTAKEN.

A number of witnesses who testified at the coroner's inquest into Brandon's death said that immediately after the shot into Brandon's temple was fired a tall, slender man in a "gray suit and brown hat leaped from the car and dashed around the corner." Lowe and other detectives investigating the case Saturday night pointed out that though the hat found in McMichael's room is dark, gray, old and dirty it might easily have been taken for a brown hat by persons who saw the slayer flee.

"It was nearly 10 o'clock at night when Brandon was killed," Lowe said. "These persons who saw the slayer flee were unable to give us an accurate description of him. We are working on the theory that if they saw so little of him they might easily have been mistaken as to the color of the hat."

The suit of clothes taken to the cleaning plant by McMichael the day following the murder is locked up at detective headquarters. The investigators said it bore signs of having been saturated with a red chemical substance, which they pointed out may have been applied to blot out bloodstains.

Chief of Detectives Poole was reticent to discuss the arrest of McMichael. He said that the detectives working on the McMichael angle of the Brandon case had not submitted a formal report to him, which he was awaiting before making public complete details of this phase of the case.

OFFICERS WILL CALL WITNESSES TODAY.

Lowe said the witnesses who testified before Coroner Paul Donohoo's jury that they saw the slayer flee the scene of the crime would be brought to headquarters today to view McMichael in an effort to identify him as the man in the "gray suit and brown hat."

Lowe and other detectives assigned to the homicide squad continued their investigation of the Brandon case Saturday night, centering their efforts on McMichael.

"If we are able to turn up enough evidence to directly charge McMichael with the crime we should have it today or tomorrow," Lowe said.

Result of Casey's Address.

In a statement announcing appointment of the commission, Mayor Ragsdale pointed out that Mr. Casey, who is vice president of the Baltimore commission, accepted Atlanta's invitation and spoke at the Biltmore hotel on November 22 to a representative group of more than 200 citizens. Following Mr. Casey's comprehensive outline of results accomplished in Baltimore, the gathering unanimously adopted a resolution introduced by Councilman Wylie L. Moore, requesting Mayor Ragsdale to appoint a similar commission in Atlanta.

"The Baltimore commission was composed of outstanding business men who served without financial remuneration, and loaned the city trained experts from their organizations," Mayor Ragsdale said.

"Mr. Casey's committee worked out a plan of modern business methods, eliminating useless costs of government, and substituted economy, efficiency and cooperation in departments where these vital things had been lacking. So effective were the commission's efforts in this direction that the city of Baltimore was enabled to begin an annual reduction of its tax rate, gradually decreasing it from $2.97 per $100 in 1923 to $2.39 per $100 in 1927. Baltimore is said to be saving $500,000 annually as the direct result of reorganization of the government effected by the commission.

"Baltimore has the mayor and council form of government. Mr. Casey, in his address, made it plain that his committee recommended no change in the form of government, and declared that the Baltimore plan could be applied to any municipal government without altering the charter or form of government. In fact, he declared that the mayor and council form of government possesses certain desirable advantages that other plans do not

GEORGIA HOTEL GROUP ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

Horace Caldwell, of Valdosta, Chosen President; Atlanta Man Also Honored.

Quitman, Ga., December 15.—(Special.)—The concluding session of the Georgia Hotel association was held in Quitman Saturday afternoon with election of annual officers and the adoption of a number of resolutions.

The hotel men and their wives motored over from Valdosta, where a session was held Friday and Saturday morning, arriving at noon, when they were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gray Holmes of the Hotel General Quitman.

An informal program at luncheon, with short addresses and introductions of guests featured a menu of birds and Brooks county hams.

After luncheon Horace Caldwell, of Valdosta, was elected president of the association; first vice president, Charles G. Day, of Savannal; second vice president, Harry Z. Obel, of Atlanta; third vice president, J. F. Somers, of Rome; secretary and treasurer, Frank T. Reynolds, of Atlanta; attorney for the association, Preston Arkwright, Jr., of Atlanta.

The road bond committee was appointed as follows: Charles Day, T. C. Vann, Jack Gardner, Earl Knight, Reub Duval and H. H. Chandler. Resolutions of thanks were adopted expressing appreciation to the hotel of Valdosta and Quitman for entertainment.

Tribute was paid to three members of the association who have died recently. These mmebers are L. J. Dinkler, of Atlanta; John Brady, of Macon, and Ben Yancey, of Rome. A resolution was adopted indorsing the Georgia Automobile association, and also a golf map which the association is distributing.

Frank T. Reynolds was assured of the appreciation of the hotel men for his untiring work in the association as secretary and treasurer for the past three years. The delegates left for their homes late this afternoon. The executive committee will select at a later date the place of the next annual meeting.

MACON OPERA SEASON SERIES TO OPEN JAN. 7

Macon, Ga., December 15.—(Special.)—Following close on the heels of the gala festivities of the Yuletide in Macon, the second season of opera will open Monday evening, January 7, with the presentation of Rigoletto, and continues through the week with eight performances.

The Macon Grand Opera association, of which R. L. McKenney is the president, is bringing the artists of the San Carlo Grand Opera company to Macon for the second time.

A well balanced repertoire has been chosen for this year's offering, only two of last year's successes, Rigolette and Il Trovatore, being repeated. Rigoletto will open the 1929 season with Tina Paggi, the charming coloratura soprano who scored such a tremendous success in the leading role of that same opera last year, singing the part of Gilda. Tuesday evening La Boheme will be offered with Bianca Saroya, lyric soprano, one of the most beautiful women on the operatic stage, singing the role of Mimi.

Wednesday two operas will be offered, Martha for the matinee and La Forza del Destino for the evening performance. Thursday evening Romeo and Juliet will hold the attention of opera-goers. Friday evening has been selected for the repetition of the second of last year's triumphs, Il Trevatore. At the Saturday matinee Tales of Hoffman will be presented. Bringing the week to a brilliant climax will be the dramatic opera, Lucia di Lammermoor.

Besides the two singers above mentioned, taking prominent roles will be two artists whom Fortune Gallo, who is at the head of the San Carlo company, has only recently added to his constellation, Dimitri Onofrei, Rumanian lyric tenor, and Amund Sjovic, Swedish basso. A number of last year's favorite will return for this year's engagement: Ethel Fox, Fernando Bertini, Mario Valle, Guiseppe Barsotti, Francesco Curci, Natale Cervi and Maestro Carlo Peroni, the artist director of the orchestra.

In addition to the splendid singers, Mr. Gallo is bringing to Macon brilliant scenic equipment, an augmented orchestra, a well trained and well balanced chorus and a special ballet of terpsichorean artists who will add beauty, fineness and art with their incidental dances.

The San Carlo season in Macon last year was an overwhelming success this year indications are that the forthcoming season will even surpass last year's in brilliance, talent and art.

Negress, 113 Believed Oldest In State, Dies

Covington, Ga., December 15.—(Special.)—Julia Freeman Walker, 113 years old, oldest negro in Newton county and probably in the state, died at her home on J. C. Upshaw's place known as "Nutty Ranch," near Covington, Thursday afternoon. She was living with a daughter who is 80 years old, and a grandson, Gus Benford, 60 years of age, who stil survive her.

Julia Freeman Walker belonged to the well-known Freeman family of Jasper county, where she was born August 9, 1815. She kept her family record up to the present time, which proves without a doubt her real age.

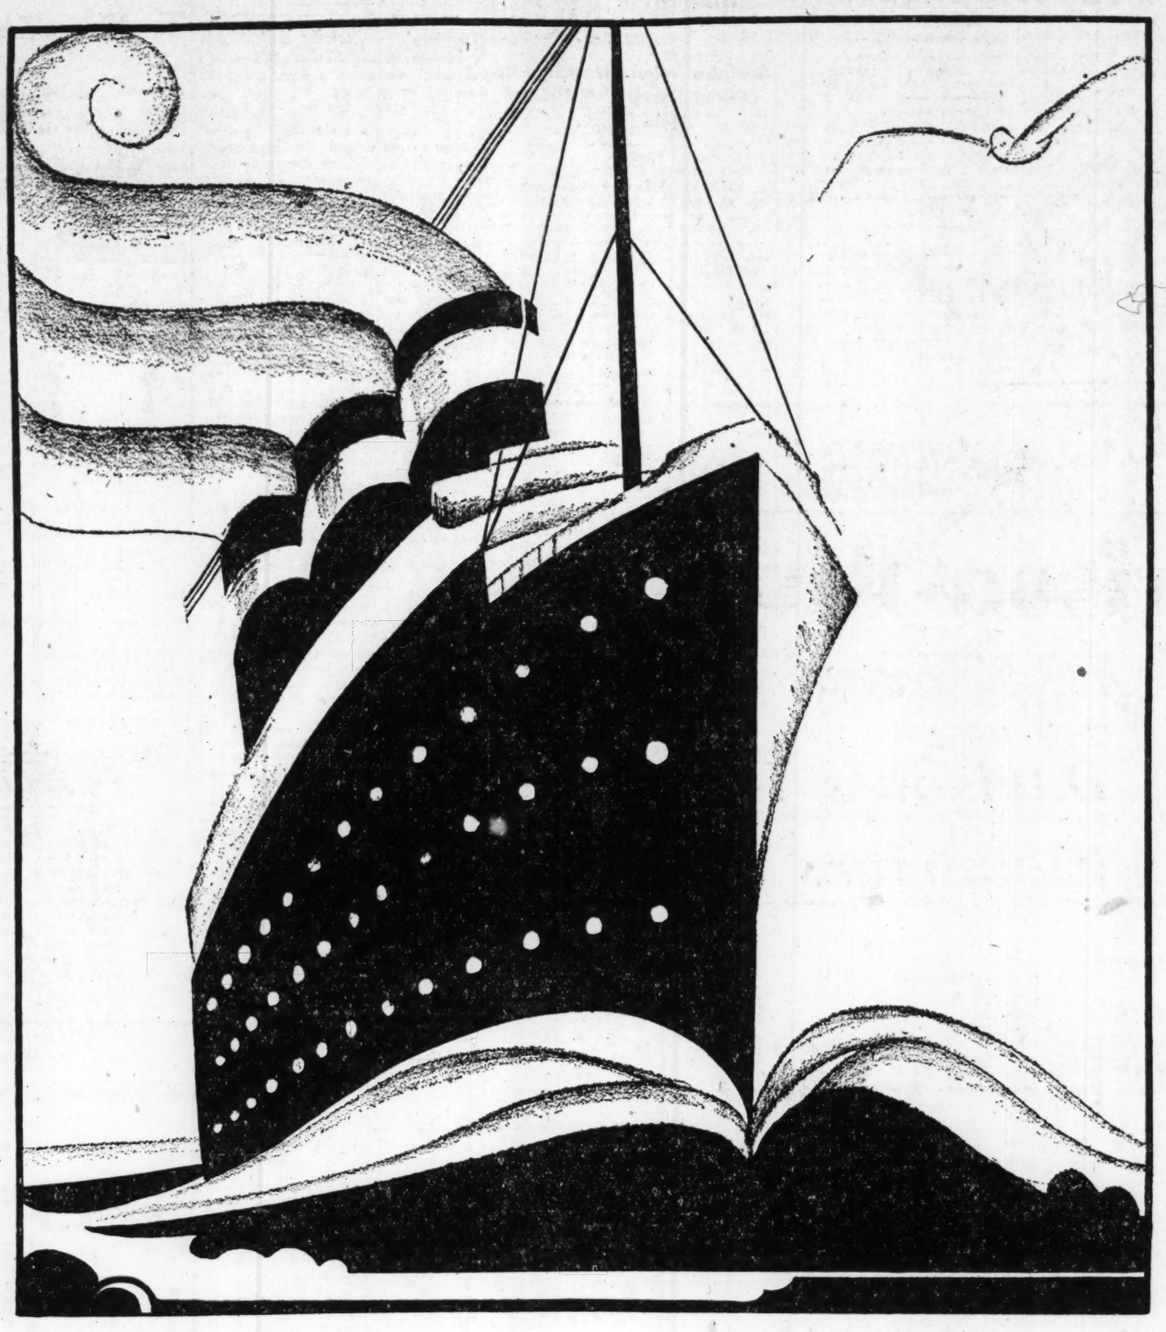

Funeral services will not be held until Sunday as relatives living at a distance can not get there until that time.

SUPREME COURT GRANTS RETRIAL TO WASH SMITH

The supreme court Saturday granted a new trial to Wash Smith, convicted in Banks county of killing Jud Wells last January, and sentenced to death in the electric chair. Smith is a white man and obtained a favorable ruling from the supreme court on the contention that the trial judge erred in instructing the jury not to give consideration to certain evidence that Wells had made threats against his slayer.

Smith previously had been denied a new trial by the superior court on his claim that the jury should have been instructed as to the return of a manslaughter verdict.

VIADUCT UTILITIES LINES COMPLETED

Complete installation of utilities lines in the area of the Pryor street and Central avenue viaducts has been completed, according to announcement of public service corporations, and customers in that section are now being supplied from lines established at depths ranging to twenty feet below the former levels.

The task of putting in eight utilities lines underground without interrupting service on existing lines required the greatest effort and expenditure of money appropriatell for a similar project, according to the Georgia Power company, which put in three of the lines.

Great Supply Used.

Actual building materials put underground in these six blocks by the power company alone is said to be suficient to erect a 25-story building, 50 feet wide and 75 feet deep. Hundreds of tons of stonework and masonry were required for protection of power, gas and steam heat conveyors.

Approximately 23 miles of duct lines for electric wires were put into the earth and fourteen miles of cable. The steam heat and gas departments laid down approximately 1 1-2 miles of pipe.

All of this construction was carried on in narrow trenches, twenty feet deep and separated from other trenches by a 24-inch wall of heavily shored earth. All of the eight utilities had their trenches and laid their lines in a space 24 feet wide. Telephone, steam heat, gas, sewer, telegraph and power lines were crowded into that slim area.

Men Work in Mud.

A great deal of the power company's work was carried on by tunneling, particularly at street intersections where it was not feasible to block traffic. Men worked in the mud and water of blind shafts, laying mains and conduits while heavy traffic and even railroad trains trundled overhead.

In addition to laying new lines, the Georgia Power company was called on to reroute its street railway traffic around the torn-up area, a task which added many miles to the daily schedules and cost the company slightly less than $2,000 per week.

Existing trackage in the area has been removed or abandoned and, with the completion of the viaduct, will be re-layed on the new grades. The project will call for more than 9,000 feet of double track when completed.

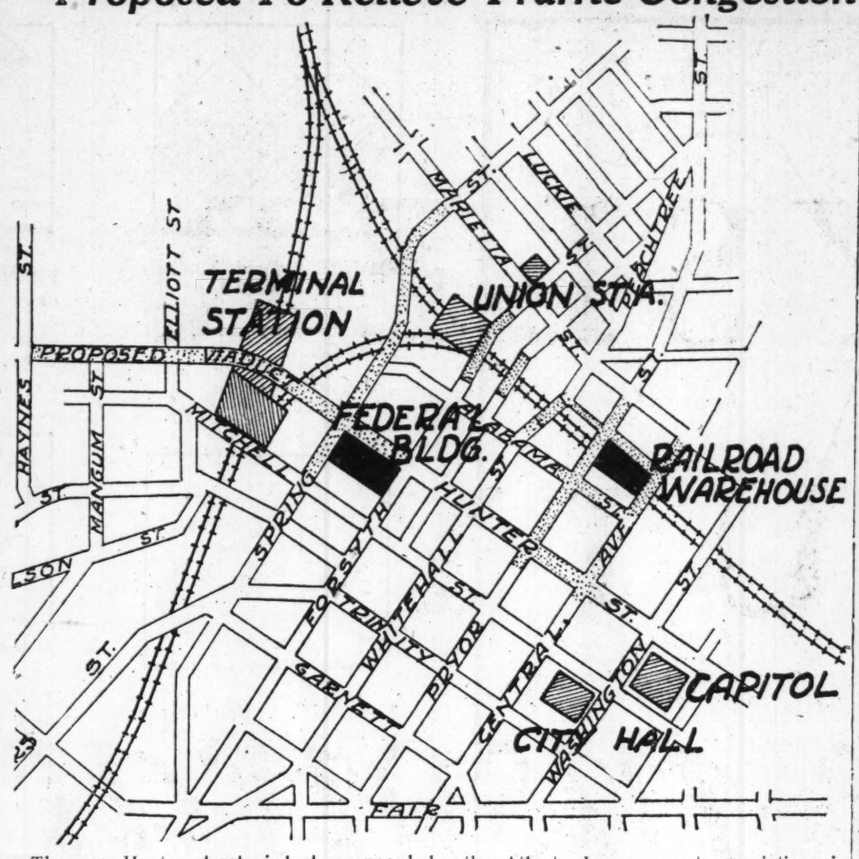

No Delay in Work.

In commenting on the completion of the underground work P. S. Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power company, said:

"The work in the viaduct area has proceeded expeditiousy and there have been no charges of delay on our part. The work has been done in entire harmony and cooperation with the city government and the contractor, and was accomplished without an accident and without the cutting off of an essential service to any of our customers."

The Empire Construction company, a subsidiary of the Georgia Power company, relocated and established the new lines. Work on the street railways was done by the roadway department of the power company.

Hunter St. Viaduct, Over Railroad Yards, Proposed To Relieve Traffic Congestion

Georgia Divorce Causes Trouble For Carolinian

Raleigh, N. C., December 15.—(AP) W. S. Thomas, local salesman, tonight faced the problem of raising $2,000 by Monday in order to clear up his marital troubles that started when the state of North Carolina refused to recognize a divorce granted him in Georgia.

Arraigned in Wake superior court today after he had been extradited from Atlanta, Thomas pleaded guilty to a charge of abandonment preferred by his first wife, Mrs. Fannie Knight Thomas. Judge W. C. Harris, presiding, sentenced him to 18 months on the road, judgment to be suspended on condition that he pay his first wife $2,000 by Monday night. Charges of reckless driving and bigamy were nol prossed.

The charge of bigamy arose when the grand jury decided a divorce Thomas secured in Atlanta was fraudulent. He married Miss Fannie Knight several years ago and then after a year, it was alleged, abandoned her, going to Atlanta. There he secured a divorce. He returned to Raleigh last spring and married again. His first wife claimed the divorce was not valid and began prosecuting him. He was indicted on a charge of bigamy. He was released under bond and went to Atlanta, where he remained until brought back today for trial.

The divorce Thomas secured in Georgia was declared fraudulent because his wife was not summoned nor notified that proceedings had been begun. He declared today that the divorce was obtained in good faith and that he thought he was within the law in marrying a second time.

Assistant Solicitor General Ed A. Stephens Saturday night pointed out that in Georgia a person may secure a divorce from a husband or wife, the latter a non-resident of the state, when a copy of the divorce action as contained in The Fulton County Report is mailed to her last known address.

Mr. Stephens also pointed out that in some cases divorces obtained had been declared fraudulent because the divorcing party had given a false non-resident address for the person who was being divorced, so that service was never made. When the party is a resident of the state, service is made in person, the assistant solicitor explained.

SEEK TO REOPEN LAKE CARGO COAL RATES ARGUMENT

Washington, December 14.—(AP)—A reopening of the controversy over lake cargo coal rates was sought today by the Pittsburgh Coal Operators Lake Rate committee, which filed a protest with the interstate commerce commission against the compromise rate adjustment which has been arranged to become effective January 1.

HALF MILLION FOR U.

Curtis Gift to Temple in Philadelphia Announced.

Philadelphia, December 15.—(AP)—A gift of a half million dollars to Temple university from Cyrus H. K. Curtis, the publisher, was announced tonight by Dr. Charles E. Beury, president of the institution.

The $500,000 will be applied toward the erection of the third of 23-story skyscraper unit in the "greater Temple" building project now under way.

Mr. Curtis seven years ago gave $25,000 to Temple and in 1926 he donated $100,000.

Student Is Killed Aiding in Arrest Of Alleged 'Legger

Jacksonville, Fla., December 15.—(AP)—Bryant Gasque, 20-year-old University of Florida student, was shot and killed by an unidentified negro here tonight, whom Gasque was trying to apprehend on a charge of liquor law violations.

Gasque, son of W. H. Gasque, constable, had asked his father's permission to accompany him on a liquor raid with two deputy sheriffs. The father had granted the request and when they sought to arrest the negro, he opened fire, sending a bullet into young Gasque's head. He died on the way to a hospital.

In order to eliminate the difficulty of access to that large area of the city lying west of the Terminal station and the railroad yards, an additional viaduct, extending from the Spring street viaduct, at Hunter street, to West Hunter street, beyond the yards, will be advocated as a major development of Atlanta in 1929 by the Atlanta Improvement association, it was announced Saturday.

The proposed viaduct would connect East and West Hunter streets, making it again a continuous thoroughfare and would give the city a long needed access to and from West View cemetery by direct route, as well as giving a short and uncongested traffic arterial highway into the heart of the city from several highway running west and southwest, including the Bankhead high, Dixie highway, etc., it is pointed out.

That the expense of such a viaduct would not be heavy, because there would be no abutting business establishments to be damaged, also is pointed by the association. The cost of construction, they suggest, could be borne by a bond issue to be proposed during the coming year.

"The railroad yards," the statement declares, "being so wide at this point, have cut off access to this area until it has become very difficult for a motorist coming from the west or southwest to get into Atlanta. He must come either by Marietta street, which is narrow and badly congested far out, or by West End and Whitehall street, another greatly congested thoroughfare. In other words there is an angle in Atlanta's circle of about 90 degrees which has practically no access whatever to the heart of the city, especially since the closing of the Mitchell street viaduct.

"The dingram shows that a great deal of the traffic now using Whitehall would be diverted into the proposed Hunter street viaduct. This viaduct will approach Spring street just between the Terminal station and the proposed new Union station on the Forsyth street viaduct. It will also, no doubt, induce the Terminal company to enlarge its present building and construct a plaza giving a more imposing approach to the station.

"A city without proper access becomes stifled in its growth. Atlanta must realize very soon that in order to maintain its present development it must immediately construct some wide arterial highways extending out in every direction, and especially in the direction of the south and southwest."

The Atlanta Improvement association, in addition to strongly indorsing this new viaduct proposal, also is advocating the widening and paving of other prominent thoroughfares, such as Lee street and Fair street.

OIL JOURNAL OFFICIAL IS DEAD IN OKLAHOMA

Oil City, Pa., Deceber 15.—(AP)—Robert W. Egan, 53, vice president of the Oil and Gas Journal and of the Oil City Derrick, died today in Tulsa, Okla., relatives here were advised. Mr. Egan formerly was managing editor of the Pittsburgh Dispatch, and during the war was general director of publicity for the Knights of Columbus and later director of their activities overseas. For his service he was made a Knight of St. Gregory by Pope Pius XIII.

BORGLUM IS PLANNING LINCOLNIAN WILSON

Sculptor Would Unveil "Lincoln of Europe" in Poland Next Year.

New Orleans, December 15.—(AP)—A statue representing Woodrow Wilson as the "Lincoln of Europe" is planned by Gutzon Borglum, to be unveiled in Poland next year at the 73rd anniversary of Wilson's birth, the sculptor announced here today.

Borglum came here today with his wife and son, Lincoln, who left for Poland to represent the sculptor in the completion of negotiations for the statue with the Polish government. Borglum returned to his San Antonio home.

Preliminary agreements have been reached between himself and the Polish government, Borglum said, and presentation of the final draft of the contracts is all that remains.

"As I have it roughtly planned in my mind," he explained, "I shall represent Wilson as the Lincoln of Europe. The statue will be of heroic size and will be unveiled at Posen on the 73rd anniversary of Wilson's birth which will be December 28 next year."

While abroad Mrs. Borglum will go to Italy to arrange for the casting of the heroic size group that her husband has completed representing North Carolina's troops at the battle of Gettysburg which will be placed on the battlefield.

Borglum paid high tribute to Judy Rayford, the Mobile youth who trudged across the country last summer to become acquainted with the sculptor and who now is Borglum's chief assistant.

"He has proved up 100 per cent," the sculptor said. "You might say there is more punch in him than Judy."

N. E. A. TO PROBE PROPAGANDA USE IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—Dr. Edwin C. Broome, Philadelphia chairman of the National Education association's committee investigating use of propaganda in schools, announced today that the committee would draw up a statement of principles to aid school officers in dealing with the question.

"It is the unanimous conviction of the committee," he said, "that the function of the school is to teach children how to think and not what to think. It is not right to indoctrinate the minds of young people with either one side or the other of controversial questions. It is not right to use in the schools material which seeks to advertise or bring profits to any agency in the community."

The committee will not investigate specific propaganda organizations, he said, but would seek to make a thorough study of conditions brought to light in the federal trade commission's inquiry into activities of public utility power organizations. It will report to the association's assembly in Atlanta next June.

WIFE-SLAYER GOES BACK TO MEMPHIS TO STAND TRIAL

Shreveport, La., December 15.—(AP) Charles S. Taylor, confessed wife slayer, was started back to Memphis tonight to face court action for his crime. He was in custody of Sheriff Knight, of Memphis.

Arrested here last night, Taylor confessed that he killed his wife on December 3, by beating her over the head with a poker during a quarrel over finances. He said he then hid her body in a trunk in their Memphis home.

When searched a bottle of poison and a razor were found in his pockets. He told officers he had planned to kill himself as soon as he found a brother who lived "near the Arkansas line," and obtained a promise from him to bury his wife. Sheriff Knight, of Memphis, arrived here today. After taking one look at Taylor he said: "That's our man."

The body of Mrs. Taylor was found last Tuesday, eight days after her death.

Aviation Medicine Latest Addition To Navy Therapy

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—Preventive medicine plays an increasingly important part for the navy medical corps, and "aviation medicine" is now classed under that head.

Fourteen years of compulsory anti-typhoid inoculation has shown it to be almost 100 per cent effective. Rear Admiral Edward Stitt, surgeon-general of the navy, declared in his annual report today that only 15 cases of typhoid occurred in the navy during 1927. He said "No individual who had received the complete course (of inoculation) was attacked."

Anti-cholera vaccine was given to 13,900 members of the expeditionary forces in China, and no cases of the disease were reported. Influenza, which showed 15,926 cases per 100,000, took the highest toll of life, in combination with other respiratory diseases, and the report condemned "serious overcrowding" and overheating in living quarters on board ship as causes, recommending installation of radiators on the larger vessels.

"Aviation medicine" consisted largely of research to determine an applicant's "temperamental adaptability" to flying.

Aviation casualties were grouped with other deaths by violence, which totaled 248 for the year. The S-4 disaster raised the total for drownings to 95, or 24 per cent more than the average for the preceding five years. Other fatal accidents had varied causes, from "riding on a roller coaster," to being "attacked by an unidentified Mexican at Los Angeles."

TAXICAB DRIVER HELD UP, ROBBED BY PASSENGER

H. I. Boring, of 322 Sixth street, a driver for a local taxicab company, was held up by a young white passenger and robbed of a small amount of cash late Saturday night after he had carried the man from a downtown hotel to an address on Capitol avenue, between Weyman avenue and the Southern railroad tracks. The man is said to have escaped in a confederate's automobile following the theft.

HIGHEST HONORS PAID DICKINSON AT FUNERAL

Machinery of State Government Stops as Body Arrives at Nashville.

Nashville, Tenn., December 15.—(AP)—All the honor a state can pay its dead was bestowed upon Judge Jacob McGavock Dickinson, former secretary of war, whose body was buried in Mount Olivet cemetery here today.

The machinery of the state government was stopped this morning when the distinguished Tennessean's body arrived aboard a special car from Chicago, where he died Thursday, and the capital city remained in mourning until this afternoon when the body was lowered into the grave while a bugler sounded a soldier's requiem.

Services at the cemetery were strikingly simple. The cortege was met at the cemetery gates by a military band which headed the procession to the grave.

There "Lead Kindly Light" and "Nearer My God to Thee" were sung and Dr. James I. Vance, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, which Judge Dickinson attended when he made Nashville his home, read from the Scriptures and prayed.

Confederate veterans then took charge of the services and paid tribute to their comrade. As this was ended, a squad stepped forward and fired a salute over the casket, and then came "taps" from the bugler as the casket was lowered. Three planes from the 105th observation squadron circles the cemetery and released white pigeons.

A military guard of honor from the Tennessee National Guard, aided by Boy Scouts, met the funeral train when it arrived here at 8:30 a. m. The body was borne on a caisson drawn by four white horses to the state capitol where it laid in state until 1:30 p. m., when the funeral procession started for the cemetery.

Members of the family and hundreds of friends from all sections of the United States attended the funeral. Major General R. P. Davis, commander of the fourth corps area, was the personal representative of Secretary of War Dwight F. Davis.

Judge Dickinson was a member of President Taft's cabinet and was a jurist and sportsman of note. He once served as president of the Isaac Walton league.

CHRYSLER BEAUTY

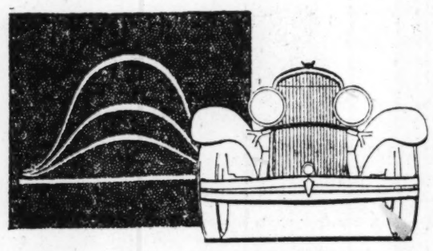

not a chance inspiration

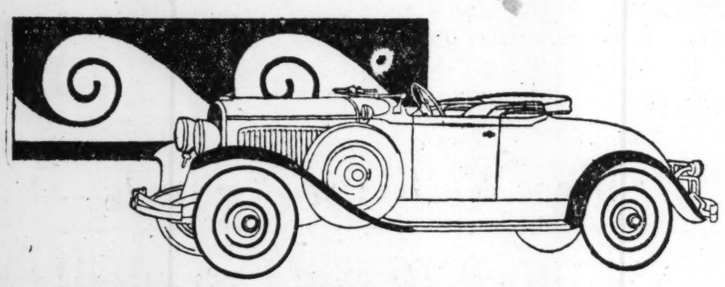

The most modern thing in motor car design—Chrysler's matching of slender-profile radiator with cowl-bar moulding—has its artistic origin in the repetition of motif in the historic frieze of the ancient Parthenon.

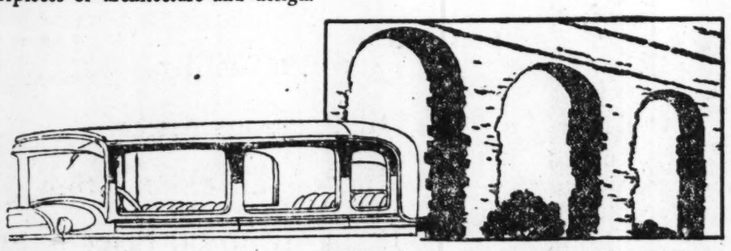

The Chrysler front elevation indicates the influence of the Egyptian lotus leaf pattern. Modified to its modern application, it is perfectly proportioned and applied with consummate artistry in blending beauty and utility.

Artists know this as a "rising, diminishing series." The level road, the slightly arched bumper, the shorter arched tie-rod above, and finally the shorter and more deeply arched radiator contour, form a series in perfect harmony.

Note how the dynamic symmetry of Chrysler fender contours and wheels expresses the very essence of life and motion, just as do their counterparts in the "wave border" of the classic masterpieces of architecture and design.

It may seem a far cry from the correct lines of an old Roman aqueduct to the "arched-window" silhouette of the Chrysler of today. Here it is, however—a plain indication of the artistry with which Chrysler lines are developed.

But a Careful and Conscious Design Based upon the Authentic Classic Beauty That Has Lived Through the Centuries

The enthusiastic acceptance of the new Chrysler style is, after all, a tribute to the innate artistic sense of the American people.

Because the new Chrysler style is the first and only deliberate and conscious effort to apply the canons of the classic forms to automobile design.

It is perfectly natural therefore that the new Chrysler style has so rapidly been accepted by people everywhere.

The inborn and correct sense of the fine and beautiful—the appreciation of the truly artistic is at the bottom of it all.

Chrysler design which deliberately applies to every single detail—with an eye to the finished whole—the principles of true artistry, cannot fail of complete and unqualified success.

The beauty-consciousness which lies in each and every one of us is responsible for the acceptance of the breath-taking loveliness of Chrysler.

State, City Officials To View N.C. & St. L. Tunnel Opening

Headed by James A. Perry, chairman of the state public service commission, and Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, of Atlanta, representing the state and city, respectively, a party of prominent city and state officials will leave Atlanta at 9 o'clock Monday morning on a special train for Tunnel Hill, where they will participate in ceremonies to be held in celebration of the formal opening of the new tunnel recently completed at that place by the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railroad. President J. B. Hill, of that railroad, will serve as official host of the party.

The tunnel built by the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railway will replace the old tunnel used by the Western and Atlantic railroad, owned by the state of Georgia and leased to the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis system.

First Through Tunnel.

Under the plans of railroad officials, the special train which leaves the union station in Atlanta at 9 o'clock Monday morning will be the first complete train of any kind to pass through the new tunnel. The tunnel is 1,513 feet long and pierces the Chattoogeta mountain.

Among those, besides Mr. Perry and Mayor Ragsdale, who have accepted invitations to be present at the ceremony, are other members of the state public service commission; James B. Nevin, editor of the Georgian and Sunday American, and Miss Bessie Kempton, Fulton county representative in the legislature.

Invitations were extended also to Clark Howell, editor of The Constitution; John S. Cohen, editor of the Journal; W. C. Edwards, publisher of the Georgian-American; Frank Neely, chairman Atlanta bond commission; Ed S. Dykes, of Vienna, president of the state senate; Richard B. Russell, Jr., Winder, speaker of the state house of representatives; C. Murphy Candler, former chairman of the Western and Atlantic lease commission, and J. Houston Johnston, engineer of the Georgia public service commission. The special train will return to Atlanta at 6 o'clock p. m. Monday.

To Become State's Property.

The new tunnel, like all other improvements upon the Western and Atlantic railroad made by the lessee, becomes the property of the state at the expiration of the lease. The tunnel cost approximately $500,000, and construction began on July 28, 1927. It is large enough to accommodate the largest of modern cars and engines, some of which cannot pass through the tunnel hitherto used.

Under terms of the N., C. & St. L. lease from the state of Georgia, the lessor must pay $540,000 annual rent and, in addition, spend $3,000,000 on permanent additions and betterments during the 50-year life of the lease. More than $2,000,000 already has been thus spent although the lease is only nine years old.

The old tunnel, to be abandoned with completion of the new one, was opened on November 1, 1849. Ceremonies at that time are fully described in a letter from the then chief engineer of the road which has been preserved.

Included in the ceremonies at that time was the breaking of bottles of eight different kinds of wine. This will not be repeated Monday, it is stated by officials. In fact, none of the program of 1849 will be duplicated on the new occasion. The old event was signalized, in addition to the prodigal use of wines, with the firing of cannon salutes, a procession through the tunnel and the pouring of water from the River Jordan in the Holy Land.

Miss Gertrude Vaile Will Deliver Address At Savannah Meeting

Miss Gertrude Vaile, past president of the National Conference of Social Workers and one of the foremost social workers of the country, will deliver an address at the Georgia Conference of Social Workers to be held was announced Saturday by Mrs. Elabel McL. Davidson, secretary of the state conference.

Miss Vaile, who is a graduate of Vassar college and the Chicago School of Civics has served as director of the Denver bureau of charities, as director of civilian relief of the American Red Cross, mountain division, during the war, later as associate field director of the American Association for Organizing Family Social Work, and it was from this position she accepted the secretaryship of the Colorado state department of charities and correction. For the past year Miss Vaile has been directing an experiment in the rural social work in Iowa, but beginning January 1, she will be doing graduate work in rural sociology at the University of North Carolina.

Set Had "Personality"; Owner Recalled Voice And Recovers Receiver

San Francisco, December 15.—(AP) A San Francisco man who said radio sets "have personalities" led police to an apartment there today in search of his stolen radio receiver. The set was found. The owner said he recognized its "voice" while passing the apartment.

The police seized three sets in the apartment, all believed stolen. They all were being operated at once, receiving different programs. Three boys and four girls were arrested.

German Lecturer To Speak At Citizenship Meeting Here

The Southeastern Citizenship conference, to be held at Emory university, February 12-16, will hear Dr. Walthor Merck, distinguished German lecturer and educator, Dr. Cullen B. Gosnell, director of the conference, announced Saturday. The lecturer is to be brought here under the auspices of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, of New York city. He will speak on educational principles and foreign relations.

Dr. Merck is chairman of the national board of education of Germany, and a lecturer at Hamburg university. He recently was a candidate for election to the Reichstag on the democratic ticket.

The forthcoming meeting will be the second annual session of the conference, the first one having been held last February. This conference brought to Atlanta such speakers as David Lawrence, Adamantios Polyzoides, Robert Lathan, Dr. J. W. Garner and others.

The conference program this year will include, in addition to Dr. Merck, Dr. Walter F. Dodd, of Yale; Governor Byrd, of Virginia; Sam J. Slate, of Georgia, and Dr. Victor E. White, Washburn college, Kansas. These will speak on the administrative reorganization of the southeastern states.

James A. Hollomon, of The Constitution, and W. T. Anderson, of the Macon Telegraph, will discuss improvement of Georgia state highway department. Round table discussions on the constitution of Georgia will be under the direction of Walter McElreath, of Atlanta. Some of the other speakers will be Professor Paul E. Bryan, of Emory; Dr. W. W. Alexander, of the Southern Interracial commission, and Adamantis Th. Polyzoides, New York newspaper man.

The conference is under the direction of a committee composed of T. H. Jack, C. B. Gosnell, Ross H. McLean, R. B. Nixon and C. M. Woodward, all members of the Emory faculty.

Valdosta, Ga., December 15.—(Special.)—In the Valdosta Sunday Times, announcement will be made that the Valdosta Morning News will make its appearance in Valdosta Monday morning, December 17.

The new paper will be operated by Edmund Walker, publisher of the Times, but in every essential is to be a distinctly separate publication.

SCHOOL PROJECTS COME UP MONDAY AT COUNCIL MEET

Bids on ten public school projects which failed to come before council at the last meeting when the adverse committee report on the award of the plumbing contracts to W. S. Loftis was adopted, will come up for action again at Monday afternoon's meeting of council.

The award of the plumbing contracts on the ten schools was reaffirmed by the joint contact committee, the board of education and the bond commission during the past week.

Monday afternoon's session will be the last meeting of the 1928 council. The 1929 council, however, will be practically the same as the present council except for a few changes.

YALE GLEE CLUB SINGS HERE CHRISTMAS NIGHT

Famous Organization Will Appear at Atlanta Woman's Club.

The concert of the famous 115-year-old Yale Glee club on Christmas night, at the Atlanta Woman's club, sponsored by Yale alumni in Atlanta, Albert Thornton, Dan C. Elkin, Henry Tompkins, Morris Brandon, Sr., Morris Brandon, Jr., Floyd McRae and W. H. Kiser, Jr., promises to be a gala occasion. A program both popular and classic and sparkling with the spirit of the college songs of the "good old days" of Yale will be presented by the 60 prize-winning voices.

The leader of this year's club is Damon deB. Wack, 1929. He has been on the club for the past three years and went on the European trip last summer. Besides leading the club he also sings second bass, singing solos at times. Wack comes from Briarcliff, N. Y. David O. Ross, the manager, comes from Morristown, N. J. As assistant manager he went on the European tour and now is handling this Christmas trip enterprise. The assistant manager is George S. Chappell, Jr., of Pelham Manor, N. Y. Morris M. Watkins is, this year, taking Mr. Bartholomew's place as director and coach, due to the latter's absence in Europe. Mr. Watkins, this year, has arranged a minor differentiation in the placing of the club on the stage. Whereas, it is the usual, for the club to line up in the order of first tenors, second tenors, first basses, second basses from the left to right, it will, this year, be noticed that the order is second tenor, first tenor, first bass, second bass. The idea of this is to preserve a more evenly balanced tone quality in the ears of the listeners. This is especially important in the singing of "The Storm," a piece quite modern in its musical feeling and sung for the first time in chorus by the Yale Glee club.

Tickets for the concert will go on sale Saturday, this week, at Jacobs' at Five Points and at Cable Piano company, 84 North Broad street. There will be reserved seats at the usual price and a number of general admissions at popular prices.

30-DAY RESPITE ASKED FOR DOOMED SHEPPARD

New Evidence Obtained, Lawyers for Condemned Man Tell Governor.

Request for a 30-day respite for R. H. Sheppard, under death sentence for killing Homer Fowler with an ax, was submitted to Governor L. G. Hardman Saturday by attorneys representing the condemned man. The attorneys stated that they had obtained new evidence in the case and desired time in which to make an investigation.

The governor already had agreed to hear a petition for clemency for Sheppard at a hearing set for Tuesday.

At the trial for Sheppard it was charged that he killed Fowler with an ax during a drunken brawl in a house on Marietta street. Sheppard denied that he struck Fowler with the ax but testified that he hit the victim with his fist. Other evidence was introduced to the effect that Sheppard not only killed Fowler with the ax but returned and struck several other blows with the ax as Fowler lay prostrate.

The execution of Sheppard is set for Wednesday in the electric chair at Milledgeville and he will be executed unless the governor interferes in the case. Governor Hardman was not at his office Saturday but is expected to return to duty Monday after a 10-day absence due to illness.

GREENE COUNTY GETS $300,000 FOR DAIRYING

Greensboro, Ga., December 15.—(Special.)—Greene county this year enjoyed one of its most prosperous years of the county's history. This was especially true in dairy products, approximately $300,000 being realized from sales.

Although the cotton sales fell short this year of the mark of 1927, farmers were pleased and fairly satisfied, considering the activities of the boll weevil.

Reports show there were 4,304 bales sold this year. This was 231 bales less than the production of 1927.

The poultry business also has been exceptionally good. A special car has been leaving every month with fowl, bringing in thousands of dollars to this community.

At Siloam, Greene county, bonds have been voted to replace the school building destroyed by fire.

The Watson Spring hotel, 12 miles from here, has been sold.

Announcement has been made that Mrs. Katie Griffield, of Athens, is going to dispose all of her farm implements and stock at an auction sale, December 19.

SIGMA PI MEETING TO BE HELD HERE ON DECEMBER 27-29

Emory university Psi chapter of Sigma Pi, social fraternity, will act as host at the national convocation to be held in Atlanta December 27-29. About 500 representatives of the order from all parts of the nation will attend the sessions, including delegates from thirty chapters and twenty alumni associations.

The Biltmore hotel will be headquarters for the convention and all business sessions will be held there. Herman S. Sidener, national president of Sigma Pi; Senator C. D. Rush, a prominent alumnus, and Bishop H. J. Mikell, prominent churchman and a member of Kappa Alpha, will address the assembled delegates at the formal opening of the convocation at a banquet on the evening of December 27.

A diversified program of entertainment has been planned for the visitors of which the major feature will be a formal reception in the Georgia ballroom of the Biltmore in their honor. Banquets, smokers, sightseeing tours and a trip to Mercer university at Macon will complete the three-day session in Atlanta.

AFRICAN PAINTINGS

Work of Erick Berry Displayed at Spelman.

African paintings by Erick Berry, noted artist, author and traveler, are on exhibition at Spelman college here, it was announced Saturday by R. B. Eleazer. The collection includes 16 portraits of West Africans, mainly Haussas.

The Haussas, who have been described as "barbarians in civilization," constitute about 13,000,000 of the west coast native population. Mrs. Berry, who is author of a number of works on African life and character, was commissioned by Harper to illustrate a five-volume set of Paul du Chaillu's African travels.

Six New Members Elected to Board Of Woman's Division

The election of six new members to the governing board of the woman's division of the chamber of commerce was announced Saturday. The following were elected for a term of two years: Miss Regina Corrigan, Mrs. L. A. Dove, Mrs. Nellie Nix Edwards, Miss Mabel Kendrick, Miss Eula M. Lang and Mrs. Mildred Seydell. The six holdover members completing the board are Miss Virginia Bowie, Miss Nell Hollingsworth, Mrs. S. H. Sewell, Mrs. L. Irving Turner, Miss Susie C. Wailes and Miss Margaret Waite.

The full board will meet next week for organization and election of officers for 1929.

PENNINGTON SLATED FOR MAYOR PRO TEM

Allen Couch Is Unopposed for Place as Provosional Mayor Pro Tem.

With the year 1928 about to go over the hill to oblivion, the eyes of political observers around the city hall are turning to the 1929 city council as a fruitful source for comment and gossip.

One of the features of the first meeting of the 1929 council at 7:30 o'clock on the night of January 7 will be the election of a new mayor pro-tem and a provisional mayor pro-tem. Alderman Robert F. Pennington, of the first ward, is slated to become mayor pro-tem to succeed Alderman Claude L. Ashley, of the fourth ward. Alderman J. Allen Couch is an unopposed candidate for provisional mayor pro-tem to succeed Pennington.

Very few new faces will be seen in the 1929 council. Councilman Ben T. Huiet will return as alderman from the third ward in place of Alderman William B. Hartsfield, while J. W. Rountree will be the council member from the third in place of Huiet. Tom Morris will succeed J. E. Bowden as councilman from the fifth ward.

Robert Cobb, who was elected to fill the unexpired term of Jack Savage, who resigned as councilman from the ninth ward, will return for the regular term. Nelson Spratt, who was elected to fill the unexpired term of C. M. Ford as councilman from the 10th ward on Ford's resignation, will return for a regular term.

E. A. Gilliam will succeed J. M. House as alderman from the 12th ward.

WAR RELIC DISPLAY WILL START MONDAY

Collection Gathered in 12 Years by Lieutenant Burling Jarrett.

A collection of highly interesting war relics, gathered during 12 years by Lieutenant G. Burling Jarrett, O. R. C., will be placed on display Monday at 224 Peachtree street by the Betty Harrison Jones chapter, No. 1, Disabled Veterans of the World War. The display will be open until Christmas.

One of the most important relics which will be placed on view is a cross of the Order of Frederick the Great, the ex-kaiser's personal order and given to no officer under the rank of brigadier general. There were but six given during the war. This cross was taken from the body of a slain officer during the famous St. Mihiel offensive by a machine gunner of the 90th division and is said to be the only one in the United States.

Another rare trophy is the famous poster announcing the execution of Edith Cavell, British war nurse. Her name heads a list of prisoners shot as spies, by order of General Von Bissing, militia governor of Belgium.

In addition to these, there is a complete collection of rifles, pistols, swords, bayonets, artillery ammunition, equipment, photographs and posters, both American and foreign.

Work of Salvation Army Will Carry Santa Claus Into Many Humble Homes

Captain Pauline Blackwell and Captain Alleyne Young help prepare broken playthings, given to the Salvation Army, for children of the poor on Christmas day.

Response to the Salvation Army's Christmas appeal for toys and warm clothing for the children of the poor awakened hope last week that Santa Claus this year may visit many homes so humble that they often are ommitted from his list.

The needs of nearly 400 families, disclosed by the Salvation Army, led hundreds of Atlanta housewives to ransack their closets and scores of children to search their playrooms for things they don't really need.

Missing wheels have been supplied for scooter cars, fresh paint has been applied to tarnished doll carts that have been outgrown on Peachtree street, and other preparations made to give old playthings a new lease on life for children to whom chronic want has taught a full measure of appreciation.

Old men, broken by years or misfortune and who have found harbor in the Salvation Army industrial home, have found a new joy in the deft touches of hammer and paint brush which will echo in happy laughter on Christmas morning in homes where even children find infrequent causes for laughter.

Salvation Army lassies who will distribute baskets Christmas morning are helping in the work of making Santa ready for the poor.

The offerings of Atlanta will be collected by the army on telephone call to Ivy 2224.

Almost every article of wearing apparal and every kind of plaything which can be spared from prosperous homes will fill a critical need in one of the homes on the army's list of needy families, Captain Hugo Bloomberg, social service officer, said Saturday.

The gifts already received will reach only a small portion of the families to which it is planned to extend Christmas cheer.

MARINES ARE LAUDED BY GENERAL LEJEUNE

Tactful Performance of Nicaraguan and Chinese Duty Praised.

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—American marmines on duty in Nicaragua and China were declared by Major General John A. Lejeune today to have won "the confidence and respect of all law-abiding Nicaraguans" and to have "maintained extremely cordial relations with the Chinese officials and people."

"The military operations in Nicaragua," said General Lejeune in his annual report as commandant of the marine corps, "have been highly successful and very gratifying."

There is "every evidence of the greatest friendliness" towards the marines by the Nicaraguans," he added.

The Nicaraguan national guard being trained by American marine officers and men, the report added, have in their turn "gained the admiration of the marines and marines and guards have learned to regard each other as comrades in arms."

Since May General Lejeune said more than a thousand "self-confessed" Nicaraguan outlaws have surrendered and "their morale has been so worn down by the activity of the marines that they are resorting only to hiding and avoiding contact."

Community Chest Campaign Is $100,000 Short of Goal

Atlanta's response to the appeal of its unfortunates, to the needs of its 1929 program of helpfulness and human development, is yet $100,000 short of the minimum necessary for complete effectiveness of the work.

Auditors, checking the result of the public appeal of the Community Chest and its 39 societies for service and social welfare, reported Saturday that $380,029 has been pledged toward the budget of $480,000, which a committee of business leaders has declared necessary if human suffering is to be prevented and the Chest's program of character-building and "constructive philanthropy" is to be maintained.

The sum in hand was pledged by 18,134 persons. In 1923, the first year of grouping all social welfare agencies under the Chest plan for a unified and single appeal for public support, nearly 30,000 individuals contributed to the work.

To Continue Appeal.

Frank Miller, executive director of the Chest, Saturday outlined plans for continuing the appeal until the necessary $480,000 or the greater part of it is raised. He said the telephone solicitation from the Chest offices in the Candler Annex will be continued, and that an appeal by mail, which is bringing excellent results, also will be maintained until every prospect is reached.

Mr. Miller said it was expected that the amount in hand will be increased when all campaign workers make their complete reports. A number of canvassers, he said, have been too busy to turn in all their pledge cards, and it was to these that he addressed a request that all cards be taken or sent to the Community Chest offices.

In discussing the work of the Chest and its function of public service, Mr. Miller said that the organization is to be regarded as the agent of Atlanta's charity, and stands ready to perform that obligation where real need exists.

"We have learned that in Atlanta homes, offices, stores, and streets at this season there is being encountered an unusual flood of applications for help," he said. "We want to ask every person approached for gifts to refer the applicant to the Community Chest.

"The Chest and its societies are here to perform the task of helping the needy who are really needy and deserving of help. The Chest is equipped to look into the cases of the applicants, to weed out those that are unworthy—and a great many of the applicants who take advantage of the Christmas season for their supplications are spurious and unworthy—and to help those that are worthy. This help from the Chest is designed to be permanent and constructive, as the cooperation of its societies enables it to seek into the causes of need and to remedy them, whether ill-health, unemployment, disaster, domestic discord, or ignorance is the reason. The Chest stands by its principle—'Not only to lift, but to build.'"

EMORY GLEE CLUB WILL SING CAROLS AT CHURCH TODAY

Singing in the black robes of the vested choir the old familiar carols and songs of the Christmas season, the Emory Glee club will give its fourth annual Christmas carols program at 5 o'clock this afternoon at the First Presbyterian church.

Under the direction of Dr. Malcom H. Dewey and assisted by Dr. Charles Sheldon, city organist, and Mrs. Sheldon, city organist, and Mrs. Sheldon, soprano, the club will sing several of the old seventeenth century Christmas songs which have come down through the years.

Following is the complete program:

Organ prelude—Hallelujah Chorus" (Messiah—Handel), Dr. Sheldon, "O Little Town of Bethlehem," glee club.

"Seboin Is Gottes Soehelein" (Praetorius), glee club.

"Old French Christmas Song" (Frank Damrosch), Mrs. Sheldon and glee club.

Organ solo—"In Dulci Jublio" (Bach), Dr. Sheldon.

"Three Angels Came To Me This Night" (Holmes), glee club.

"Jesus Redemptor," Edward Kane, tenor, and glee club.

Organ solo—"Noel-Holy Night" (Buck), Dr. Sheldon.

"Silent Night" (Gruber), glee club.

"Adeste Fidelis" (Novello Bourbon), quartet; Edward Kane, Emil Jalouk, George Rogers, Lawrence Chaffee, and glee club.

Bainbridge Couple Observe Golden Wedding Event

Bainbridge, Ga., December 15.—(Special.)—Cedar Springs, in Early county, was the scene of a happy occasion last Sunday when Mr. and Mrs. John N. Pyle celebrated the anniversary of their golden wedding with an old-fashioned picnic dinner on the lawn of the home where Pyle took his bride, Miss Susan Birdie Sheffield Pyle, 50 years ago.

Guests last Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Marion Mosely, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hodges and Mr. and Mrs. Stamper, neighbors and intimate friends of the couple, who had also had their golden anniversary celebrations.

Gifts of gold and other tokens of love and esteem were presented the host and hostess by the several hundred guests assembled for the day.

Assisting with the entertainment were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pyle, of Cedar Springs; Athlec and Durwood Pyle, of Bainbridge, surviving children of a family of eight. The grandchildren present were Misses Hazel, Louella, Winona and Henry McLendon, all of Bainbridge, and Winston and Lee Stamper, of Coleman, Ga Miss Ruth V. Botts, of Bainbridge, was also a guest.

POLICE LOOKING FOR OLLIE TAYLOR; JAILED 75 TIMES

After having been arrested 75 times in 14 years, with practically every known misdemeanor charge booked against him at one time or another and a record of six prison breaks to his credit, Ollie Taylor, notorious character, again is being sought by officers following his escape Wednesday night from the city stockade.

Only one year, 1919, since he was first sent to the reformatory following a long record of fights, petty thefts and general incorrigibility in 1913, has passed in which there were not a long array of charges booked against Ollie Taylor.

He made his sixth prison escape good by sawing the bars of the stockade last Wednesday night shortly after the supper hour.

BEER BARON YIELDS TO ARREST TO SAVE BONDSMEN MONEY

Chicago, December 15.—(AP)—Much concerned over the fate of his bondsmen's money, Joe Saltis, lord of the beer barons on Chicago's south side, surrendered today to federal authorities who seek to make him pay for his alleged liquor transgressions.

Officially sought for 208 days by both the federal officers and Chicago police, while newspaper stories hinted almost daily that his whereabouts was known, Saltis' perpetual freedom seemed a certainty until federal court ordered a public sale of the bondsmen's property. The sale was to take place Monday.

I am . . . .

a committee of one, representing all the men of Atlanta.

Though we generally say we "don't want a thing Christmas" — we thought we'd come out and admit that we're still boys, inside—and we do look forward to Christmas trees.

And, as there seems to be a great wonder as to what gifts men like, we are chipping in to buy space in the papers to name the things we want most of all—

We have a great regard for Muse things. Muse quality and Muse style are in step with us. We enjoy Muse Ties . . . and we never have too many. We would all like to have two or three Muse Ties for each suit we own. These suits are grays, browns, tans, blues—

We are as proud as peacocks over each Manhattan shirt we get. We all need new Muse gloves; fancy handkerchiefs; and sox—We play golf—and ever need the latest sweater-and-golf hose set—

In fact . . every man of us would like to own Muse's for himself—(along with a valet).

So as not to limit or overbid your gift-intentions —we'll sum it up this way:

"Muse's--all, or in part."

NUMBER OF FLU CASES GROWS; DISEASE MILD

Many Colleges Added to Closed List as Epidemic Spreads.

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—The close of the week brought additional reports from many parts of the country schools and colleges letting out earlier than usual for the Christmas recess because of the widespread outbreak of influenza.

While the United States public health service here has been in close touch with its officers throughout the country, few reports were received today, and these failed to disclose any material change in the situation.

A dispatch from Seattle to the health service said the disease was "quite prevalent" in that city, and that a number of cases had developed among the personnel at Port Townsend, near there.

Another report told of cases developing in Charleston, S. C., while a dispatch from a government contract hospital at San Pedro, Calif., requested additional funds because of outbreaks of the disease among merchant seamen in that port.

Word also was received from the marine hospital at New Orleans, La., and Fort Stanton, N. M., that a number of the personnel of the institutions had contracted the disease.

Meanwhile, public health officials who have said the disease was of a milder form than during the 1918 outbreak had nothing to add to the advice already given as to the best means of preventing spread of the disease. One caution stressed was the avoidance of needless crowding.

COLUMBIA CHURCHES CLOSE TO STOP FLU.

Columbia, S. C., December 15.—(AP) All churches here will be closed tomorrow as a precautionary measure against influenza, following an order by Dr. R. T. Jennings, chairman of the county board of health. Schools, with the exception of the University of South Carolina, and moving pictures were closed early in the week.

16 DIE IN EPIDEMIC AT PHILADELPHIA.

Philadelphia, December 15.—(United News.)—Dr. A. A. Ciarns, director of public health, today announced the toll of influenza which is invading the city numbered 16 deaths for the last week

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES AT ROME ARE CLOSED.

Rome, Ga., December 15.—(Special.)—Shorter college, Darlington School for Boys, and the public schools of the city dismissed at 1 o'clock today until after the Christmas holidays.

Darlington school had planned to dismiss for the vacation December 15, but Shorter college had not planned to begin the holidays until December 20. With the increase of influenza among students and faculty members it was thought best to close at once.

Twelve college girls are in local hospitals ill with influenza and this morning 16 new cases at the college brought about the decision to close school at once.

600 ARE VCTIMS IN CANADIAN TOWN.

Watertown, N. Y., December 15.—(United News.)—The village of Prescott, Ontario, is stricken with an influenza epidemic. It is reported 600 persons are ill. Private schools are closed, but the public schools are still open.

V. M. I. CLOSES FIVE DAYS EARLY.

Richmond, Va., December 15.—(AP) Virginia Military institute will be closed tomorrow morning, five days earlier than usual for the Christmas holidays, while Farmville State Teachers' college was closed today, on account of the influenza epidemic.

KNOXVILLE SCHOOLS TO CLOSE MONDAY.

Knoxville, Tenn., December 15.—(AP)—Public schools of the city of Knoxville were ordered closed on and after Monday and until the customary holiday recess ends, January 2, because of the rapid spread of influenza in the city. Attendance in the forty or more schools was cut approximately 35 per cent Friday the board of education announced today in a statement that they would be closed.

BESSIE TIFT CLOSES AS FLU PREVENTIVE.

Forsyth, Ga., December 15.—(Special.)—Bessie Tift college closed this morning for the holidays several days before schedule time. While there were only two or three flu cases here, Dr. Chamlee decided on closing. The spring term of Bessie Tift begins January 3.

ST. XAVIER COLLEGE IN EARLY CLOSING.

Cincinnati, December 15.—(AP)—All further classes at St. Xavier college were ordered discontinued today by college authorities until after the Christmas holidays in order to stop the spread of influenza which has caused much illness among the student body.

CUMBERLAND JOINS RANKS OF CLOSERS.

Lebanon, Tenn., December 15.—(AP) Cumberland university was closed today, five days before the prearranged Christmas holidays, to prevent spread of influenza which had invaded the institution. Several cases, all of mild form, have been reported among the students.

ONLY ONE COLLEGE OPEN IN CAROLINA.

Columbia, S. C., December 15.—(AP)—Because of the prevalence of influenza, which has shown an inerease within the last few days, classes at Winthrop college will be suspended after today and students will be allowed to return to their homes tomorrow. The announcement was made by Dean James P. Kinard in a telegram to Dr. James A. Hayne, state health officer, this morning.

The University of South Carolina is the only state institution now remaining open. The university will not close prior to the regular Christmas holidays which will begin following the conclusion of classes Tuesday, Dr. D. W. Douglas, president, said today.

PAIR FOUND SLAIN BELIEVED VICTIMS IN 'LEGGERS' FEUD

Rockville Centre, N. Y., December 15.—(AP)—The bodies of an unidentified man and a well-dressed woman were found in a sandpit behind the Belmont Park race track early today, and authorities began a hunt for killers, who shot the pair to death in what police believe was a bootleggers' feud.

The sandpit is located near the Hempstead turnpike in the Long Island village of Franklin Square, a short distance from a lonely and unoccupied bungalow from which the couple was believed to have been fleeing when they were shot. Police said they found barrels of wine and wine presses in the house.

The couple apparently had tried to flee in opposite directions, the bodies being about 50 paces apart, and the first bullets to find their target evidently hit from behind, as each body pitched face downward.

No marks of identification were found on the bodies. The woman was about 30 years old and the man a few years her senior. Both were of foreign birth.

TRIPLE EXECUTION STAGED FOR FIRST TIME IN ILLINOIS

Joliet, Ill., December 15.—(AP)—The electric chair as an instrument of death was used in Illinois for the first time today in a triple execution.

Dominic Bressetti, a Chippewa Indian; John Brown and Claude Clark, negroes, were electrocuted shortly after 7 a. m., for the murder last May of Will Beck, a Lake county farmer.

Clark, the first to die, was led to the chair at 7:12 o'clock and was pronounced dead six minutes later. Brown followed, with the Indian last to die. Bressetti was pronounced dead three minutes after the current was turned on.

Twelve men from Waukegan, scene of the trial, witnessed the execution. Warden Elmer J. Green and four wardens were in the death chamber.

Beck was slain in the door of his home when the trio attempted to rob him. He refused them admittance, and Brown shot him.

Bressetti began the conspiracy to rob Beck when he came to Chicago with money lent him by Beck, his prospective employer. He told Brown and Clark of Beck's hidden money. Two men hired to drive the trio to Beck's home were convicted of manslaughter.

Bressetti, a world war veteran, surrendered and confessed to Chicago police. The three were arrested after Brown and Clark attemped to "double-cross" Bressetti the day after the slaying.

Governor Len Small, upon recommendation of the state board of pardons and paroles, this week denied a petition for clemency.

Special Cancellation For Kitty Hawk Mail As Honor to Wright

Washington, N. C., December 15.—(AP)—Harry S. New, United States postmaster general, has advised Frank A. Pierson, publisher of the Washington Daily News, that a special cancellation for the Wright celebration at Kitty Hawk on December 17 will be made on all mail from Kitty Hawk.

Mail will be dispatched as usual connecting with a plane at Richmond, Va. A large number of letters already have come through addressed to the postmaster at Kitty Hawk for the special cancellation.

AMERICAN FREIGHTER ON FINNISH ROCKS

London, December 15.—(AP)—The American freighter Casper, out of New York for Helsingfors, radioed Lloyds today that she was pounding on the rocks at a position about 100 miles off the southwest coast of Finland.

The message stated the vessel was not sinking and that there was no immediate danger, but that the crew were abandoning the ship. A salvage ship was dispatched to the scene.

(The Casper is 3,054 tons. She was built at Hog Island, Penn., in 1919, and was engaged in the service of the American Scantic Line out of New York.) She normally carries a crew of 43.

WRIGHT SEES MOVIE OF HIS LAST FLIGHT TWENTY YEARS AGO

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—Orville Wright, first man to fly, today saw a motion picture of his last flight in 1908, in which he was injured and Lieutenant Thomas E. Selfridge was killed.

He saw the film at the home of its owner, C. Francis Jenkins, Washington inventor, after it had been shown to members of the international civil aeronautics conference, which was concluded today.

Mr. Wright, accompanied by members of the conference, left later in the day by steamer for Kitty Hawk, N. C., where he will witness ceremonies tomorrow celebrating his first flight in 1903.

Father in Hospital Gives Bride Away, Hears Ceremony

Chicago, December 15.—(AP)—A bride's father gave her away from his hospital bed this morning and later in the day the bridegroom's father officiated at the wedding ceremony.

Reuben H. Donnelley, wealthy publisher, was too ill to leave the hospital, so the wedding party met in his room, where Mr. Donnelley presented his daughter, Eleanor, in marriage to C. Pardee Erdman. Then a telephone hookup was arranged and by means of a loud speaker Mr. Donnelley heard the ceremony performed at his Lake Forest home this afternoon by Dr. Charles R. Erdman, of Princeton, N. J., the bridegroom's father.

Doris Niles, Spanish Dancer, Will Appear Here January 8

DORIS NILES.

The premier exponent of Spanish dancing, Doris Niles, with a ballet, orchestra and featured guitarists, will appear at the auditorium here on the night of January 8, it was announced Saturday by S. Russell Bridges, manager of the Southern Musical bureau.

The company of 27 members which Miss Niles is bringing to Atlanta is the same as that which appeared, by royal command, before King Alphonso of Spain, last winter, and which made such a sensation in New York that it is credited with launching the vogue for things Spanish which is now sweeping the east.

Miss Niles, an American girl of Spanish parentage, has won international recognition as the greatest interpreter of Castilian dancing now living. She created a sensation of biggest proportions in Spain last year. The company with which she is now making her first tour of America was recruited and trained by her and, according to reports from all cities where she has appeared, is remarkable for the abandon and wild exhilaration of their performance.

The special orchestra is composed of many members of the New York Symphony orchestra, while there is also the Rondallas Usandizaga, a sextette of a virtuosi guitarists from the Basque province of Spain.

The event is one of the biggest attractions locally of the current amusement season and should attract a large crowd to the auditorium. Bridges announced that, with this fact in view, seats would be placed on sale at Cable Piano company several days in advance of the engagement.

CELOTEX ANNOUNCES REDUCTION IN PRICE

The Celotex company, Chicago, has reduced prices on Celotex standing building board and Celotex lath. This announcement follows on the heels of a production schedule of 400 million square feet for 1929. Dealers throughout the country were represented in the discussion of this move through the National Celotex Dealers' council which met B. G. Dahlberg and his associates in Chicago on December 4 to formulate 1929 plans.

Referring to the announcement, Mr. Dahlberg, president of the Celotex company, says: "The year 1928 was the largest year in Celotex history. Public demand is growing daily. Celotex is a better product than ever before. Economies have been effected in our factories. New and favorable sources for raw material have been acquired. Dealers cooperation has widened distribution and lowered selling costs. Following the established policy of the Celotex company these savings are again passed on to our dealers and through them to their customers."

This is the essence of the policy maintained since the formation of the company in 1921. The last previous adjustment was made in 1925 just as the mills at New Orleans went over the 200 million mark. The effect of this move will be far reaching. Celotex is used as sheathing and plaster base throughout the home. While it has never been a costly item it has represented a fair-sized proportion of the total cost of a house. Therefore, the reduction on Celotex will result in lower building costs on thousands of homes that are already being planned for 1929. Too, the new price level will bring in more buyers, as is always the case when a price goes down and will spread this reduction in building costs even further. Another important economic effect will be reduced fuel bills because of the high insulation value of Celotex. With an increase in the number of home builders using Celotex, the additional saving in fuel year after year is not to be overlooked in national economy.

NEAREST KIN FAIL TO RECOGNIZE HIM AFTER 60 YEARS

Whitesburg, Ky., December 15.—(AP)—An aged man, stooped and gray from the weight of 75 winters, today paid his first visit in 60 years to the home of his childhood and greeted brothers and sisters who did not know him.

Six decades ago, James Stamper, then fifteen, left Whitesburg to make his way in the world, traveling 200 miles to the nearest railroad. His path took him to the Pacific coast, where later he settled in Saratoga, Calif. Things went well and he bought a fruit farm. The farm prospered, and Mr. Stamper became wealthy. Long cherished was the desire to visit his old home.

Accordingly, Mr. Stamper packed up a week or so ago and left Saratoga for Kentucky. He arrived in Whitesburg today and began inquiries. Soon he was greeting brothers and sisters and here and there a childhood chum none of whom knew him until he revealed his identity.

Auto Body Urges Uniform Traffic Laws for State

The Georgia State Automobile association, in an effort to secure the enactment of more modern laws controlling automobiles and highway traffic, will undertake a campaign immediately to create sentiment throughout the state for the enactment of the Hoover uniform traffic code, or a localized version of this standard code. The code, which was drawn up by a group of specialists under the direction of President-elect Herbert Hoover when he was secretary of commerce, is now on the statute books of a number of leading states.

President Goodloe Yancey, of the association, has named a legislative committee to cooperate with statehouse officials in the promotion of this and similar legislation tending to affect motorists. This committee has as its head W. Tom Winn, of Atlanta, who for years has been a leader in Georgia for affairs relating to the automobile.

Other members of this committee include T. D. Ridley, of Dalton; J. A. Mandeville, of Carrollton; W. H. Derris, of Cordele; Judge Harry Reed, of Waycross; E. W. Williams, of Monroe, and Wiley L. Moore, of Atlanta.

This committee is one of eight permanent committees of the Georgia State Automobile association which have been set up to carry through the extensive civic program of the organization, in 1929. Other committee appointments of President Yancey include the following:

Safety committee: G. L. Candler, vice president of the Central of Georgia railway, Savannah, chairman; Judge W. S. Erwin, of Clarkesville; L. H. Harper, of Macon; Chief D. W. Brosnan, of Albany; W. H. Bone, Jr., of Douglas; W. O. Wall, of Augusta; J. Lee Edwards, of Atlanta.

Publicity committee: Louie L. Morris, vice president of the Georgia Press association, of Hartwell, chairman; Milton L. Fleetwood, of Cartersville; W. T. Shytle, of Adel; Jack Williams, of Waycross; W. T. Bacon, of Madison, and C. Armond Carroll, of Atlanta.

The Georgia State Automobile association is at present engaged in extending its membership to every county in the state for the benefit of automobile owners. Affiliated with the A. A. SERVICE COMMISSION ANNOUNCES SCHEDULE

Board Will Resume Gas and and Electric Hearing on December 19.

The Georgia Public Service commission will be confronted with appeals from four railroads which seek to curtail service, and in addition there will be a continuance of the hearing of citizens of Atlanta and its suburbs who want a change in gas and electric rates, during the week of December 17-23. This hearing is set for December 19.

The Central of Georgia railroad, the Georgia railroad, the Atlantic Coast Line railway and the Southern railway all seek to rearrange service, the docket for December 18 showing the following:

Southern railway, seeking authority to discontinue agencies at Bellton, Doraville, Oakwood and Tugalo, Ga.

Revision of Schedules.

Central of Georgia railroad, seeking authority to discontinue passenger trains numbers 13 and 14 between Dublin and Dover, and to revise schedules of trains 25 and 26.

Central of Georgia railroad seeking authority to discontinue operation of passenger trains numbers 21 and 22, 19 and 20 and 23, and establish new trains between Macon and Eatonton.

Seaboard Air Line railroad, seeking authority to put agency at Colquitt on an eight-hour basis. Also hearing on complaint against railroad on account of Sunday service not being restored.

Georgia railroad, seeking authority to discontinue agency at James, Ga., for nine months during year and appoint caretaker.

Atlantic Coast Line railroad, seeking authority to discontinue agency at Atkinson, Ga.

Trenton Water Power & Light company, of Trenton, Ga., petitioning for authority to issue 1,000 shares of stock at par value of $5.

December 19.

Georgia Power company rate hearing.

Public Service commission vs. Consumers Gas & Coke company, rule nisi to show cause why gas rates at Waycross should not be adjusted.

Oglethorpe Telephone company, Maxeys, Ga. Petition for authority to issue stock.

Augusta Cotton exchange, et al, petition for rehearing on cotton concentration.

December 20.

Seaboard Air Line railroad, seeking authority to revise train service and schedules on Abbeville-Fitzgerald-Ocilla branch.

Gas Company Gets 25-Year Franchise From Milledgeville

Milledgeville, Ga., December 15.—(Special.)—A 25-year franchise has been granted by the city of Milledgeville to the Natural Gas company, of Birmingham. Work on the laying of the pipe lines will be begun within three months and the enterprise will be completed within the next year. The pipes to Milledgeville will come through Birmingham, Nashville, Atlanta and Macon. This action was announced by Mayor M. E. Pennington and the city council this week.

WARRENTON SCHOOL ON ACCREDITED LIST

Warrenton, Ga., December 15.—(Special.)—Announcement was made here Saturday that the Warrenton High school had been placed on the southern accredited list of high schools.

Word to this effect came from Fort Worth, Texas, where the annual convention was held. There were 29 applications from Georgia schools and but five of this number were accepted, Warrenton being one.

O. G. Lancaster, superintendent of Warrenton public schools, was notified of the listing by Dr. J. S. Stewart, professor of secondary education.

TWO STATE LINE CITIES PLAN TO COOPERATE

Calhoun Falls Businessmen Organize To Promote Tourist Interests.

Hartwell, Ga., December 15.—(Special.)—After a series of meetings and conferences with officials of the northern syndicate behind the huge industrial city development at Calhoun Falls, S. C., and the tourist resort across the Savannah river at Calhoun Falls, Ga., the Hartwell Chamber of Commerce decided to cooperate with the federation of the Piedmont Chamber of Commerce, which the newcomers are creating to promote, through joint action, the interests of northern Georgia and western South Carolina.

The following committee was named: L. L. Morris, H. T. Alford, A. N. Alford, R. E. Matheson, F. T. Kidd, Dr. B. C. Teesley, W. B. Morris, A. F. Bell, T. J. Phillips, R. L. Ayers and Judge J. H. Skelton. Louie L. Morris is chairman of the committee which has started preparation of a constructive program.

Action of Hartwell in organizing the foregoing committee for legislative and promotional activities followed simila action recently taken by the chambers of commerce of Elberton, Ga., and Abbeville, S. C., each of which appointed a committee of 15 for the purpose. These committees embrace the leading business and professional men of the respective communities. The chamber of commerce of Greenwood, S. C., has approved of the course and will name a cooperating committee Monday evening, December 17.

The formation of the federation is expected to bring a powerful body into being, capable of presenting a unified community public opinion, irrespective of municipal, county or state lines, on questions dealing with means of communication, road building, railroad problems, legislation, the development of tourist travel, exploitation of historical and romantic assets, development of latent resources and advertising and promoting the section generally in an effort to create interest in it throughout the entire country, especially the north.

Cooperation of educational forces is being sought in an effort to bring the resources of the colleges to bear upon the various problems involved. Officials of Calhoun Falls, Inc., the Delaware corporation which recently purchased the huge Calhoun estates in South Carolina and Georgia, have canvassed Clemson college, Erskine college and the University of Georgia.

CHAPMAN HOLDS TITLE "SENIOR WATCHMAKER"

W. F. Chapman, who is connected with E. A. Morgan, jeweler, at 119 Hunter street, S. W., is one of only two Georgians holding the certificate of senior watch-maker of the Hierlogical Institute of America.

This degree denotes the utmost in skill in the art of watch craftsmanship and only a comparatively few men in America have held it, it is learned. Mr. Chapman is widely known by the public, but his distinction is little known.

Charles W. Hubner Named Poet-Laureate For Southern States

Named as the most eminent living Southern poet, Charles W. Hubner, of Atlanta, oldest American bard, has been chosen poet laureate of Dixie by the Poetry Society of the South, it was announced Saturday.

The society, organized January 1, 1927, has selected Mr. Hubner, who is 93 years old, as its leading officer for life. Delay in naming the laureate poet was assigned to the fact that at the inception of the society, membership was not large enough to make a selection representative.

Each member of the society ballots his choice of the leading southern poet. Choice of Mr. Hubner was said to have been almost unanimous.

GOTHAM CRIME IS PARALLEL TO HALL-MILLS

Bodies of Well-Dressed Couple Found Slain Near Bungalow in New York Suburb.

EFFORT TO HIDE IDENTITY OF PAIR

Police Theory Is That Lovers Tryst Resulted in Slaying Similar to Derussey Lane Crime.

Franklin Square, Long Island, N. Y., December 15.—(United News.)—A double murder, having many characteristics similar to the still unsolved murders of the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Florence Mills, puzzled police of this little Long Island hamlet tonight.

The bodies of a man and woman were found today, shot to death and at different sides of a little bungalow. Both were well groomed. There was every indication they had been surprised in a tryst and, trying to run, were shot and killed.

In those details this double murder compares with that affair of several years ago when a minister and choir singer were found shot to death in DeRussey's lane near New Brunswick, N. J.

But the bodies of the Rev. Hall and Mrs. Mills were identified almost immediately. No one yet has been able to identify the two bodies found this morning by a laborer.

Discovered by Worker.

It was shortly after 8 o'clock this morning that Joseph Stanghit climbed a sand hoist to go to work and casually looked over towards a deserted bungalow some 150 or 200 yards away. He saw a woman's body on the ground.

Stanghit ran to the bungalow. On the south side of the little bungalow was a woman's body. She was dressed modishly. She wore a blue coat over a brown frock and her lingerie was of silk.

Around her were a number of used cartridges.

Stanghit started running for aid and went around the corner of the house. On the east side he stumbled across the body of a man. The man appeared to be some years older than the woman. Around his body also were a number of used cartridges. The man also was well groomed, wearing a brown suit of unusually good texture.

Both had been shot through the head with .45 and .38 calibre bullets.

Woman Heard Shooting.

The couple apparently was shot about 3 a. m. today as Mrs. Alfred Averell, who lives some 200 yards distant from the deserted cottage, said she heard shooting at that time. There was a distinct rattle of shooting, she said, which lasted about two minutes. Then there was quiet and she did not even hear motor cars after that time.

The woman's face was badly disfigured by the bullets which penetrated her head. The man also was shot in the head and the bullet had traced almost the entire length of his torso.

Immediately thoughts of the police turned to that puzzling murder mystery of New Jersey when they started attempting to solve this double tragedy of Long Island. They recalled that the Rev. Hall and Mrs. Mills were lovers and that they had numerous trysting places. The last meeting place was in shaded and dark DeRussey's lane, under an apple tree, and it was there that their bodies were found.

Captain Harold King, of the state police, in attempting to reconstruct this double crime, today said he believed an event similar to the Hall-Mills case had transpired.

He believed this couple killed today might have been carrying on a love affair. That she was a married woman there was no question, according to officers, for there were creases on her finger showing a wedding ring had been worn.

Try to Hide Identity.

They were perhaps having one of their secret meetings. They were surprised. They attempted to run. As the man and woman separated, one running one way around the house and the other the other way, their attackers started shooting and both lovers were killed.

There was every attempt to hide identity of the two. The man's pockets had been turned inside out. Markings in the clothing were torn away. The woman's wedding ring had been ripped from her finger.

The woman gave every indication of a person of striking appearance. Her features were finely chiseled, although her face almost had been torn away by bullets. She appeared to be about 25 years old and of medium build. She was a brunette. The man appeared to be in his late thirties.

The similarity between this case and the Hall-Mills case was striking. In the latter one, which occurred in November, 1923, the couple had gone to their last tryst at a lover's lane for the section of New Jersey between Somerville and New Brunswick. It was a deserted region so far as residents were concerned. So was the location for today's double murder a lover's lane. The roads were little used hereabouts and the young lovers—and some middle-aged lovers—often motored to this region.

The shooting of Rev. Hall and Mrs. Mills was not seen although at the trial of Mrs. Hall and Willie Stevens there were many persons who had been in DeRussey's lane that November night. The minister's hands were clasped across his breast in a ministerial pose when it was found. Both the minister and his sweetheart had been shot to death. Their murders never were solved. Mrs. Hall and Willie Stevens being acquitted.

Bright, Bustling Crowds Harbinger Old Santa's Annual Pilgrimage

Hurrying . . . hurrying . . . a hundred thousand Atlanta feet each day are marking off the minutes to Christmas day on down town streets. Some with bundles, with little Johnny and Mary hanging on by a coat sleeve . . . some with none . . . but all hurrying on the sidewalk treadmill that draws the glad day nearer. At top the photographer has caught a view of the crowds at Broad and Alabama streets. Two other views on Whitehall enclose a "shot" he caught while a little newsie, sick with material forebodings, yet alive with the intangible hope and cheer of all youth at Christmas time, peers enchanted into a lighted shop window of toys. And while he stands and looks and hopes the crowds still continue their hurrying. . . hurrying. . .

COUNCIL TO PASS ON AIRPORT PLANS

Alderman Hartsfield Declares $340,000 Program Is Not Extravagant; County Aid Sought.

Plans for development of Candler field, to meet the estimated growth of Atlanta and the aviation industry during the next five years, at an approximate cost of $340,000, which includes the purchase of the tract, will be presented to city council Monday afternoon by the airport committee of council.

The estimated cost of buying the field from the Candlers and of putting in proposed improvements and enlarging the field so as to bring it within the "class A" airport specifications is $60,000 under the appropriation made by Chattanooga for the improvement of its airport, Alderman William B. Hartsfield, chairman of the airport committee, pointed out Saturday.

Proposed extension of the field would practically double the size of the landing area and would more than double the hangar space, while it also

Monte Carlo Cabinet Quits As Luck Fails

Empire of Chance Lags Behind in Revenue; Revolution Talked.

Monte Carlo, Monaco, December 15.—(AP)—This little principality's parliament of 21 members resigned today in a body. The crisis arose over the question of whether the management of the gambling casino or the people were going to run the country.

The national council, as the parliament is called, has been backed by the management of the establishment where the little ivory balls whirl at roulette and big sums change hands on the flip of a card. It was forced out of office, however, by an element whose slogan is "Monaco for the Monacans" and who assert that the casino has failed to fulfill its agreement to make certain public improvements because its treasury is low.

Among the most excitable elements of the 22,000 citizens of the realm, there has been some wild talk of revolution, but heavily armed policemen, who have taken the place of the former miniature army, believe they can keep the peace.

The casino is the chief industry of the principality. It was farmed out by the government of Prince Louis II, for $450,000 a year, but business

PASSENGER ROUTE WILL OPEN APRIL 1

Tri-Motored Planes To Begin Operation Between Here and Greensboro on 3-Hour Schedule

Inauguration of air passenger service between Atlanta and Greensboro, N. C., about April 1, when tri-motored Ford planes are placed in operation on this section of the Atlanta-New York route, will mean an investment of approximately $300,000 at Candler field by Pitcairn Aviation, Inc., according to James G. Ray, operations manager for Pitcairn.

A new hangar, of sufficient size to house six Ford tri-motored planes, will be built at a cost of $50,000, while $100,000 worth of equipment, such as spare motors, plane parts, instruments, tools, shop equipment, etc., will be placed here by the company, Mr. Ray said. The new hangar will be 120 by 200 feet, supplying more space than all three of the present hangars at Candler field, Ray said.

300-horsepower Motors.

The new tri-motored Ford planes will have 300-horsepower whirlwind motors instead of the usual 200-horsepower motors. Two of the planes will operate on a regular daily schedule, the third machine being held in reserve. The tentative schedule would provide business people with overnight transportation between New York and Atlanta, by plane between this city and Greensboro, and by train between Greensboro and New York. For instance, Mr. Ray explained, the passenger could leave Greensboro at 7 o'clock in the morning, eastern time, after an all-night train journey from New York, and arrive in Atlanta three hours later, or at 9 o'clock central time, thus giving him the entire day here for business purposes. On the run to the north, a business man would leave Atlanta in the afternoon, reach Greensboro before dark, and be in New York early the next morning.

Planes Being Constructed.

The Ford planes now are being constructed for Pitcairn, and will be delivered on March 1, Mr. Ray said. For the servicing of the Ford planes, a complete staff of men will be maintained at Candler field, as the plans of the company contemplate extension of the passenger service to Miami and then to New York. The force of 10 men, exclusive of pilots, now employed here by Pitcairn, will be increased to at least 20 men, Ray said.

Plans for the Atlanta-Miami air mail route call for the installation of a feed line to Tampa within a few months, Mr. Ray announced. The Pitcairn pilots now are flying 2,800 miles a day, and before long this total will be greatly increased, he said. Included in the staff at Candler field will be parachute folders for the air mail pilots, and an instrument expert, he added.

Fifteen Escape.

Houston, Texas, December 15.—(AP) Fifteen Mexican convicts escaped from the Blueridge state prison farm, near here, early today by sawing a hole in the floor of their barracks. Posses with bloodhounds were put on the trail of the fugitives. The men were serving short terms.

AGNES SCOTT WINS OVER VASSAR GIRLS IN ANNUAL DEBATE

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., December 15. (Special)—For the second time in consecutive years Agnes Scott college, of Atlanta, has defeated Vassar college in debating, Saturday night being victorious here in this year's intercollegiate contest.

The Agnes Scott college team, comprised of Eleanor Lee Norris and Esther Nisbet, successfully defended the negative side of the question, "Resolved, That Publicly Owned Waterpower Sites of the United States Should Be Developed and Operated By Federal or State Governments."

Vassar college was represented by Kathryn Wilson and Barbara Lawrence.

The judges were Norman Hapgood, Charles Tuttle and Dr. Henry Moskowitz.

GEORGIA CROP PUT AT 961,241 BALES

Final Estimate of State Agricultural Department Is 58,759 Bales Under Last Federal Forecast.

The final estimate as to the Georgia cotton crop for 1928 is fixed at 961,241 bales, as compared to an estimate of 1,020,000 bales made by the federal bureau's report, it was announced by Eugene Talmadge, commissioner of agriculture, in a statement issued Saturday.

Commissioner Talmadge's statement is as follows:

"Final report on Georgia cotton crop for this year compiled by Georgia department of agriculture, 961,241.

"Final federal report for Georgia, 1,020,000.

"According to the records of the Georgia department of agriculture the federal bureau overestimated the Georgia cotton crop 58,759 bales.

"The largest estimate of the federal department on the Georgia cotton crop was released October 8, the peak of marketing. This estimate for Georgia was 1,060,000 bales. If the federal bureau has overestimated the crop in other states as has been done in Georgia, Senator Heflin of Alabama, is very conservative in his statement that the crop for the entire cotton belt has been overestimated 500,000 bales."

HAPEVILLE MAN REPORTS HOLD-UP AND LOSS OF $57

Oliver Adams, of Hapeville, reported to police Saturday night that two unidentified negroes late Saturday afternoon pressed a large knife to his throat in an alley "somewhere off Techwood drive" and rifled his pockets of $57.

Columbus Beavers, negro, of 281 Ashby street, an orderly at Grady hospital, told police two white men held him up and robbed him of $6.75 on Warren place early Saturday night.

BUILDING PERMITS THREATEN RECORD

With Two Weeks to Go, Total for This Year Is Only $606,658 Short of Highest Figure.

With Atlanta's 1928 building permits within $606,658 of the 1923 record of $27,094,912, this city has a fair chance of shattering building records for all time this year, it was seen Saturday from a study of figures obtained from the office of C. J. Bowen, city building inspector.

Permits for this year through Saturday totaled $26,488,254, and, with half of the month remaining, it is likely that the 1923 record will be rivaled or surpassed, it was said. The day's business Saturday at the building inspector's office was $73,150, while Friday's business, exclusive of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph permit for $5,500,000, was $265,800. The month's total through Thursday was $482,515.

The unprecedented amount of building permits this year was driven to Saturday's figure by the permit obtained Friday by the Southern Bell Telephone company for its new building on the northeast corner of Auburn avenue and Ivy street. The telephone company took out a permit for a 25-story building with basement and sub-basement to be erected at an estimated cost of $5,500,000.

Expansion Planned.

It was explained by telephone company officials that the company's building program contemplates the erection of a six-story structure at a cost of $1,000,000, with allowance for future expansion, the additional stories to be erected on the six-story unit when the business of the company warrants such a move. The $5,500,000 permit, however, is on the books of the building inspector, and is counted to Atlanta's credit in the building inspector's permit compilation for the year.

Permits up to December 1 amounted to $20,116,789, while the permits for December to date total $6,371,465, of which $5,815,800 came Friday. The May permits were second highest for the year, totaling $5,910,349.

The month-by-month record of permits for 1928 follows: January, $1,396,150; February, $1,119,254; March $1,840,301; April, $1,022,797; May, $5,910,349; June $1,124,342; July, $1,220,813; August, $838,299; September, $2,097,427; October, $1,756,028; November, $1,791,029; December to date, $6,371,465.

The year-by-year record starting with 1923 follows: 1923, $27,094,912; 1924, $18,196,091; 1925, $10,403,558; 1926, $17,789,363; 1927, $12,081,122; 1928 to date, $26,488,254.

Large Projects.

Among the projects responsible for the large amount of building permits this year were the Central avenue and Pryor street viaducts, the new city hall, a large number of school buildings, the Shrine mosque and theater, the Rhodes-Haverty building, and the Southern Railway building.

The telephone company permit, in addition to boosting the year's average, made December the largest month from the standpoint of building permits on record, February of 1923, being the largest previous month, with a total of slightly more than $5,000,000. The telephone permit also broke the records for one day's business, as well as the record for the largest single permit.

Campus at Emory To Blaze

RESIDENTS NEAR BY ALSO TO JOIN MOVEMENT

With Tiny Christmas Lights

BY ELMO HAMBY.

Trees on the campus of Emory university this Christmas season for the first time in the history of the institution will bear hundreds of tiny colored lights to speed the parting students on their way home and again to welcome their return, according to decision Saturday of faculty members and residents of the Emory university community.

The community itself, containing many beautiful homes, will be lighted along with the most beautiful of the trees on the campus.

Services attendant to lighting of the trees will be held at 4:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, December 23, and the trees will remain lighted throughout Christmas week.

Citizens To Attend.

All citizens of the community will attend the ceremony, which will include an opening prayer by Dean F. N. Parker, of the school of theology, and a short address by President Harvey W. Cox. Christmas carols will be sung.

Action of the Emory university community in joining the "Light the Living Trees" movement of The Constitution and the Camp Fire girls, enlists another section of beautiful homes in the plan. Already many civic organizations have aligned themselves with the movement, as well as hundreds of individual Atlantans.

Atlantans who Saturday telephoned the Christmas Tree Editor of The Constitution that they would light their living trees were:

New Proponents of Move.

Mrs. J. Fox, 1409 Fairview road, N. E., who will light trees on each side of the front door.

Mrs. John Williams, 2205 Peachtree road.

Dr. M. W. Monahan, 635 Park drive.

Mrs. W. D. Barnett, of 1093 Austin avenue, will light two beautiful Theodore cedars.

ALBANY JOINS LIVING TREE MOVE.

Albany, Ga., December 15.—(Special to The Constitution's Christmas Tree Editor)—Not to be outdone by any of her sister Georgia cities, Albany this Christmas will "Light the Living Trees." Christmas trees, big and little, decorated, lighted and some unadorned, will be seen on almost every lawn this Yuletide and on the streets of the city.

The city immediately will begin work of wiring a large tree on the lawn of the municipal auditorium so that it may be lighted with hundreds of vari-colored electric light bulbs. Trees in front of several business houses and private homes will be electrically lighted.

Albanians who will "Light Their Living Trees" this Christmas include Mrs. D. M. Munnerlyn, Mrs. Cleve Cox, Mrs. H. T. McIntosh, D. L. Beatie, Mrs. R. L. Jones, J. W. Reynolds, E. E. Watkins, Dr. J. M. Barnett, Mrs. W. B. Haley, George R. Gardner, H. W. Rucker, C. Q. Wright, Mrs. W. W. Pace and others.

Local High Schools May Lose Position On Accredited List

Final Warning on Subject of Overloading of Teachers Is Sent to Superintendent Sutton.

STEPS TO REMEDY SITUATION URGED

Stewart Letter Says Teachers Have 20 Per Cent More Pupils Than Accredited Body Allows.

A serious situation faces Atlanta's high schools with final warnings received from Dr. J. S. Stewart, of the University of Georgia, representing the Southern Association of Accredited Schools, by the school principals that unless the excess overloading of teachers is relieved, Atlanta high schools will be dropped from the list of accredited schools at the next annual meeting.

This statement was made Saturday by Dr. Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, in a letter to George W. Powell, president of the board of education, and a communication to the press.

Pointing out that the school administration, through the superintendent and the superintendent in charge of high schools, has repeatedly called this condition to the attention of the board of education, the finance committee and the city council, Dr. Sutton declared, that he feels the condition is so serious that all who are interested in schools should be notified of the facts contained in Dr. Stewart's letters. Copies of the letters are being sent to the mayor, members of the board of education, members of city council, and to the presidents of the Parent-Teacher associations of the four high schools involved, Dr. Sutton said.

More Space Needed.

In the case of the two senior high schools for boys, Boys' High and Tech High, Dr. Stewart also made it very emphatic that, in addition to relieving the overloading of teachers, Atlanta must provide space and adequate housing facilities for the senior high boys, Mr. Sutton pointed out.

Teachers in the junior and senior high schools of Atlanta are teaching 20 per cent more children than is allowed by the association, and they also are teaching a greater number of periods, Dr. Sutton explained in his statement to the press.

"There is another condition to which they object, and that is the housing of the two institutions, Boys' High and Tech High, in the same building," Dr. Sutton said. "This last proposition they are willing for us to have a year or two to solve, but the other requires instant relief. In other words, we must have more teachers on February 1 or we will be dropped from the accredited list at the next meeting of the association. The underscoring of the word 'final' in these letters is not mine, but Dr. Stewart's, who represents Georgia on the committee from the southern association. I should hate to see our city humiliated in this way."

Pleaded for More Money.

Dr. Sutton said that for three years he has pleaded for better appropriations for public schools, and has informed the finance committee of council and the board of education members that if Atlanta continued to overload classes the Southern Association of Colleges would drop this city from the accredited list. "We have reached the limit in this proposition," he said.

The superintendent pointed out that the schools of Atlanta are operating now with 33 per cent less clerical help than in 1926, and with more than 5,000 additional children, and that the schools are operating with 111 less teachers than in 1926.

Letters addressed to H. O. Smith, principal of Boys' High school, and W. O. Cheney, principal of Tech High school, by Dr. Stewart point out that he is instructed by the Southern Association of Accredited Schools to give

SHOW AT CAPITOL TO BENEFIT ELKS' CHRISTMAS TREE

Great Midnight Performance Will Enable Local Lodge To Widen Scope of Its Charity.

A great midnight benefit, at which all vaudeville and other professional stage talent in Atlanta this week will appear, will be given at Loew's Capitol theater at midnight next Friday, December 21, in order to provide funds for the annual Christmas tree for the worthy poor of Atlanta given by Atlanta Lodge No. 78, of the Elks.

Announcement of this tremendous show was made Saturday by B. C. Broyles, secretary of Lodge No. 78.

Lionel H. Keene, southern representative of Loew's, will be general chairman for the occasion, with Mr. Broyles acting as general secretary and Mayor I. N. Ragsdale and Walter B. Stewart as associate chairmen.

Managers to Cooperate.

Tom James, manager of Loew's Capitol; Marty Semon, manager of Keith's Georgia; R. E. Hicks, manager of the Howard, and W. T. Murray, manager of Loew's Grand, have pledged themselves to contribute their utmost to the success of the undertaking by furnishing professional acts for the performance, and in any other way possible.

In addition, and assuring that every penny taken in at the box office will go for charity, with no overhead expenses, the local unions of all kinds connected with the theaters have agreed to furnish their services without cost for the cause.

The following officials of the several stage organizations as well as the musicians have agreed to this contribution of services:

Unions in Line.

Cliff Clower, secretary, local No. 41, I. A. T. S. E.

Ralph F. Hendrix, president, local No. 41, I. A. T. S. E.

L. A. Rogers, secretary, local No. 225, I. A. T. S. E., and moving picture operators.

T. R. Bryant, president, local No. 225, I. A. T. S. E., and moving picture operators.

C. B. Bearden, secretary and business representative, A. F. Musicians, local No. 148.

Secretary Broyles, in announcing this all-inclusive benefit performance, stated that, while Atlanta Lodge No. 78 has given a Christmas tree to the worthy poor every year for forty years, the demand has been so unusually heavy this year that they have decided to increase the scope of their Christmas charities to several times that of former years. With this situation it became necessary that some additional means of raising the needed funds be devised, and the offer made by officials of Loew's Capitol was thus eagerly welcomed as a true godsend in their problem.

Others Will Help.

Leslie Hubbard, of the Hubbard and Hancock company; Mr. Broyles said, has volunteered to contribute the tickets without cost to the Elks, and Chief W. B. Cody, of the fire department, and Chief James L. Beavers, of the police department, also have offered to cooperate in every way to make the show the biggest possible success.

Everybody connected with the affair is offering their services free in a manner that is nothing short of wonderful," said Mr. Broyles Saturday. "All these splendid contributions now have taken care of every possible item

A Dream of Old Santa

BY LOYD A. WILHOIT

Last night I could have sworn I heard them—the tinkling hammers of Santa Claus' elfin toymakers ringing merrily on tiny anvils.

Faintly borne to memory on the chill winds that swept down from the frozen north, they beat a gladsome refrain that seemed to say:

"Nine more days—Christmas!—Christmas!!"

And that portends the slumberous impression of reindeer hoofs on the roof once again; the cherry blaze of Christmas trees, and glittering treasure hordes of play toys.

Old Santa is coming soon—soon!

Eleventh-Hour Work.

Even now his gleaming ice palace in the land of snow is all abustle with an eleventh-hour fashioning of the last of his welcome gifts. The toys he has been busily making all year are sorted and ready for the magic sleigh. Each tiny reindeer is fat and sleek, awaiting the bell-studded harness and the madly joyous dash to the chimney of all the earth's little people.

Just keep those hearts from beating too fast a wee bit longer. There's only a short time to wait.

Then will come the day of days, with its customary scramble down the stairs at the first peep of dawn. The spangled tree with a star at its crest that will shine with far greater effulgence than any wan constellation that pierces the curtain of night.

Drums and Horns.

The gaudy drum whose first tattoo assembles for living room warfare a mighty concourse with plumes bobbing and pennons flying bravely at lancepoint. The horn whose magic blast becomes the crashing climax of a whole symphony. The ship whose rigging sings to the blasts of a stormy southern sea where pirates hold revel and deeds of rare daring are to be done by tiny hands. The sword whose commercial history is obliterated as it is transformed into the flaming excaliber of youth.

Such is the power of childish imagination when old Santa Claus sets little heads a-dream. It's a wonderful and a beautiful thing—this blissful creed.

There is no faith so sublime as the faith that accepts as its major tenet the statement that in this world there's someone who devotes his whole life to making you happy just because he loves you.

Belief in Santa.

There is no innocence so sweetly pure as the innocence that never questions the theory that a little fat [illegible] may squeeze down all the chimneys in a single night.

And there is no love so [illegible] as the love of Santa [illegible] jects for their jovial [illegible]

If the fairies should [illegible] wands over me and grant [illegible] wish, I think that wish [illegible] all my life I could [illegible] Claus with the simple [illegible] If I could do that—[illegible] I need?

FIGHT FOR ROTHSTEIN ESTATE NOW IN COURT

Father and Mother Seeking To Void Gambler's Second Will.

New York, December 15.—(AP)—A fight for the shrinking estate of Arnold Rothstein, now estimated at less than $2,000,000, is to be carried to the courts.

Beneficiaries under two wills, the last of which his widow and mother and father are attempting to have voided, were unable to arrive at an agreement.

Inez Norton, show girl friend of the slain gambler, refused to accept a lump sum in place of the interest of one-sixth the estate willed her. The will under which she is a beneficiary was signed by Rothstein as he lay dying in the hospital, too weak to write his full name and able only to make a cross.

The will which relatives wish to have declared his last testament does not provide for Miss Norton nor several other persons named in the contested document.

Rumors were current today that Hyman (Gilly) Biller, sought on a murder indictment in connection with the shooting of Rothstein, was in hiding in New York and would surrender in the next few days.

United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle today was preparing evidence for a start Monday on the trial of Joseph Unger, arrested in Buffalo, as a member of the international narcotic ring Pothstein financed.

Unger left Buffalo for New York under guard of federal agents. It was in Unger's pockets that federal agents found checks for the trunk full of narcotics confiscated in New York.

Mrs June Boyd, who is expected to be a witness against Unger, is in jail as a material witness. She was unable to provide $25,000 bail. She had been detained at a hotel under guard of the agent who found $500,000 worth of narcotics in her apartment in Chicago.

Indications are that the trial of George McManus, the only one in custody of the four indicted for Rothstein's murder, will be postponed until the other three men are captured.

EFFORT TO RECORD DEATH CHAIR ACTS OF HEART FAILS

New York, December 15.—(AP)—But for a last minute slip-up, Thomas Moran, executed Brooklyn gangster, might have made an important contribution to science by his death in the electric chair.

Dr. Horatio B. Williams, of Columbia university, revealed today that he had planned to photograph the action of Moran's heart at the instant the death switch was thrown and a few minutes afterward to determine the response of the heart to electric shocks.

With all the necessary equipment installed in a room adjoining the death chamber at Sing Sing prison, where Moran was electrocuted early yesterday, Dr. Williams said "A little accident interferred." He did not disclose its nature. He intimated the experiment would be carried out on a future occasion.

Dr. Williams said his researches were to ascertain the most effective methods of resuscitating persons accidentally shocked by electric current.

The photograph was to have been obtained through electrodes applied to Moran's arms and legs. A needle of light playing up and down over the surface of a smoked drum would record the heart movements on a film.

Denies Reported Sunday Opening Of Reserve Bank

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—A protest to the treasury that the Federal Reserve branch bank at Nashville, Tenn., was to be kept open tomorrow to receive income tax payments was answered today by Undersecretary Mills, who told Noah W. Cooper that the Federal Reserve banks do not remain open Sunday, but that certain departments handling income tax receipts will be compelled to dispose of such clerical work as is necessary to clear up the heavy volume of checks covering tax payments made today. Cooper telegraphed Secretary Mellon saying it was announced in the newspapers there that the bank would receive income tax payments on Sunday. The law provides, the treasury pointed out, that all payments must be made before midnight tonight.

Cooper in his telegram declared that keeping the branch open on Sunday was "a violation of God's sabbath commandment, a very bad example for all, an insult to Christian civilization" and asked that the order be revoked.

"We can do enough tax paying and banking in six days a week," he added.

Mr. Mills explained that the services of the few employees who would work Sunday was comparable to that performed in public interest on Sunday by the postal service, coast guard, customs, public health, prohibition and other government bureaus.

"AUTOMATIC RADIO" FOR SOS ALARMS SHOWN TO NAVY

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—An "automatic radio transmitter" that could send an SOS and perhaps save the lives of amateur aviators or navigators in accidents at sea was demonstrated by the navy department today by its inventor, Lieutenant Pedro C. Andox, of the Cuban navy, and his backer, S. Geerkin, of Havana.

The 15-pound instrument can be set with latitude and longitude indications and be automatically released to signal these together with an SOS call, by throwing off a switch. Navy department officials said today that it might have great value for an air pilot who is not a radio operator or small pleasure or merchant craft that do not have radio operators aboard. British commercial vessels they stated are trying an automatic radio alarm device, but none has been installed on American vessels.

NEGRO PEDDLER, 20, JAILED IN SLAYING OF TENN. STUDENT

Knoxville, Tenn., December 15.—(AP)—Ernest Jones, 20, negro tamale peddler, was formally charged today with the fatal stabbing of Randolph J. Knight, University of Tennessee student and cheer leader, occurring Thursday night. He was committed to the Knox county jail on a warrant charging first degree murder, which is returnable before Municipal Judge R. P. Williams next Tuesday.

Warrant against Jones was sworn out on the statements of three other university students, whose names police will not reveal, that they saw him near the scene of the crime, just west of the business district, on Thursday evening and saw Knight engage him in conversation. The negro insists that he is innocent of the crime.

With formal preferment of a charge against Jones police officials had released all others held in connection with the crime.

Erlanger Resident Company Will Assemble This Week

Miss Barbara Hastings, popular young actress who will play important roles in forthcoming Broadway successes to be presented during the season at the Erlanger theater by Charles L. Wagner's notable company of players.

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

This week will mark the assembling of one of the greatest modern-day organizations of resident players, a group which will give Atlanta a notable season of the latest Broadway comedies and dramas under the management and general direction of Charles L. Wagner, noted New York producer and concert manager, whose company will appear at the Erlanger theater in Atlanta.

Several members of the company, together with the director, are expected in Atlanta Wednesday and immediately after their arrival will begin actual rehearsals of "Paris Bound," the opening comedy which will be presented here the week beginning December 31. Some of the players signed by Mr. Wagner have been working on their lines for several weeks and will be "up" in several of the late New York shows which will be offered here during the Wagner engagement.

Edgar Runkle on Job.

Edgar Runkle, personal representative of Mr. Wagner, has been on the job here for more than a week and has been working with Lewis Haase, manager of the Erlanger theater, of Atlanta, as well as of the Erlanger theater in Birmingham, concerning details of the organization for the season of the latest plays which will be presented in the two cities by the Wagner Players.

Mr. Wagner, Mr. Haase and Mr. Runkle, after canvassing the situation in Atlanta and Birmingham, are convinced that the plan they will use in the two cities will be successful and will go a long way toward solving the "road show situation" as it exists throughout the country today.

To Alternate With Birmingham.

Under the new plan, Atlanta and Birmingham Erlanger theaters will play late road show hits and productions brought direct from New York alternately with the real Broadway productions which are to be given by the Wagner organization. While the Wagnerians are in Birmingham the best musical comedies and other road show attractions will appear at the Erlanger theater in Atlanta. While the Wagner company is appearing in Atlanta the other attractions will play the Birmingham house.

This plan gives the Wagner players two weeks for rehearsals and two weeks for presentations which will insure almost perfectly acted shows, as two weeks is all that is required for staging many of the best shows ever seen in New York.

Atlanta will get at least ten presentations by the Wagner players during the season, which begins December 31 and lasts until the middle of April. While no decision has been made as to any of the plays save "Paris Bound," the opening comedy, Mr. Wagner, through his association with leading producers of New York, will have available some of the greatest successes of the current season. He will bring some of these shows to Atlanta before they have been released for presentation in any other city of the country outside of New York.

Probable List of Shows.

Among the plays Mr. Wagner mentioned as the probable list from which ten are to be selected are the following:

"Paris Bound," by Phillip Barry; "The Torch Bearers," by George Kelley; "The Road to Rome," by Robert Sherwood; "Her Cardboard Lover," Jean Eagel's big success in which she became involved in a war with the Actors' Equity association; Frederick Lonsdale's sparkling comedy of English life, "Aren't We All?" the play in which Cyril Maude scored such a big success; "The Command to Love," "The Night Hostess," "This Thing Called Love;" "Coquette," the Helen Hayes success; "The Squall," a powerful drama; "Helena's Boys," Mrs. Fiske's big hit, and possibly "Ink" or "The Racket." Mr. Wagner will produce in Atlanta for the first time on any stage one of his new plays which probably will be "Dearly Beloved" by Kenneth Nicholson, author of "The Barker," and Sam Behrman, author of "The Second Man."

Leading Lady Not Known.

While no announcement has been made as to the identity of the leading woman of the Atlanta company, it is stated on good authority that she is one of the ablest and most popular of the younger New York stars. The leading man will be Kenneth Thomson, a young actor of wide experience whose last visit to Atlanta was with Mrs. Fiske in an all-star revival of "The Rivals." Mr. Thomson is expected in Atlanta December 22, coming direct from the Pacific coast where he has just completed a talking picture.

Others in the company will be Barbara Hastings, popular young actress who will play leads and second leads; Alden Gay, second leads; Margaret DeMille, daughter of William C. DeMille and niece of Cecil DeMille, who will play ingenue roles; Horace Sinclair, general director, who will play the Cyril Maude role in "Aren't We All?"; Irwin Thompson, a young actor, who is a "discovery" of Mr. Wagner's who directed the famous Triangle club shows at Princeton university and later played character juveniles for Mr. Wagner in companies in Buffalo and Rochester, N. Y.; Miss Margaret Wolfe and Leslie Virden, characters.

Consul at New York.

Mexico City, December 15.—(AP)—Enrique D. Ruiz, Mexican consul general to Germany, has been appointed consul general at New York, succeeding Arturo M. Elias. Ruiz has served as Mexican consul at Laredo and San Antonio, Texas.

TEST DEVICE TO SEND S O S AUTOMATICALLY

Knowledge of Codes Not Essential To Send Distress Signals.

Washington, December 15—(United News.)—An automatic broadcaster from which distress signals may be sent by aviators or navigators ignorant of codes was demonstrated before officers of the navy today.

This invention, the work of Lieutenant C. A. Perez, of the Cuban signal corps, is contained in a case slightly larger than a portable typewriter. It weighs only 15 pounds.

Latitude and longitude, call letters of the ship, and the S O S signal are repeated continuously by this device when a small electric switch is closed by the operator.

The apparatus, the inventor claims, may be attached successfully to any broadcasting set and is particularly adapted to use on commercial airplanes, small vessels and motor boats.

Ships and planes carrying radio equipment only for use in time of trouble, the inventor said, can use this apparatus and dispense with a radio operator.

Utilizing the same principle of electro magnetic induction employed by a stock ticker, the automatic sender has on its face a series of 18 rods placed in parallel, on which slides may be adjusted to 19 positions.

This combination of positions makes it possible for the operator, without knowledge of wireless code, to indicate the latitudinal and longitudinal position of his ship, sound his call letters and broadcast an S O S.

The navy is investigating the invention to determine whether it can be used on any service vessel or plane.

Mrs. Annie Miller Dies.

Waycross, Ga., December 15.—(Special.)—Mrs. Annie Miller, age 86, died here early Friday morning at the home of her niece, Mrs. R. L. Gorman, at 1351 State street. The body will be taken to Baxley, where funeral services will be conducted and interment will be made.

AIRPLANE CARRIER BREAKS RECORDS FOR OCEAN SPEED

San Pedro, Cal., December 15.—(AP)—The United States navy's huge airplane carrier Saratoga was hailed today as the speed queen of the seas and the most powerful ship afloat, following her performance in breaking the world's record for power recently set by her sister ship, the Lexington, and establishing a new speed mark for fighting ships.

Steaming over almost the same course on which the Lexington exactly one month ago set a maritime record, the Saratoga's turbo-electric plant yesterday developed a peak of 215,518 horsepower, which drove the 33,000-ton monster through the sea at a speed of 34.99 knots, or more than forty statute miles an hour. The Lexington's record was 209,751 horsepower and a speed of 34.82 knots.

The Lexington's high power marks were made on a full power endurance run of one hour, while the Saratoga's new world's record, made on her final acceptance trial, was confined to a one-mile course.

EDISON GOES BACK 42 YEARS IN TALK ON SLAB UNVEILING

Schenectady, N. Y., December 15. (AP)—Thomas A. Edison spoke over the radio from his New Jersey laboratory today to 20,000 shopmen and their families gathered at the unveiling of a tablet marking the two old shops he first occupied in this city 42 years ago.

From the beginning of those two shops grew the Schenectady plant of the General Electric company.

"If it were not for the unveiling of this tablet today," said Edison, "I should scarcely have realized that it is 42 years since I took the momentous step of moving the Edison machine works from New York to Schenectady. When we moved to Schenectady the electric light and power business was moving onward and upward by leaps and bounds. We were long on orders, but short on money. But we managed to get money and continued to grow at an amazing pace."

William H. Meadowcroft, the inventor's assistant, was another speaker.

MOUNTAIN MEMORIAL IS PRAISED BY HOUSER

Great Drawing Card for Atlanta, Says Convention Bureau Head.

In a letter to G. F. Willis, president of the Stone Mountain Memorial association, Fred Houser, secretary of the Atlanta Tourist and Convention bureau, said that he knew "of nothing that would draw more conventions and more visitors to Atlanta than the completion of this great work," referring to the carving on the mountain side.

Mr. Houser is a pioneer in the business of seeking out and bringing conventions to Atlanta. During the course of his efforts to get conventions here he has tested out every argument and attraction that could be devised and has traveled hundreds of thousands of miles in this and foreign countries. He says that Atlanta is universally known as the home of Bobby Jones and Stone Mountain, and that the suggestion of a visit to the memorial has been a great aid to him in bringing conventions here.

He stated that of the 64,296 people who attended conventions here during the past year practically all of them visited the mountain.

The complete letter is as follows:

"My Dear Mr. Willis—I recently saw in the daily press comments by Mr. P. S. Arkwright and Charles A. Wickersham on the value of Stone Mountain as a mecca for tourists and convention visitors. I want to say that I thoroughly agree with these gentlemen in every particular.

"In going after conventions, the announcement that a visit to the memorial taking shape on the mountain side would be included as part of their entertainment has been of great help to our committees in getting the conventions to decide in favor of Atlanta. One of our great phrases is 'Atlanta is the home of Bobby Jones and Stone Mountain' and we have found both to be of universal interest.

"During the past year Atlanta has entertained 293 conventions to date with an attendance of 64,296 people and practically all of them visited the mountain.

"We are very anxious to see the central group on the mountain completed as early as possible as we find that some of our visitors are seeing it in its uncompleted state for the second time.

"One of our largest conventions during the past year was the Interstate Post-Graduate Medical association. Dr. Edwin Henes, the secretary, said: 'You Atlanta people don't appreciate this mountain and memorial as much as you shou'. This is stupendous. This is wonderful. This is one of the greatest things I have ever seen.' Such comment means something when coming from a word traveler such as Dr. Henes.

"It is wonderful to see the enthusiasm displayed by visitors over this work. An Englishman recently visited our office for literature on the mountain. He said he had everything on the subject that was out at the studio but thought we might have additional matter as he wanted to send it home to England.

"These are only a few of many cases and I want to say that I know of nothing that would draw more conventions and more visitors to Atlanta than the completion of this great work.

"Sincerely,
"(Signed) FRED HOUSER."

Mrs. Eichberg Celebrates 87th Birthday Monday

Mrs. Joseph T. Eichberg, a veteran Atlanta woman, who has lived here since 1869, celebrates tomorrow at her residence, 872 Briarcliff road, her eighty-seventh birthday.

Her daughter, Miss Ruby Eichberg, with whom she lives, is to entertain informally all the friends who call between 3 and 5 o'clock Monday.

Mrs. Eichberg is the widow of the late Joseph T. Eichberg, who moved to Atlanta from New York soon after the civil war, in which he was a lieutenant of company H of the Sixth New York regiment. Believing that the south offered wonderful opportunities, he located in Atlanta, establishing a house-furnishing business at No. 1 Whitehall street, later moving to No. 90 of the same street. He died several years ago, highly esteemed by all who knew him. He was commander of Mitchell post, G. A. R., Atlanta.

MRS. J. T. EICHBERG.

Mrs. Eichberg was Caroline Bandman, of New York. She was married on September 26, 1858.

She was a charter member of the old Concordia club, taking a prominent part in the amateur theatricals of that organization with E. Rich, D. Rosenberg and E. Steinheimer. She was a charter member of the First Hebrew temple, built at the corner of Garnett and Forsyth streets, and was an active member of its choir. She was president of the Hebrew Ladies' Benevolent society for over 30 years and until it was merged with the Associated Charities.

She had nine children—six sons and three daughters, of whom seven are living. Alfred died several years ago, having been a well known architect in Atlanta and a 33rd degree Mason. Lincoln I. resides in St. Paul; Mrs. Morris Benjamin in Chicago; Mrs. Louis Clarke in Morristown, N. J.; Henry R. and Miss Ruby Eichberg are residents of Atlanta; James G. is in New Orleans, and Clarence died three years ago in Honolulu. M. H. Eichberg, a prominent business man of New York, has come to Atlanta to be with his mother for her birthday. All of Mrs. Eichberg's children went through the public schools of Atlanta.

This noble woman has been very active in charitable work of all kinds for the past half-century, having been identified with the activities of the Home for the Friendless, the Crittenden home and the Hebrew Orphans' asylum.

Daniel Bandman, well known as an actor of Shakespearean roles, was her brother.

A few years ago Mrs. Eichberg was crossing one of Atlanta's heavy traffic thoroughfares and, not noticing the traffic signal, moved ahead of its notice that the way was clear. Her attention being called to it by the traffic officer, she said, "Young man, I crossed the streets of Atlanta before you were born—but I am a good citizen, and I commend you for your activity."

Quite a number of Mrs. Eichberg's friends will join informally in the celebration of her birthday tomorrow. She is universally esteemed, regardless of creed or denomination, and numbers among her friends many of the most active of the church workers of all Atlanta denominations. She is enjoying remarkable health, being as active and as spry as one of half her age. She keeps in close contact with all charity work, and her public spirit manifests itself in every movement inaugurated for the good of the city.

12 LIQUOR-MAKING PLANTS CAPTURED BY PROHI AGENTS

Seizure and destruction in six counties of 12 whisky-making plants with a daily capacity ranging from 40 up to 150 gallons a day, were reported Friday and Saturday to H. P. Wright, deputy prohibition administrator for this district. Four of the raids were made in Lumpkin county, two each in Gilmer, Coweta and Paulding and one each in Gwinnett and Fayette county.

Wylie J. Cain, Marvin Brown and A. C. Cantrell were arrested in connection with one of the raids in Lumpkin county and later bound over under $500 bond each by United States Commissioner Griffith on a charge of violating prohibition laws, according to reports of agents who made the raid. This outfit, which consisted of a 50-gallon still, 40 fermenters, 7,500 gallons of beer and a quantity of tools, was valued at $1,000, according to the agent's report.

A tabulation of the apparatus seized and destroyed shows 8 stills, 102 fermenters and more than 20,000 gallons of beer, the whole having an estimated value of more than $3,000.

NEGRO MURDERER OF POLICE LEADER DENIED NEW TRIAL

Marshall Redding, a negro of Meriwether county, condemned to execution for killing W. H. Callaway, chief of police of Manchester, was denied a new trial in the case by the supreme court in a decision handed down Saturday. Redding was sentenced to death in the electric chair.

Redding is alleged to have killed the police official when the officer came to Redding's home to inquire about a son of Redding who had recently escaped from the chain gang.

Because of popular feeling against the negro in Manchester a change of venue was granted the negro for his trial and he was tried in Coweta county, where the jury returned verdict of guilty without recommendation which automatically carries the death sentence.

FIGHT IN COURTHOUSE MOVES JUDGE TO ACT

Attorney General's Aid in Tennessee Faces Contempt Charge.

Memphis, Tenn., December 15.—(AP) William Gerber, assistant county attorney general, was cited for contempt of court today by Judge A. S. Pittman, of the circuit court, as the result of a fistic encounter in the courthouse corridors yesterday between Gerber and Millsaps Fitzhugh, an attorney.

Gerber was ordered to appear Wednesday to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt. The citation was based on the ground of "willful misbehavior in the presence of the court, or so near thereto as to obstruct the administration of justice, and abuse of or unlawful interference with the proceedings of this court."

The encounter followed the calling for trial of a $10,000 damage suit against Gerber, brought by William D. Sisson, reporter for the Evening Appeal. Sisson charged that Gerber man-handled him near a polling place in the August primary.

Fitzhugh, counsel for Sisson, said that due to misapprehensions as to the attorneys representing Gerber, he had called the wrong lawyers and got their consent to a continuance. Later he was informed that other lawyers represented Gerber, and they would not consent to a continuance. He explained the situation to Judge Pittman Thursday. Fitzhugh took a voluntary non-suit yesterday and filed a new declaration. He said when he left the courtroom Gerber cursed him and drew back his fist, and Fitzhugh struck him. Gerber then struck Fitzhugh, who claimed several others jumped on him.

Gerber, in a statement today, said he felt he had been "jockeyed" with and had stated in the corridor that the bringing of the suit and then not to try it constituted an "outrage." Later, he said, Fitzhugh struck at him. He denied that Fitzhugh had been "ganged." He characterized Fitzhugh's calling of the wrong attorneys before requesting continuance by consent as a "trick." Judge Pittman said in court yesterday that he believed Fitzhugh had acted in good faith.

Excess Sobriety Proves Downfall Of Convict Trio

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—There is such a thing as an escaped convict conducting himself in too serious and sober a manner.

Patrolmen Brennan and Cook were riding up Massachusetts avenue early in the morning when they saw three men dressed from head to foot in blue denim. The trio walked with the weary, solemn air of men who after moving iron rails all day were on their way home with two things in mind, food and a chair with not too much wood in it.

"The fool outfits they get into for these all night masquerade parties," commented one officer.

"Masquerade, my eye," returned his partner. "Can't you see they're cool sober?"

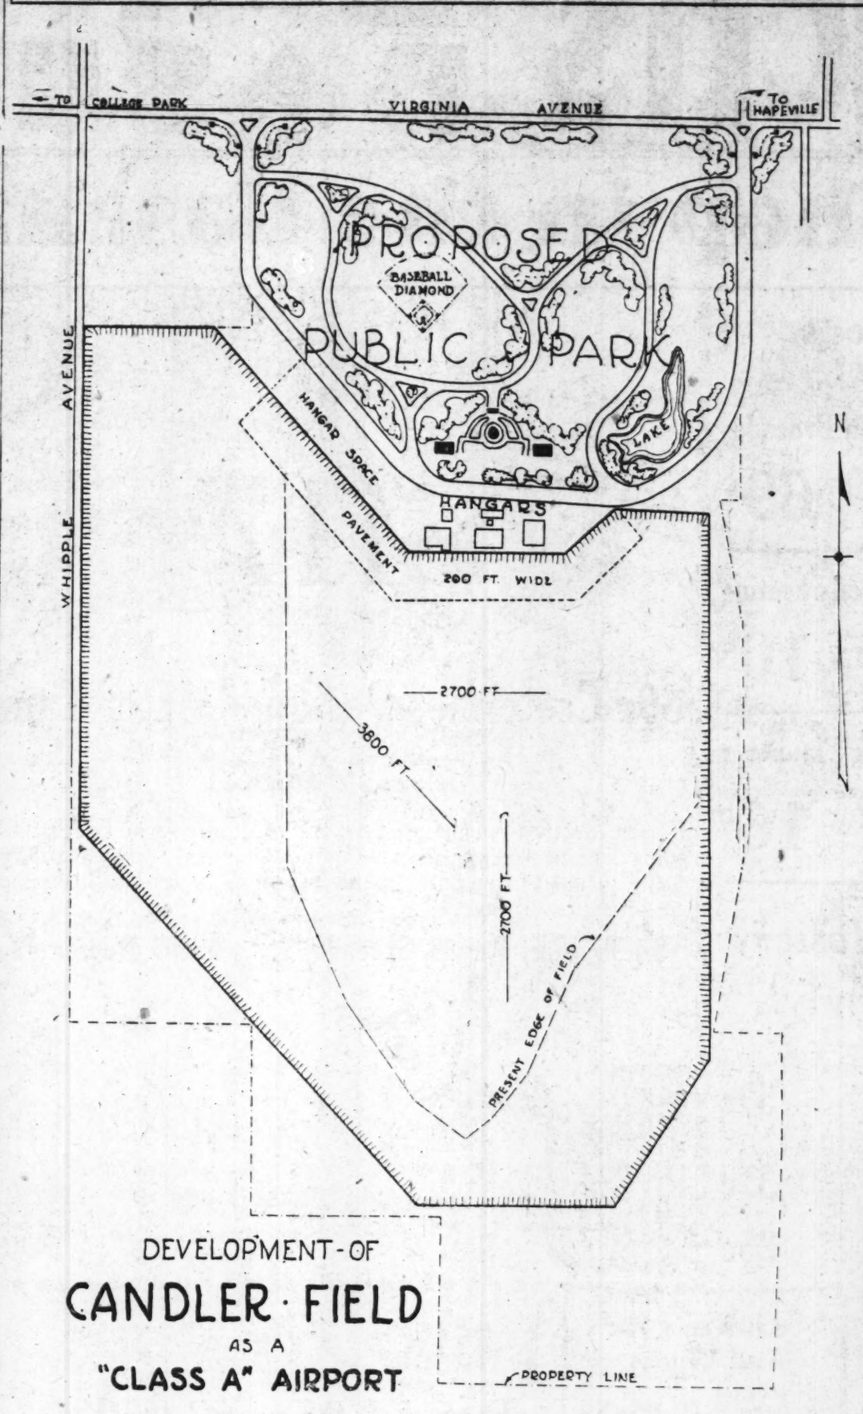

They took the three to the police station and began to ask questions.

"Aw, what's the use," sighed one. "I don't know whether to say these two is my kinsfolks or just acquaintances. You see we was thinking so much about food that we forget to make up our tales in case we got picked up. We just broke out of stir down at Lorton, Virginia."

Then the tale was told. By scaling a hot steam pipe at 1 o'clock in the morning, Joseph Daniel Oswald, 30, sentenced for grand larceny; Patrick O'Toole, sentenced for the same thing, and Roy Hanford, 31, up for receiving stolen property, managed to reach a small window. The pipe raised blisters on their hands and after they squeezed through the window five prison guards with rifles opened fire on them.

"That hot steam pipe was a tough racket," Oswald said, "but the guards, they couldn't hit a barn."

Atlanta's Airport as It Would Appear Under Proposed Development Program

The plan for the proposed development of Candler air field, adopted by the airport committee on Friday and to be presented to council Monday, is shown in the above drawing. The proposed public park, shown at the north end of the field, is for the future development of that section when, and if, it is taken into the city limits of Atlanta, and is not included in the estimate for the urgent development of the field. The present field indicated by the dotted line marked "present edge of field," would be increased to a landing space within the heavier solid line under the proposed development program. The hangar development is shown just under the proposed park.

would give a runway of 3,800 feet, the longest on the field under the proposed development.

Plans Not Extravagant.

Alderman Hartsfield pointed out that the plans as proposed by the airport committee are not extravagant or over-ambitious, for some cities the same size as Atlanta are expending or will spend five times that sum for the improvement of their airports. For instance, he cited, Dallas, Texas, paid $325,000 for the purchase price of Love field, which comprises 173 acres to Candler field's 297.

Atlanta and Fulton county have spent $80,000 on the field during the past three years, Mr. Hartsfield said. The cost of the proposed development of the airport should be prorated between the county and city, and his idea of the share each might stand would be that the city should purchase the field at a cost of $100,000 and buy the necessary material for the additional sewerage and lighting improvements, the county to stand the balance by furnishing labor to do the proposed work, he said.

Mr. Hartsfield said that the adoption of the general plan as suggested by the committee would give a working basis for the development of the field, and, he pointed out that it would be only a matter of five years or so before that section is taken into the city.

Under the general plan as outlined by the airport committee, the tract enclosed by the broken line marked "present edge of field" would be enlarged so as to take in all of the territory enclosed by the heavier line marked in order to give Atlanta a landing field of a size sufficient to handle the air traffic. The three runways are indicated in the picture of the proposed development by the lines and footages in the center of the present landing space, the figures showing the northwest-southeast runway of 3,800 feet, and the north-south and east-west runways of 2,700 feet each.

Prevent Collisions.

All of the landing space would be graded so as to provide for no more than a 1 per cent grade on the field, to the end that collisions between planes may be avoided on the landing space. At present, a pilot in a plane on one side of the field cannot see another plane on the other end of the field, and collisions are sometimes narrowly averted between landing and taking-off planes.

Plans for the improvement call for a concrete apron, a 200-foot wide pavement, in front of the hangar line, to keep down the dust, and for the extension of the hangar space to the northwest so as to furnish room for the growth of the industry, operators of the air lines pointing out that additional hangar space is needed at once.

The proposed public park at the north end of the field, between the hangar line and Virginia avenue, would include baseball diamonds, tennis courts and a small lake. Three driveways would be provided into the airport, one on each side of the park, and Whipple avenue as the third.

SCHOOLS MAY LOSE ACCREDITED LISTING

final warning that the two schools will be dropped from the list at the next meeting unless the heavy overloading of academic teachers can be relieved, the library enlarged, and the overcrowding of the two schools in one building adjusted. The committee reviewing the Georgia schools reported that they do not believe that a similar condition can be found anywhere in the south, and the administrative authorities and the people should be called upon to make the necessary arrangements to remove this condition, Dr. Stewart said.

Cheney Congratulated.

The Stewart letters congratulated Mr. Cheney upon the improved record shown by his pupils in college under the unfavorable conditions set out, and pointed out that neither Mr. Cheney nor his faculty nor students should be required to work under the present arrangements. "We were glad to note the decrease in the number of failures for the last three or four years," the letter to Mr. Cheney said.

The letter to Mr. Smith congratulated the Boys' High principal upon the high record maintained by his pupils in college under the unfavorable conditions. The letters to Mr. Smith and Mr. Cheney both said that the subcommittee acting on the two schools first voted to drop the schools as it was warned last year, but "we succeeded in having the matter extended for another year."

The letter from Stewart to Miss Jessie Muse, principal of Girls' High school, warned Miss Muse on overloading in some of her classes, but added that the southern commission was complimentary on the high record maintained by Girls' High for the last four years in colleges, with 1925, 2.9; 1926, 3.9; 1927, 2.1, and 1928, 5.2.

The letter to W. C. Lowe, principal of Commercial High, gave warning similar to that given to Boys' and Tech High schools.

THREE BADLY BURNED IN INDIANAPOLIS BLAST

Indianapolis, December 15.—(AP)—Three workmen were seriously burned, perhaps fatally, in an explosion which wrecked part of the corn products plant of the Knefler Bates Manufacturing company early today. Damage was estimated at $200,000.

The injured men were Thomas Klein, Carl Jeffries and Lindsey Hewett.

of overhead expense, so that we now know that every penny taken in at this show will be used for our Christmas charity, in full."

LIONEL H. KEENE.

In addition there is a committee composed of more than one hundred of Atlanta's most prominent citizens.

"The Elks feel called upon to do more than ever in their history this year, owing to the great many calls of distress," said Mr. Broyles, "and the further fact that there is no large movement this year to give to the poor at Christmas time. Therefore, they are asking the public to unite with them in the great municipal Christmas tree, which will provide for the little children who would otherwise have no Yuletide joys, and to take care of all the poor families who otherwise would lack even necessities of life on this joyous occasion.

"Tickets to the performance are only $1 each, and are on sale by all Elks, by the fire and police departments. They can also be bought at the box offices of all theaters in Atlanta and at the following downtown stores: E. E. Limbaugh barber shop, in the Healey building; Weinstock's, in the Peachtree Arcade, and Sam Asher's, on Peachtree street."

Methodist Bishops Of South To Hold Meet in Nashville

Dallas, Texas, December 15.—(AP) The spring meeting of the college of bishops, Methodist Episcopal church, south, will be held in Nashville, Tenn., the college in session here, decided today.

At the same time Bishop John M. Moore, Dallas, secretary, announced that an adjourned session will be held in Memphis, Tenn., January 1-3, when the missionary council meets.

Reports on activities from foreign fields were presented to the meeting. Bishops U. V. Darlington discussed Europe; James Cannon, Africa and Brazil, and W. N. Ainsworth, China. All reported Southern Methodism is making material advances in those sectors.

has been poor and luck has run against the house so that there is a deficit in the gambling capital safe of around $600,000.

No taxes have been levied for many years and life has been pleasant for the inhabitants. Lately, however, there has been much criticism because the casino financiers neglected to keep up private property.

Both sides telegraphed their troubles to Prince Louis, who is living in Paris. His answers seemed ambiguous and his critics thought he was trying to keep the favor of both parties. So they used all their influence and forced the council to resign.

$150,000,000 Aircraft Unit Organized in Big Merger With W. E. Boeing at Head

Holding Company Takes Stock of Airplane, Engine and Air Transportation Concerns.

New York, December 15.—(AP)—Organization of the United Aircraft & Transport corporation, a $150,000,000 holding company owning stock of subsidiary airplane, engine and air transportation companies, was announced today. It represents a consolidation of Pratt & Whitney Aircraft corporation, of Hartford, Conn., manufacturers of airplane motors; Chance Vought corporation, of Long Island City, New York, manufacturers of planes, and Boeing Airplane & Transport corporation, of Seattle, Wash., manufacturers of planes and operator of air mail, express and passenger routes.

William E. Boeing, president of Boeing Airplane and Transport, will be chairman of the board and Frederick B. Rentschler, president of Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, will be president. Chance Vought will be vice president and Charles W. Deeds, secretary and treasurer.

The new corporation, organized under the auspices of the National City company, of New York, and the Pacific National bank, of Seattle, Wash., will own all stock of the Pratt & Whitney Aircraft corporation, Boeing Airplane company, Boeing Air Transport, Inc., Chance Voight corporation, and more than 70 per cent of the stock of Pacific Air Transport, these companies being active in the major lines of aeronautical endeavor—engine production, plane construction and transportation of mail, express and passengers. Managements and official personnels of subsidiary companies will be continued.

Authorized capitalization of the corporation will consist of 1,000,000 shares of 6 per cent preferred stock of $50 par value, and 2,500,000 shares of common stock with outstanding capitalization consisting of about $12,000,000 par value preferred stock and 1,500,000 shares of common.

Entire common stock of Pratt & Whitney will be acquired through issuance of the new corporation's stock.

Directors of the corporation, in addition to the officers, will be Colonel Edward A. Deeds, director of National City bank; Philip G. Johnson, president Boeing Air Transport; Charles F. Kettering, vice president General Motors corporation; Kenneth R. Kingsbury, president Standard Oil company of California; Charles K. Knickerbocker, vice president; Griffin Wheel company, Chicago; William B. Mayo, chief engineer, Ford Motor company; George J. Mead, vice president, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft; Gurney E. Newlin, of Los Angeles; Gordon S. Rentschler, of New York; Joseph P. Ripley, vice president, National City company, and Orville W. Tupper, secretary and treasurer, Boeing Aircraft and Transport.

The consolidation will bring under the one control manufacturer of engines holding 12 world records and of planes now in current production for the United States navy and holders of four world records.

BILL ASKS $500,000 TO BUILD RETREAT FOR PRESIDENTS

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—President Coolidge's suggestion for the provision of a week-end retreat for presidents and their families was taken up today by Representative Florence P. Kahn, republican, California, who introduced a bill seeking to make $500,000 available for that purpose.

"The lives of the president and first lady are so formal and restricted," she said, "that they do not only need a summer home as a retreat from the strenuous life in Washington, but a place where they might seek rest over week ends, so that they shall retain their health and keep fresh for their many duties."

The measure would provide for a residence, office buildings and grounds for a suburban residence.

COUPLE ARRESTED ON FIVE FORGERY, ONE FRAUD CHARGE

Baltimore, Md., December 15.—(AP) William Gempp, and a 27-year-old woman who claimed to be his bride, were held in default of bail after being arrested today on five charges of forgery and one defrauding a hotel company of its bill.

Gempp, said to be wanted in Richmond, Va., for jail-breaking, was arrested yesterday in the office of an apartment building after being knocked unconscious by a patrolman's fist when he pointed a pistol at the officer.

The woman said she came here three weeks ago from Charlottesville, Va., where she worked in a tobacco factory. She gave the name, Mrs. J. E. Garber, an alias used by Gempp, and said they were married in Baltimore after getting a marriage license in Towson. Magistrate Cadden pointed out that this could not be done legally and sought to learn whether she was really married to Gempp or had been duped.

Mrs. W. D. Wilson Buried

The remains of Mrs. W. D. Wilson, mother of Mrs. Hoke Smith, were laid to rest in Sunnyside cemetery here Saturday. Rev. George M. Acree and Rev. Andrew Caraker conducted the funeral which was a simple service at the home.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation if you write to me, Eugene M. Pulleo, Carpenter, 352C Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of the rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.—(adv.)

ROBINSON WOOS BIG-EARED VAMP ON PLANET MARS

London, December 15.—(United News.)—Dr. Hugh Mansfield Robinson sat at a radio set at midnight and listened for a message from Mars—50,000,000 miles away.

The doctor was confident that this time his attempt to communicate with the distant plane would be successful.

He told the United News that his big-eared girl friend Coomarura had tipped him off telepathically that "Martians are agog and doing their utmost to get through."

At 11:30 p. m. a radio station at Rio de Janiero, Brazil, sent forth the "God is love" message from Dr. Robinson to Coomarura.

A 30-minute interval was allowed for Coomarura to begin her transmission of a reply to the earthly message.

Two radio experts and other witnesses were at Dr. Robinson's office in Spital square, Whitechapel. They tuned in with a specially constructed receiver on a 40,000-meter wavelength.

BILL INTRODUCED FOR IMPROVEMENT OF ARKANSAS RIVER

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—A bill to authorize the expenditure of $5,000,000 by the secretary of war for the improvement of the channel of the Arkansas river from its mouth on the Mississippi to Little Rock, Ark., was introduced today by Representative Ragon, democrat, Arkansas.

Ragon said that the measure is intended to provide funds for the initial work on the program to make the Arkansas river navigable from its mouth to Muskogee, Okla., by larger river boats. The measure would provide for a 6-foot channel.

In another bill introduced by Ragon to amend the flood control act of 1928 the secretary of war would be authorized to relocate a levee in Conway district No. 1 between Conway and Morilton, Ark. He said the flood control act failed to give the secretary authority to relocate levees where it was found their old location was impracticable for reconstruction.

CHINA TO OBSERVE SOLAR NEW YEAR FOR FIRST TIME

Shanghai, China, December 15.—(AP) Seeking to enforce nation-wide observance of the solar calendar which was adopted in November, the nationalist government today ordered that New Year's celebration be held on January 1, 1929, the same as western nations. This order marked the abandonment of the centuries old celebration in accordance with the Lunar calendar.

The New Year's day will be observed throughout the nation as a holiday, all provincial and national government activities ceasing and schools and business houses closing. The government also ordered that mass meeting be held in celebration of the new calendar.

It was ejected that the order would be reluctantly observed because of wholesale opposition on the part of the masses to changing calendars.

BABY RECOGNIZES UNCLE AS THUG; FOILS HOLDUP

Los Angeles, December 15.—(AP)—It may take a lot to scare some bandits but the secret of four-year-old Dorothy Hoffman's scheme is merely two words spoken in glee; "Hello, uncle."

It all happened this way. There were a lot of customers in the grocery store of Frank Smalley when two bearded men entered the building and lined the shoppers and proprietor against a wall facing the threat of two revolvers.

One of the men scooped about $12 from the till and then started to search the customers. A little girl's face popped out of the line, her eyes scanned one bandit's countenance and then she called her greeting. The effect was thorough. Both men turned and fled.

At Dorothy's home her mother admitted a description of the bandit whom her daughter greeted resembled an uncle. Deputy sheriffs are hunting for the man.

BILL TO IMPRISON ARMED 'LEGGERS OFFERED IN HOUSE

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—A unique prohibition bill to provide prison sentences of six months to 10 years for bootleggers who carry firearms was introduced today by Representative McKeown, democrat, Oklahoma.

McKeown's measure provides the same penalty for any person manufacturing intoxicating liquors who has firearms or explosives "in his possession or within his reach."

The bill provides a six-month to five-year sentence for any person who sells or gives away under any devise of sale intoxicating liquors to a minor.

PEASANTS RECEIVE NEARLY 80 PER CENT OF RUMANIA VOTES

Bucharest, Rumania, December 15. (AP)—Results of the national elections held today to elect two-thirds of the membership of the senate will not be known until two days and possibly not before Monday. There were 150 seats at stake, about three score other senators being subject to popular vote.

The final figures of the ballots cast in the election for the lower house of parliament three days ago as tabulated tonight show a total of 2,785,603 votes. The peasant party received 2,200,000 or nearly 80 per cent. The liberals came next with 185,000 and the Hungarians were third with 151,000.

Celebration Planned.

Local trade board directors are outlining a program for the celebration of the completion of the paving on the National highway, Macon to the Florida line with the connecting links in Turner and Crisp county now almost ready to open up. This program will include participation of several counties along the line and the likelihood of a huge barbecue somewhere between Cordele and Ashburn.

Honored by Local Automobile Men

ERNEST G. BEAUDRY, President.

T. P. HICKS, First Vice President.

CLARENCE KNOWLES, Treasurer.

A decided note of optimism was sounded Friday night as the Atlanta Automobile Dealers association met at the Atlanta Athletic club to review the past, look to the future and pick its leaders for the coming year. This assembly, which saw the election of Earnest G. Beaudry, veteran Ford dealer, as president, was one of particular celebration as it marked the tenth anniversary of the association, which is the biggest in the south and now a member-group of the National Automobile Dealers association.

The annual report dealt extensively with the success of the 1928 automobile show and with the plans for even a bigger and better one to be held this winter as a stimulus to trade and interest in the new models which are being introduced by practically every large manufacturer. To R. H. Martin, chairman of the 1928 show committee, went the lion's share of the praise for the exhibition's success and optimistic views were taken of the forthcoming show which is to be staged by a committee headed by Charles M. LeRoux.

Mr. Beaudry, who takes the gavel from H. H. Alexander, whose ability is attested by the success of his regime, is the oldest licensed Ford dealer in the south, having received his license in 1916 when Henry Ford inaugurated his present plan of motor car merchandising.

T. P. Hicks, who was chosen first vice president, is the general manager of the Auto-Car company and a man who has been active in the work of the association for some years. Clarence Knowles, who was selected as honorary treasurer, is head of the Nash Sales company, which bears his name, and C. F. Watson, newly-elected honorary secretary, is general manager of the Reo Sales and Service, Inc., and another veteran in the association. R. M. Schnore and John D. Aiken occupy the positions of second and third vice president, respectively.

The newly-elected directors of the association are Barney Stodgill, S. B. Dodge, Mark G. Pope and Wiley Moore.

Loneliness Cause Of Girl's Suicide, Police Believe

New York, December 15.—(AP)—Loneliness and fear of illness were believed by police today to have caused Miss Leila Kerr, student flyer, to shoot herself to death in her suite in the Hotel Ambassador.

A note, found in the pocket of a coat, read:

"I have suffered a stroke. . . There is no one left since the family is gone and my brother died . . . he died in the war. . . I occupy a two-room suite on the 18th floor of a large hotel."

Her brother, Walter, was killed in the world war and her father, mother and a sister died several years ago. She was the sole survivor of the family.

The body was identified by her uncle, John B. Kerr, of New York city, president of the New York, Ontario & Western Railway company.

Miss Kerr was born in West Orange, N. J., but registered at the hotel last September as from Chatham, Mass. Since the deaths of other members of her family, Mr. Kerr said, she had become melancholy and virtually a recluse.

Flying was her recreation, police said, and she had twice crossed the continent in airplanes. A student's flying certificate dated last July was found among her effects.

Miss Kerr had not been seen about the hotel since late Thursday. When the manager, Theodore Kroll, entered her suite with a pass key last night he found the body on a bed, clad in an afternoon frock. Near her was a silver-handled pistol and a box of cartridges. There was a bullet wound in the right side of her head.

Stalks of Corn Become Newspaper in Six Hours

:: NEW EPOCH IN PAPER INDUSTRY FORESEEN ::

Danville, Ill., December 15.—(AP)—From corn stalks to newspaper in six hours was an epitome of the achievement of modern science today in the publication of the Danville Commercial News.

A special edition of 100 pages printed on corn stalk paper was issued by the Commercial News, it being the first time such paper has been used by a newspaper.

This unique edition actually was printed on paper made from stalks grown on farms surrounding Danville. It was described as heralding a new epoch in the paper industry as well as creating a new market for farm products which once were merely waste.

The corn stalk pulp was manufactured by a Danville company and made into paper by a manufacturing company at Kalamazoo, the entire process requiring only six hours of actual operation. Discovery of the use of corn stalks for paper was made by Dr. Bela Dorner, of Hungary.

Almost simultaneously with the publication of the Commercial News, the Prairie Farmer, national farm magazine published at Chicago, printed its 260,000-copy edition on corn stalk paper, with the remark that this issue was truly a "from the farm back to the farm" movement.

U. S. WILL REOPEN CLOSED CONSULATE AT NANKING SOON

Nanking, China, Deceber 15.—(AP) The United States consulate which was closed on March 24, 1927, as a result of the Nanking disorders will reopen within a week.

The reopening was originally scheduled to take place some time in October but this did not materialize because of a disagreement between Chinese and American officials concerning details of the ceremony to be followed on the occasion.

Edwin S. Cunningham, consul general at Shanghai, announced today that it was now planned to reopen the consulate without ceremonies of any kind, the American official merely returning and resuming his duties.

HELDMAN JAILED IN WIFE'S SLAYING

Suspected of Slaying Mate Alleged To Have Killed Merchant.

Canton, Ohio, December 15.—The state of Ohio suspects that Wilbur Heldman may have killed his pretty young wife rather than surrender her to the law for murdering her traducer.

On the strength of that suspicion Heldman has been jailed. He sat in his cell here tonight meditating upon the strange fate which had overtaken him and recounted for reporters how his wife had confessed to the killing of Vernard Fearn, a coal dealer, and later committed suicide while he was taking her to the sheriff's office in his automobile.

Heldman's story was the same police had accepted since Thursday night, when Heldman drove up to the jail with his wife's body.

Today, however, discrepancies were discovered in the young furnace salesman's story. He was ordered brought in for further questioning and as he stepped into the sheriff's office he was arrested and charged with "suspicion with the murder of Mrs. Haldman." Henry Harter, the county prosecutor, demanded high bail, but refused to reveal the nature of the evidence which led to Heldman's arrest. Bond was fixed at $25,000.

Body Riddled with Bullets.

The story goes back to the night of December 6, when Fearn was called to the door of his home by a mysterious young woman and his body riddled with bullets. The girl was Margaret Heldman. She had known Fearn, himself married and the father of a 9-year-old girl, before she married Heldman.

The next episode was explained in a suicide note written by Mrs. Heldman to her husband. He found it in a waste basket. The note revealed intimacies between Mrs. Haldman and Fearn and said Fearn had threatened her and "made her life a hell on earth." It intimated Mrs. Heldman killed the coal dealer and Heldman confronted her and obtained a confession.

Then began the trip to the sheriff's office. On the outskirts of the city, according to Heldman, his wife drew the gun with which she slew Fearn and killed herself.

Her relatives refused to believe Margaret would take her own life. They insisted that Heldman's story be carefully scrutinized and they told of the Heldmans' love life. Heldman, they charged, often beat Margaret. He was insanely jealous and on several occasions "kicked her out of the house." Mrs. Roy Pierce, of Canton, Mrs. Heldman's sister, said Heldman often threatened to kill Margaret and "fix things so it would appear as though she committed suicide."

Conflict Over Gun.

The gun with which Mrs. Heldman and Fearn were killed has been the chief source of conflict. Heldman said it was his and that he bought it from a mail order house. Sheriff Edward Gibson said he learned it was bought in Canton.

Heldman asked his wife before she confessed Fearn's murder where the gun was. He said he had suspected her. She told him it was in her hat box and he said he found it there. Later, in another statement, he said his wife told him she left the weapon in a hotel in Akron, where she went after killing Fearn.

Heldman was subjected to two hours' intensive questioning tonight. The sheriff said he was calm and unruffled and clung to his story of his wife's suicide. He accounted for several discrepancies in his previous statements by saying he was hurried by a host of questioners and was somewhat unnerved by his wife's action.

After the cross-examination he was returned to jail. He was booked as a coroner's witness and meanwhile the body of his 21-year-old wife was en route to Dubois, Pa., for funeral services and burial.

She "Wanted a Career."

Mrs. Heldman was born here. She attended school two and a half years and decided she "wanted a career." The search for success took her to Canton, where she lived with her sister. Then she met Fearn, who was a rising young coal dealer at Waco, a suburb. There were indiscretions, according to the girl's suicide letter, but Fearn was forgotten when she met and married Heldman. After their marriage, however, Fearn turned up again. He threatened to expose her unless she resumed the old relationship, Heldman said his wife told him. Then the Heldmans quarreled, frequently and violently. They separated several times and were reconciled. They finally moved from Canton, hoping to find contentment and happiness elsewhere. They located in Lorain. Mrs. Heldman returned to Canton to visit her sister and it is believed that on this trip she encountered Fearn, who was slain a few days later.

Heldman voluntarily surrendered himself today when he learned Coroner T. C. McQuate wanted to hold him on a suspicious person charge.

The coroner, in explaining the sudden change in plans from yesterday, when both he and Sheriff Ed Gibson had announced their satisfaction that Heldman had given a straightforward account, said he did not want to intimate that "this chap had not told the truth," but merely wanted a detailed record of the movements of Heldman and his wife, Margaret, 21.

Handwriting in a suicide note she had written at their Lorain home several days ago and then thrown away, evidently in reconsideration, was found to be that of Mrs. Heldman, the sheriff said. Mrs. Mary Fearn, widow of the slain 35-year-old coal dealer also has positively identified Mrs. Heldman as the killer.

At the request of members of the Heldman family a second autopsy upon the body will be held at Dubois, Pa., probably tomorrow. Prosecuting Attorney Henry Harter received word today that the family had employed a physician to conduct a private post mortem. Coroner McQuate will be present.

WORLD AIR POLICE PROPOSED AT LUGANO

Lugano, December 15—(AP)—League of Nations circles today had under discussion a proposal that wars be prevented by an international air police force. The plan was submitted to the league by Colonel Clifford B. Harmon, of New York, president of the International League of Aviators.

Foreign Minister Briand of France is understood to be enthusiastic over the proposal. The project will probably be discussed by the league commissions studying international security and methods of strengthening machinery for the consolidation of peace. Many persons believe that a weakness of the league is its lack of a police force empowered to act to settle conflicts when pacific means fail.

Colonel Harmon explained that the underlying idea of the plan was that all countries would place at the disposal of the league 10 per cent of their trained pilots. These pilots would serve as units of an air force of peace which would always be ready for mobilization where war threatened.

The present dispute between Paraguay and Bolivia was cited by Colonel Harmon as an instance where an international air force operating under the league or the Kellogg-Briand pact renouncing war would be a powerful deterrent. He believes that a thousand aviators surrounding a hostile country could force it to submit to the will of the league.

One difficulty seen by league circles in the project was the task of deciding which was the aggressor nation in an international crisis.

GOVERNOR LONG REFUSES RESPITE TO LOVE SLAYERS

Baton Rouge, La., December 15.—(AP)—Governor Long declared today in a prepared statement that "under no circumstances" would he commute to life imprisonment the death sentence of Ada Bonner Lebouef and Dr. Thomas E. Dreher, sentenced to hang on January 5 for the murder of the woman's husband.

After an appeal made to him in behalf of the condemned couple, Governor Long issued this statement:

"In order that my position may be clearly understood, I wish to say at this time that I have no intention of commuting the lives of Mrs. Lebouef and Dr. Dreher, no matter what the recommendation of the pardon board may be. Under no circumstances, as I view the case now, will I sign a commutation from death to life imprisonment, even though recommended by the state pardon board."

The board will consider the case for a second time on December 20.

NIECE OF MELLON WEDS HITCHCOCK, WORLD POLO STAR

New York, December 15.—(AP)—Mrs. Alexander Laughlin, Jr., grandniece of Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, and Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., international polo player, were married late today at the Hotel Plaza. The Rev. Dr. Hugo Kerr performed the ceremony.

Mrs. Laughlin was formerly Margaret Mellon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Mellon, of Pittsburgh. Her first husband died in 1926.

Hitchcock is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, of Long Island and Aiken, S. C. He has figured for years in the defense of the international polo trophy and was captain of the team that defeated the Argentine four this fall. During the world war he served in the American air force in France and, after bringing down several enemy planes, was himself shot down and made prisoner in a German camp from which he escaped. He attained the rank of major.

3,000 Back at Work.

Tarrytown, N. Y., December 15.—(AP)—Three thousand employees of the Chevrolet Motor company and the Fisher Bodies corporation who have been laid off since November 1, have been notified to return to work Monday morning.

U. S. IMMIGRATION OFFICER ARRESTED IN DEATH OF MAN

New Orleans, December 15.—(AP)—William J. Raymond, of the United States immigration service border patrol, was charged late today with manslaughter in connection with the death of Raphael Gonzales in a police cell.

Gonzales was arrested yesterday shortly after an altercation with Raymond on a charge of drunkenness and lodged in a cell. This morning he was found dead from what the coroner charged was a hemorrhage and skull fracture.

The police found Gonzales propped against a building, apparently drunk. Raymond told the police that he and a fellow officer were questioning an alien when Gonzales came up to them drunk and that he pushed him away, not thinking he would fall over. He fell to the pavement, Raymond said, and they picked him up and leaned him against the building and called the police.

Two witnesses, Pasquale Scontrena and Joseph Alessandro, however, told the police that Raymond had struck the man on the jaw and knocked him to the pavement.

FASCIST SECRETARY FROWNS ON ROTARY IN NEW CIRCULAR

Rome, December 15.—(AP)—Augusto Turati, secretary of the fascist party, has issued a circular to all provincial secretaries the sense of which is that fascists who belong to Rotary clubs and wear a Rotary button hole emblem instead of a fascist seal should be admonished or disciplined by the local party authorities.

The circular is another step in a campaign of the ultra-fascist press against Rotary as being somehow connected with Masonry.

"Imagine a fascist giving the Rotarian salute," remarked the newspaper L'Impero, "imagine a fascist collaborating for the benefit of humanity with his Rotarian brothers in France and America. Imagine a fascist Rotarian solving the problem of obedience to foreign Rotary headquarters."

VANDERBILT MAN VICTIM OF ATTACK BY TWO PROWLERS

Nashville, Tenn., December 15.—(AP)—George Bachman, 19, student of engineering at Vanderbilt university, is in a critical condition from concussion of the brain sustained when he was attacked by two strange men in the back yard of the home of his sister, Mrs. H. G. White, at 1:30 o'clock this morning.

Bachman could not say whether or not his assailants were negroes.

The young man, who lives at the home of Mr. and Mrs. White, was studying when he heard noises in the back yard. He went to investigate and saw a man running toward the back fence. He ran after the man. Just then the other stranger attacked the young freshman student from behind.

Bachman is a native of Rome, Ga., though the present home of his parents is said to be in Arkansas.

NEGRO ROBBERS GET $400 IN CASH AND IN CLOTHES

Money and clothes to the value of more than $400 were obtained by two young negro bandits who late Saturday afternoon held up and robbed L. R. Floyd, of 1183 South Moreland avenue, a driver for a local dry cleaning plant, as he was making his rounds on Ponce de Leon avenue near Durant place.

Floyd reported to Detectives Blair and Anderson that he had just entered a residence to make a delivery and had returned to his truck when the negroes drew up beside his machine, in a dilapidated automobile. Both jumped from the car and while one threatened him with a pistol the second took his cash collections, amounting to about $180 and also seized several garments valued at approximately $250. The robbery completed they escaped in the ramshackle "flivver." The detectives were furnished with a good description of the pair.

Committee To Effect Uniform Plan To Mark Airways Is Appointed

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—Creation of an air marking committee for the purpose of bringing about uniform airway markings throughout the United States was announced today by William F. Whiting, secretary of commerce. The committee will be composed of Orville Wright, Charles A. Lindbergh, Henry Ford, Harry F. Guggenheim, F. Trubee Davison, W. Irving Glover, Edward P. Warner, William P. MacCracken, Jr., Charles F. Marvin and Lester D. Gardner.

GERMANY-POLAND FUSS ALARMS LEAGUE

Lugano, Switzerland, December 15.—(AP)—What Former Minister Briand of France tonight called a "clap of thunder" broke over the closing public session of the fifty-third council of the League of Nations this afternoon in a bitter clash between Foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany and Foreign Minister Zaleski of Poland.

The storm burst during discussion of the treatment of German minorities in Polish upper Silesia.

It was felt generally in league circles that only the adroitness of M. Briand, as presiding officer, prevented the situation from developing into a genuine crisis within the league itself for Dr. Stresemann even went to the extent of threatening by implication Germany's resignation from the league.

Zaleski accused the Germans in Silesia of fomenting agitation against the Polish state and by their political activities actually endangering peace.

Dr. Stresemann, trembling with anger, pounded the table and shouted at Zaleski in German: "Enough! Enough!"

When finally he himself was called upon to speak he accused Saleski of seeking to open old wounds and said that if minorities were denied the right of freely appealing to the league, one of the main reasons for the league's existence would have disappeared.

In the intervening discussion just before adjournment of the council, M. Briand made a statement which has highly pleased the Germans from Dr. Stresemann down, so much so that it is regarded by them as a powerful affirmation of Franco-German understanding.

"Nothing," said the French foreign minister, "can ever induce the council or the league to abandon the sacred cause of minorities."

He urged giving careful attention to every petition and of even seeking swifter methods of treatment.

Dr. Stresemann made himself champion before the league of minority peoples now living under different flags in consequence of the repartition of Europe after the world war. The Germans later expressed belief that he will return to Berlin with his political position greatly strengthened there. Briand's indirect support of the German position on minorities is deemed so important that the Germans believe it will serve to appease the minorities, who number some 40,000,000 throughout Europe, as a whole.

Just after final adjournment of the 53rd session of the council, the "big three" statesmen, Sir Austen Chamberlain, M. Briand and Dr. Stresemann, made public an optimistic communique stating that conversations concerning reparations and evacuation of the Rhineland will be continued in pursuance of the old spirit of cooperation and with the determination to reach as soon as possible complete and final settlement of the difficulties arising from the war.

After agreeing upon the text of a new appeal to be sent to Bolivia and Paraguay, the council separated to meet next March and Sir Austen Chamberlain rushed to the station to catch a train for London, wishing to arrive there as quickly as possible because of the illness of King George.

LUCY ANAGNATIZ, 8, IS BADLY INJURED WHEN HIT BY AUTO

Lucy Anagnatiz, 8-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen V. Anagnatiz, of 328 Capitol avenue, was struck down and seriously injured Saturday night at Woodward and Pryor streets by an automobile driven by J. H. Griswell, of Forrest Park. Physicians at Grady hospital feared a possible fractured skull.

Griswell rushed the child to the hospital in his own car and then came to police headquarters and reported the accident. No case was made by Call Officers John Crankshaw and E. C. Harper, who investigated.

HARVARD FIESTA RULED OBSCENE BY COP CENSORS

Cambridge, Mass., December 15.—(AP)—The Harvard dramatic club's play, "Fiesta," in which several Boston society girls have parts, is "unfit for presentation," in the opinion of two police sergeants and a policewoman who attended last night's performance. In their report today, they said:

"In our opinion the acting of this play was not objectionable. Some of the dialogue, however, was extremely objectionable, rendering the play as a whole unfit for presentation."

The three police censors attended the performance as a result of a complaint that the play was "disgraceful and immoral."

Charles Letherbee, president of the Harvard Dramatic club, said that any lines in the play considered objectionable by the police would be deleted.

TOO MUCH ATHLETICS RESULTS IN DIVORCE

Kansas City, December 15.—(AP)—Walter K. Sandy is single today because as a husband, he was a fine athlete. His wife testified in the divorce court that her husband, an automobile salesman, failed to support her because he played golf and lawn tennis in the daytime and spent most of his time at nights bowling and in playing basketball.

Faithful to each subtle TONE

CHRISTMAS music represents the most inspired moments of great composers, the most heartfelt efforts of the finest musicians. It is the most splendid music of the year in radio as well as in church and auditorium—provided you receive it unalloyed.

It is in capturing the subtle and elusive shadings peculiar to the choir, the cathedral organ or the carol, that Stromberg-Carlson superiority is obvious.

A Stromberg-Carlson does not intrude itself into the music it conveys. Its tone is pure because the Receiver is correct acoustically and electrically—neither pains, expense nor material being spared in its construction.

There are All-Electric Stromberg-Carlson Receivers for alternating current areas, and for direct current areas, as well as Receivers operated with batteries.

You will find advertisements of authorized Stromberg-Carlson dealers on other pages of this newspaper.

EXPERTS TELL FANS AIDS FOR RECEPTION

Blanketing of Distant Stations By Near-by Can Be Bettered.

Washington, December 15.—Blanketing by nearby broadcasting stations of the reception of distant programs has been one of the major complaints of listeners under the reallocation.

To aid radio fans who are having difficulty with receivers that tune broadly, inspectors of the radio division of the department of commerce have offered suggestions designed to eliminate, at small cost, some of the interference.

One suggestion is the insertion of a small fixed condenser in series with the antenna lead-in and receiver. Its capacity is .00005 or larger. This reduces volume to some extent, but it sharpens the tuning of the antenna circuit.

Where a receiver is located near the local station, it may be found necessary to change the direction of the antenna to a position at right angles to the antenna of the broadcaster. If the direction of the station antenna is north and south, the receiving antenna for the least interference should run east and west.

The series condenser can be cut out of the antenna lead on stations where the local broadcaster does not interfere by short circuiting with a small knife switch. A wavetrap can sometimes be used to advantage.

Receivers having two antenna binding posts, one marked "long" and the other "short," should be tried with the antenna lead alternately on each to determine which is the more satisfactory for receiving distance.

Shortening the antenna may help, somewhat. Inserting a fixed condenser, however, between the antenna lead and the receiver has the same effect.

Visual Radio at Toulouse.

Toulonse, France, December 15.—(AP)—Toulouse prides itself on being the leading city of France for the transmission of photographs, pictures and diagrams by radio. By the Belin system photographs are broadcast of the artists taking part in the evening's concert, and for the benefit of the large agricultural population graphs are transmitted showing comparative market prices and weather statistics.

Girl and Boy Singers Seek Radio Fame

Ten amateur singers, representing every section of the country, will participate in the second National Radio Audition finals to be broadcast from WEAF and a coast-to-coast chain Sunday evening, December 16. Each will receive an award, graded according to the decision of a national board of judges.

Grand opera idols and renowned concert artists usually presented in the Atwater Kent Sunday evening radio hour will stand aside tonight and give the time to the best ten amateur singers of the nation.

These young singers—five young women and five young men—who have been selected by a series of local, state and district singing competitions of the Second National audition from more than 50,000 contestants, will be heard in finals of the audition, beginning at 8:15 p. m., Atlanta time, over WSB and the NBC system. Finalists and sections of which they have been adjudged champions are:

"Dixie"—Carmen Rosell, New Orleans, La., soprano, 19; Ernest Paul Ferrata, New Orleans, La., baritone, 21.

Far West—Dove Irene Kilgore, Oakland, Calif., coloratura soprano, 21; Donald Novis, Pasadena, Calif., tenor, 22.

Mid-West—Gladys Morrison Ball, Kansas City, Mo., coloratura soprano, 22; Wilfred A. Engelman, Detroit, Mich., baritone, 24.

Northeast—Hazel C. Arth, Washington, D. C., contralto, 25; Kenneth D. Hines, Buffalo, N. Y., tenor, 22.

Southwest—Anna Mae Chandler, Fayetteville, Ark., coloratura soprano, 20; Patrick Henry Wilson, Jr., Galveston, Texas, baritone, 18.

These musical "finds" of the 1928 audition will be presented $17,500 in cash in addition to scholarships by the Atwater Kent foundation. The young man and woman adjudged best in tonight's finals will each receive $5,000 cash, a gold decoration and a two-year scholarship at a leading American conservatory. Those placed second will each receive $2,000 and a one-year scholarship; third, $1,000 and a year's scholarship each; fourth, $500 each; fifth, $250 each.

This final contest will be judged solely by a board of nationally-recognized musical authorities appointed by the National Radio Audition Sponsorship committee, which consists of Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Mme. Louise Homer, Mrs. Otto Kahn, Mrs. Edgar Stillman Kelley and Edward W. Bok.

BILL EXTENDS LIFE

Congress Acting To Keep Radio Commission.

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—A bill to extend the life of the federal radio commission for another year was introduced today by Chairman Watson, of the senate interstate commerce committee.

Decision was reached recently by congressional leaders interested in radio legislation to make the attempt to extend the commission's existence beyond next March 16 when it expires under the present law.

Chairman White, of the house merchant marine committee, is sponsoring the bill in the house. Senator Dill, democrat, of Washington, who was instrumental in enactment of the present law, has indicated he will support the bill.

Provision also would be made in the bill of Senator Watson for the employment of counsel by the commission at a $10,000 salary.

TEXAS RADIO PLANT SERVES 36 SCHOOLS

Broadcasting Plant Owned and Operated Exclusively for Education.

Richmond, Texas, December 15.—(AP) Fort Bend county schools have pioneered in the radio field by placing in operation a broadcasting plant owned and operated exclusively by themselves to further education.

The station recently went on the air with a dedicatory address by State Superintendent of Public Instruction S. M. N. Marrs.

The plant serves 36 rural schools with about 2,500 pupils and four institutions in Richmond and Rosenberg, which have an enrollment of more than 800.

At 9 o'clock each morning 36 schools tune in their receivers for any instructions which Jess F. Ward, county superintendent, desires to give. Several entertainments also have been presented to further the appreciation of music. Lectures of educational value released from time to time by broadcasting companies have been planned and faculty members from Rice institute of Houston and nearby cities will be extended invitations to address Fort Bend county students.

Although little trouble was experienced in obtaining permission to erect the station from the county school board, it required almost a year before the radio commission sanctioned the plan.

The plant complete cost the county less than $4,000.

STROMBERG SETS WINNING APPROVAL AS YULETIDE GIFTS

Stromberg-Carlson radio receiving sets are winning increasing popularity with Atlantans with the approach of Christmas, it was reported Saturday by L. G. (Jack) Fulton, member of the firm of Fulton Brothers Electric company in the Peachtree Arcade.

The Fulton company is the oldest Stromberg-Carlson dealer in Atlanta, and Mr. Fulton pointed out that its constant policy of maintaining up-to-the-minute, prompt and courteous service and cooperating in every way with its Stromnberg-Carlson owners is bearing gratifying friut at this time.

"The new Stromberg-Caarlson model brought out in September won instant attention and wide approval," Mr. Fulton continued. "This is true of the 'Treasure Chest' and art console models, the latter being the most sought-after of the two.

"This is the first six-tube console set ever put on the market by Stromberg-Carlson for less than $500, and it has certainly measured up to every claim made for it by the makers."

Mr. Fulton added that his company is now booking many orders for Christmas Stromberg-Carlson sets to be installed on Christmas eve.

"We have every facility for giving prompt and efficient service on this type of order," Mr. Fulton said, "and we cordially invite our friends to visit us and talk with us concerning the details."

Flagg on Air

JAMES MONTGOMERY FLAGG.

An intimate glimpse into an artist's work, particularly as it relates to the selection of models who typify beautiful American girls, will be given Thursday evening at 7 o'clock by James Montgomery Flagg, one of America's foremost illustrators, whose pictures of feminine loveliness have adorned magazine pages for the past 25 years. Mr. Flagg will be guest speaker during the Lehn & Fink serenade which will be broadcast over KDKA and the N. B. C. system.

NEW STROMBERGS SET STANDARDS, DEALER ASSERTS

For sheer accuracy, extreme selectivity, distance and sweetness of tone, the new Stromberg-Carlson radio receiving sets are setting new standards for this popular manufacturer of radio products.

This was the statement made Saturday by officials of the Cochran Radio company, at 9 Auburn avenue, popular Atlanta dealers in Stromberg-Carlson products with a policy of rendering every service needed by owners of its sets.

"The Stromberg-Carlson 'Treasure Chest' and art console models are making a big hit with our patrons," Mr. Cochran said, "and we're getting a good number of orders for them as Christmas gifts.

"I can think of no finer, more appropriate or more lasting and pleasant a present as a Stromberg-Carlson for Christmas. We have every installation and serving facility available for purchasers of these sets from us, and we invite inquiry into the matter of Christmas installation of a Stromberg-Carlson."

The Cochran Radio company is one of Atlanta's best known business houses handling fine radio products. Its service department is a model one, and all purchasers are assured by heads of the concern that they will receive the closest personal attention possible at all times.

The DX club of WMAQ, Chicago, now includes many members outside of Chicago. Among the states represented are Washington, New Mexico, Alabama, Tennessee and West Virginia.

New Stromberg-Carlson Creating Much Interest

The new Stromberg-Carlson No. 744—a radio and phonograph combination instrument in a beautiful cabinet of burled American walnut.

Reproducing both broadcast and recorded programs, this beautiful new Stromberg-Carlson radio and phonograph instrument is creating widespread interest wherever it is shown.

For radio reception, four stages of double-shielded radio frequency amplification are employed, one double-shielded detector stage and the Stromberg-Carlson audio system of two stages. No antenna is required, the signal being picked up by a concealed loop. Tuning is with a single dial, indirectly illuminated and not only with a regular divisional scale but in wavelength meters, making the location of stations simply a matter of knowing their wavelengths and turning to that number.

For phonograph reproduction, a silent induction motor rotates the turn table; an elector-magnetic device picks up the record output which is passed through the audio system of the receiver and the cone speaker with the living naturalness of radio.

Operation for both radio and phonograph is entirely direct from the house lighting circuit. There are no batteries nor liquids.

The cabinet is of burled American walnut. Inverse French marquetry on the radio control panel, wood pressed into genuine bronze, enhances the richness and elegance of the instrument.

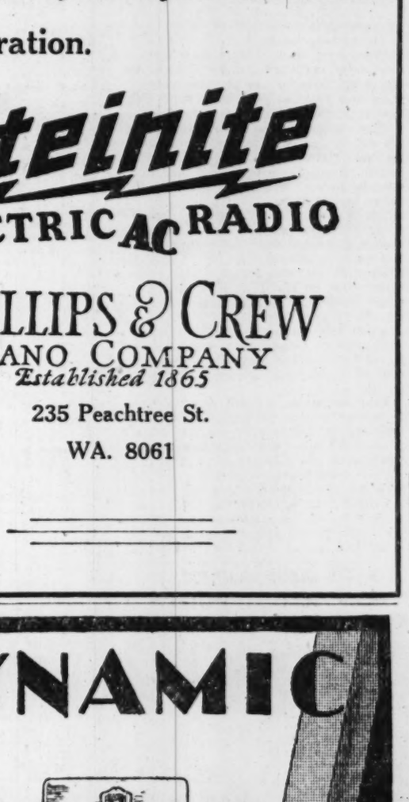

The Stromberg-Carlson cone speaker, wall type or pedestal type as preferred, is included with the receiver. This speaker, with a 22-inch seamless cone with thin apex and thicker edge, will reproduce with utmost accuracy tones as low as the 60-cycle fundamental.

MORE CLEAR CHANNELS URGED BY ENGINEERS

Not Less Than 50 Stations With Maximum Power Sought.

New York, December 15.—(AP)—Further increase in the number of clear channels, with the use of maximum power on such channels, is urged in a review of the broadcast reallocation by radio engineers.

Other recommendations are made by the engineers who comprise the committee on broadcast allocation of the radio division of the National Electrical Manufacturers' association. Members of this committee are C. W. Horn, Julius Weinberger, Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, Ray H. Manson, Louis B. F. Raycroft and Edgar H. Felix.

A summary of the report, made public tonight by the association, stated:

"While the committee commends the radio commission for having reduced the number of stations broadcasting simultaneously with the effect of lessening interference, it feels that the commission has failed to accomplish the prime purpose for which it was organized—the reduction of the number of stations licensed.

"The commission is urged to adopt a standard basis for rating of broadcasting stations for the purpose of deciding the relative service of two or more stations.

"The committee reiterates its support of the engineers' plan of broadcast allocation which calls for 50 cleared channels, and originally 60. The adoption of 40 cleared channels is a step in the right direction but does not go far enough.

"Only repeal of the Davis amendment will be helpful in the present emergency. Modifying zone boundaries and the number of zones, no matter how skillfully done, cannot be a fair basis for equalization because any zoning plan is certain to discriminate against one zone or another.

"Maximum power should be used on all cleared channels so that the greatest number of listeners may be served.

"Having as an infallible barometer of broadcasting popularity the sale of receivers in all territories, the committee condemns any unwarranted restriction of chain programs.

"The committee is opposed to the publicity given by the commission to experiments in station synchronization in advance of the time that the practical problems of such synchronization are solved."

U. S. TO DEMONSTRATE HOW AIR IS POLICED

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—The United States will show how it keeps the air in order for radio transmission and reception at the international exposition at Seville, Spain, next year.

A model of the official test car will be displayed. The car is an American development in the field control of radio activities. It carries an engineer and an assistant. With special guages they measure the frequency and field strength of broadcasting stations. That is to prevent interference, discover "obstructions" and generally to provide better radio service to the public.

Premier Thursday on Sonora Hour

Carolina Lazzari, world-famous contralto, who makes her radio debut during the Sonora hour Thursday evening. Miss Lazzari has appeared in leading roles with the Metropolitan, Chicago, and Buenos Aires Opera companies. The Sonora hour is broadcast over stations of the Columbia broadcasting system.

SONORA TO USE 43 STATIONS; 13 TO BE IN SOUTH

The largest radio hook-up ever to be used for a commercial program soon will carry the Sonora broadcast over the Columbia chain, according to an announcement by P. L. Deutsch, president of the Sonora Phonograph company of New York.

"Up to the present time," says Mr. Deutsch, "we have been using some twenty of the Columbia chain's stations owned and operated by the United Independent Broadcasters in the east and middle west. But under the new contract we shall be using 43 stationds stretching literally from coast to coast and from north to south and bringing the Sonora weekly program within the range of every radio receiver in the country."

The first broadcast over this huge network of 43 stations will take place at 8:30, Atlanta time, on Thursday, December 27, and, as heretofore, the Sonora program will originate in the Sonora recording laboratories in New York city, being carried by remote control to the key stations of the Columbia chain for transmission to every part of the country.

The new southern stations on the chain will be:

KRVA, Richmond, Va.; WWNC, Asheville, N. C.; WTAR, Norfolk, Va.; WLAC, Nashville, Tenn.; WBRC, Birmingham, Ala.; WDOD, Chattanooga, Tenn.; WREC, Memphis, Tenn.; KTHS, Hot Springs, Ark.; KFH, Wichita, Kan.; KFJF, Oakland City, Okla.; KRLD, Dallas-Fort Worth; KTSA, San Antonio, Texas, and WWL, New Orleans, La.

Station Shifts

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—The federal radio commission has authorized Station KYW, Chicago, to construct an auxiliary transmitter of 5,000 watts power outside of the city. It will be synchronized with the main transmitter for the purpose of affording better reception to city listeners who have had trouble owing to the absorption of the waves by steel buildings located near the station.

The situation in Baltimore, a notably bad spot in the spectrum, apparently has been cleared up. Listeners report greatly improved reception from WBAL and WFBR since the commission changed the frequency of the latter to eliminate interference.

LONG DISTANCE RADIO PHONE SERVICE URGED

Vancouver, B. C., December 15.—(AP)—The British Columbia Telephone company is planning to use radio for long distance telephone service to isolated districts.

Under its charter the company has no power to go into the radio telephone business, but as this appears to be the only practical method of giving service to many isolated points, it is proposed to form a new company.

Richard F. Cleveland, only son of Grover Cleveland, former president, will make a 15-minute talk over WBAL, Baltimore, Thursday afternoon, December 20.

RADIO-ING THE AIR WAVES

POLING SPEAKS ON "NEW CATHEDRAL AGE."

Dr. Daniel A. Poling will speak on "A New Cathedral Age" during the Young People's conference which will be broadcast through WSB and the N. B. S. system at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Dr. Poling states in his sermon that the first cathedral age was born in the soul of Israel. The new cathedral age, in his opinion, must temple man's aspirations in a ministry to body and soul, as inclusive and complete as that of Jesus.

A baritone soloist will be featured in the musical program, which also includes selections by a band, and well-known hymns in which the radio audience is asked to join.

Band numbers for this service are "God of Our Fathers," the opening selection; Frantzen's "College Life March;" a selection from Meyerbeer's opera, "Les Huguenots;" "Up the Street March," by Morse, and "Onward Christian Soldiers," which closes the period.

OLIVE KLINE IN LA PALINA HOUR.

Olive Kline, who regularly takes the part of La Palina, has yielded to popular request and will sing three songs in the program that the La Palina hour will broadcast tonight at 7:30 o'clock through the Columbia system.

This popular artist has up to now presented two numbers in the La Palina weekly broadcast, but so many enthusiastic letters have been received commending her work, that she has consented to contribute an extra number in this week's program. She will render one selection from "High Jinks," one from "Naughty Marietta" and "Lindy Lou" by Strickland.

In addition, a male quartet and tenor soloist will assist the orchestra and will give, among others, such numbers as Coleridge-Taylor's "Song of the Viking" "Ah Moon of My Delight" and "Lonely Vagabond."

TWO BLACK CROWS ACQUIRE MASCOT.

Moran and Mack, Majestic's Two Black Crows, have acquired a new mascot. It is in the shape of a black and white, spotted, long-tailed, long eared dog. In other words, a cur.

As Moran and Mack were leisurely walking to the studio, where each Sunday night at 8 o'clock they entertain over the Columbia system, a scuffling noise was heard behind them. A small and strange-looking animal bravely followed them into the elevator, their superstitious natures could no longer be held in check, and the dog was adopted as a mascot.

OPERA FEATURED IN DE FOREST AUDIONS HOUR.

Selections from opera and operetta will play a prominent part in the program that the De Forest Audions will broadcast tonight at 9 o'clock through the Columbia system.

The orchestra will play two ambitious selections from grand opera; the Fire Music from "Walkure," and the Intermezzo from "Jewels of the Madonna." In addition, bits of Victor Herbert's operetta, "Natoma," and Sul-ivan's "Pinafore" will be heard, the orchestra being assisted in the latter presentation by the full ensemble of vocal singers.

Two band pieces by Sousa will also be included; the "El Capitan" march and "High School Cadets."

PATENT RIGHTS UPHELD

Radio Commission Refuses To Revoke Licenses.

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—Louis G. Caldwell, general counsel of the radio commission, has expressed an opinion today that the present status of litigation over patents in which the Radio Corporation of America is involved did not constitute a basis for a refusal by the commissioner of licenses to the corporation under the radio act.

The supreme court recently denied a petition by the Radio Corporation that an injunction granted Arthur D. Lord under the Clayton anti-trust law be set aside. Immediately after the petition was denied the commission was asked by the Radio Protective association to revoke all the corporation's licenses.

In his opinion, Caldwell said, the denial of the petition did not constitute a final judgment. The merits of the case, he said, may still be determined by the trial court and such courts as may review the final decree of that court.

Program in Latin.

Toulouse, France, December 15.—(AP)—This ancient capital of part of Gaul when Caesar's legions conquered the country, paid a compliment to its early invaders when its radio station broadcast a message in Latin. Thus one of the oldest tongues was conveyed by the newest scientific means. Latin scholars were invited to transmit their impressions in Latin.

Tech High Wins 1928 G. I. A. A. Title by Defeating Gordon, 26-6

Mott, Hadley Lead Smithies To Easy Win

Fumbles Prove Costly to Red Jerseys; Purple Backs Run Wild to Beat Rivals.

BY BEN COTHRAN.

Tech High's Smithies played a football of a driving, wearing sort Saturday afternoon and soundly whipped Gordon Institute Barnesville, 26-6. Attached to the victory was the Georgia Interscholastic Athletic association championship for 1928 and Tech High is quite proud of its laurel, being the first G. I. A. title won since 1924.

The game, interesting and well-played though it was, provided the thrills, excitement and ludicrous incidents usually attendant at a prep football game. There were long, twisting returns of punts by Mott, Tech High halfback; there was the terrific plunging of Hadley, fullback; there was those tearing slants off-tackle of Benton and Barrentine, of Gordon. And then there was the time when Mott ran back to pass and a teammate, assigned the delicate task of blocking Gordon rushers, placed himself squarely in the way, causing Mott to trip and be smothered for a considerable loss. Added to that were fumbles, some of which had direct bearing on the scoring of a Tech High touchdown, and the everlasting fight of both squads. It was a good game of football. Everyone enjoyed it.

The fireworks began with the opening whistle when Benton, of Gordon, fumbled the kickoff, Tech High recovered, drove down to the four-yard line and was held for downs. Then Gordon punted out, Mott ran it back 34 yards to Gordon's three-yard line and within a minute Tech High was leading by 6-0. Things like that kept happening throughout the game.

Improved Game.

Tech High played a muchly improved game over that as shown a week ago when the Smithy eleven was defeated by the Erie team. Gordon, following its fatal fumble right at the start, played a fitful sort of game displaying at times the power of a hydro-electric plant and at other times playing in a manner that could at best be termed lackadaisical.

A great deal of Tech High's gains were made over the guard and through center with Beans Hadley, big fullback subbing for Heavy Hammond who is sick with flu, forcing his considerable bulk through openings afforded by the line in front of him for satisfying gains.

And when it came to the gentle matter of touchdowns, it was entirely young Mr. Hadley's day, he crashing through for each and every one of the four marked down to Tech High's credit.

Aiding him in this ranting up and down the field with the ball was the slim, wiry elusive Buster Mott, who swung his hips with the abandon and accompanying excitement of a Hula maiden doing her regular turn, and slipped off tackle and around the ends for a substantial yardage total. He backed that up with exciting returns of punts and heaved two long passes, one of which placed the ball in position for Hadley to crash over. The pass went Mott to Vess. Distance was 20 yards.

Tackling Is Hard.

Gordon's line tackled hard but usually was unable to tackle until the objective—a Tech High back—had gained some three or four yards.

That line, however, managed to do one thing well. On practically every play it had Tech High's ends completely out of the way and left holes on the outside of tackle large enough to drive a truck through. And it was here that Benton and Barrentine made their twisting, yard consuming drives. There was one time, when Gordon made its touchdown, that the two lads mentioned above, made 53 yards in two plays, Benton getting 16 and Barrentine 37.

Gordon fought a good fight but Tech High, completely recovered it seems from the flu, was the stronger and had the better attack.

Right at the beginning of things the Smithies set about winning this game and securing themselves their first G. I. A. A. championship since 1924.

Hadley Kicks Off.

Hadley kicked off to Benton, of Gordon. The fleet halfback came in to the ball on the run, it slipped through his hands and he grabbed again. Here Ira Vess, Smithy end, hurtled through the air and recovered for Tech High on Gordon's 28-yard line. In less time, almost than it takes to tell, Hadley, Mott and Hutt had pushed down to Gordon's five-yard line with four downs to make the remaining yards.

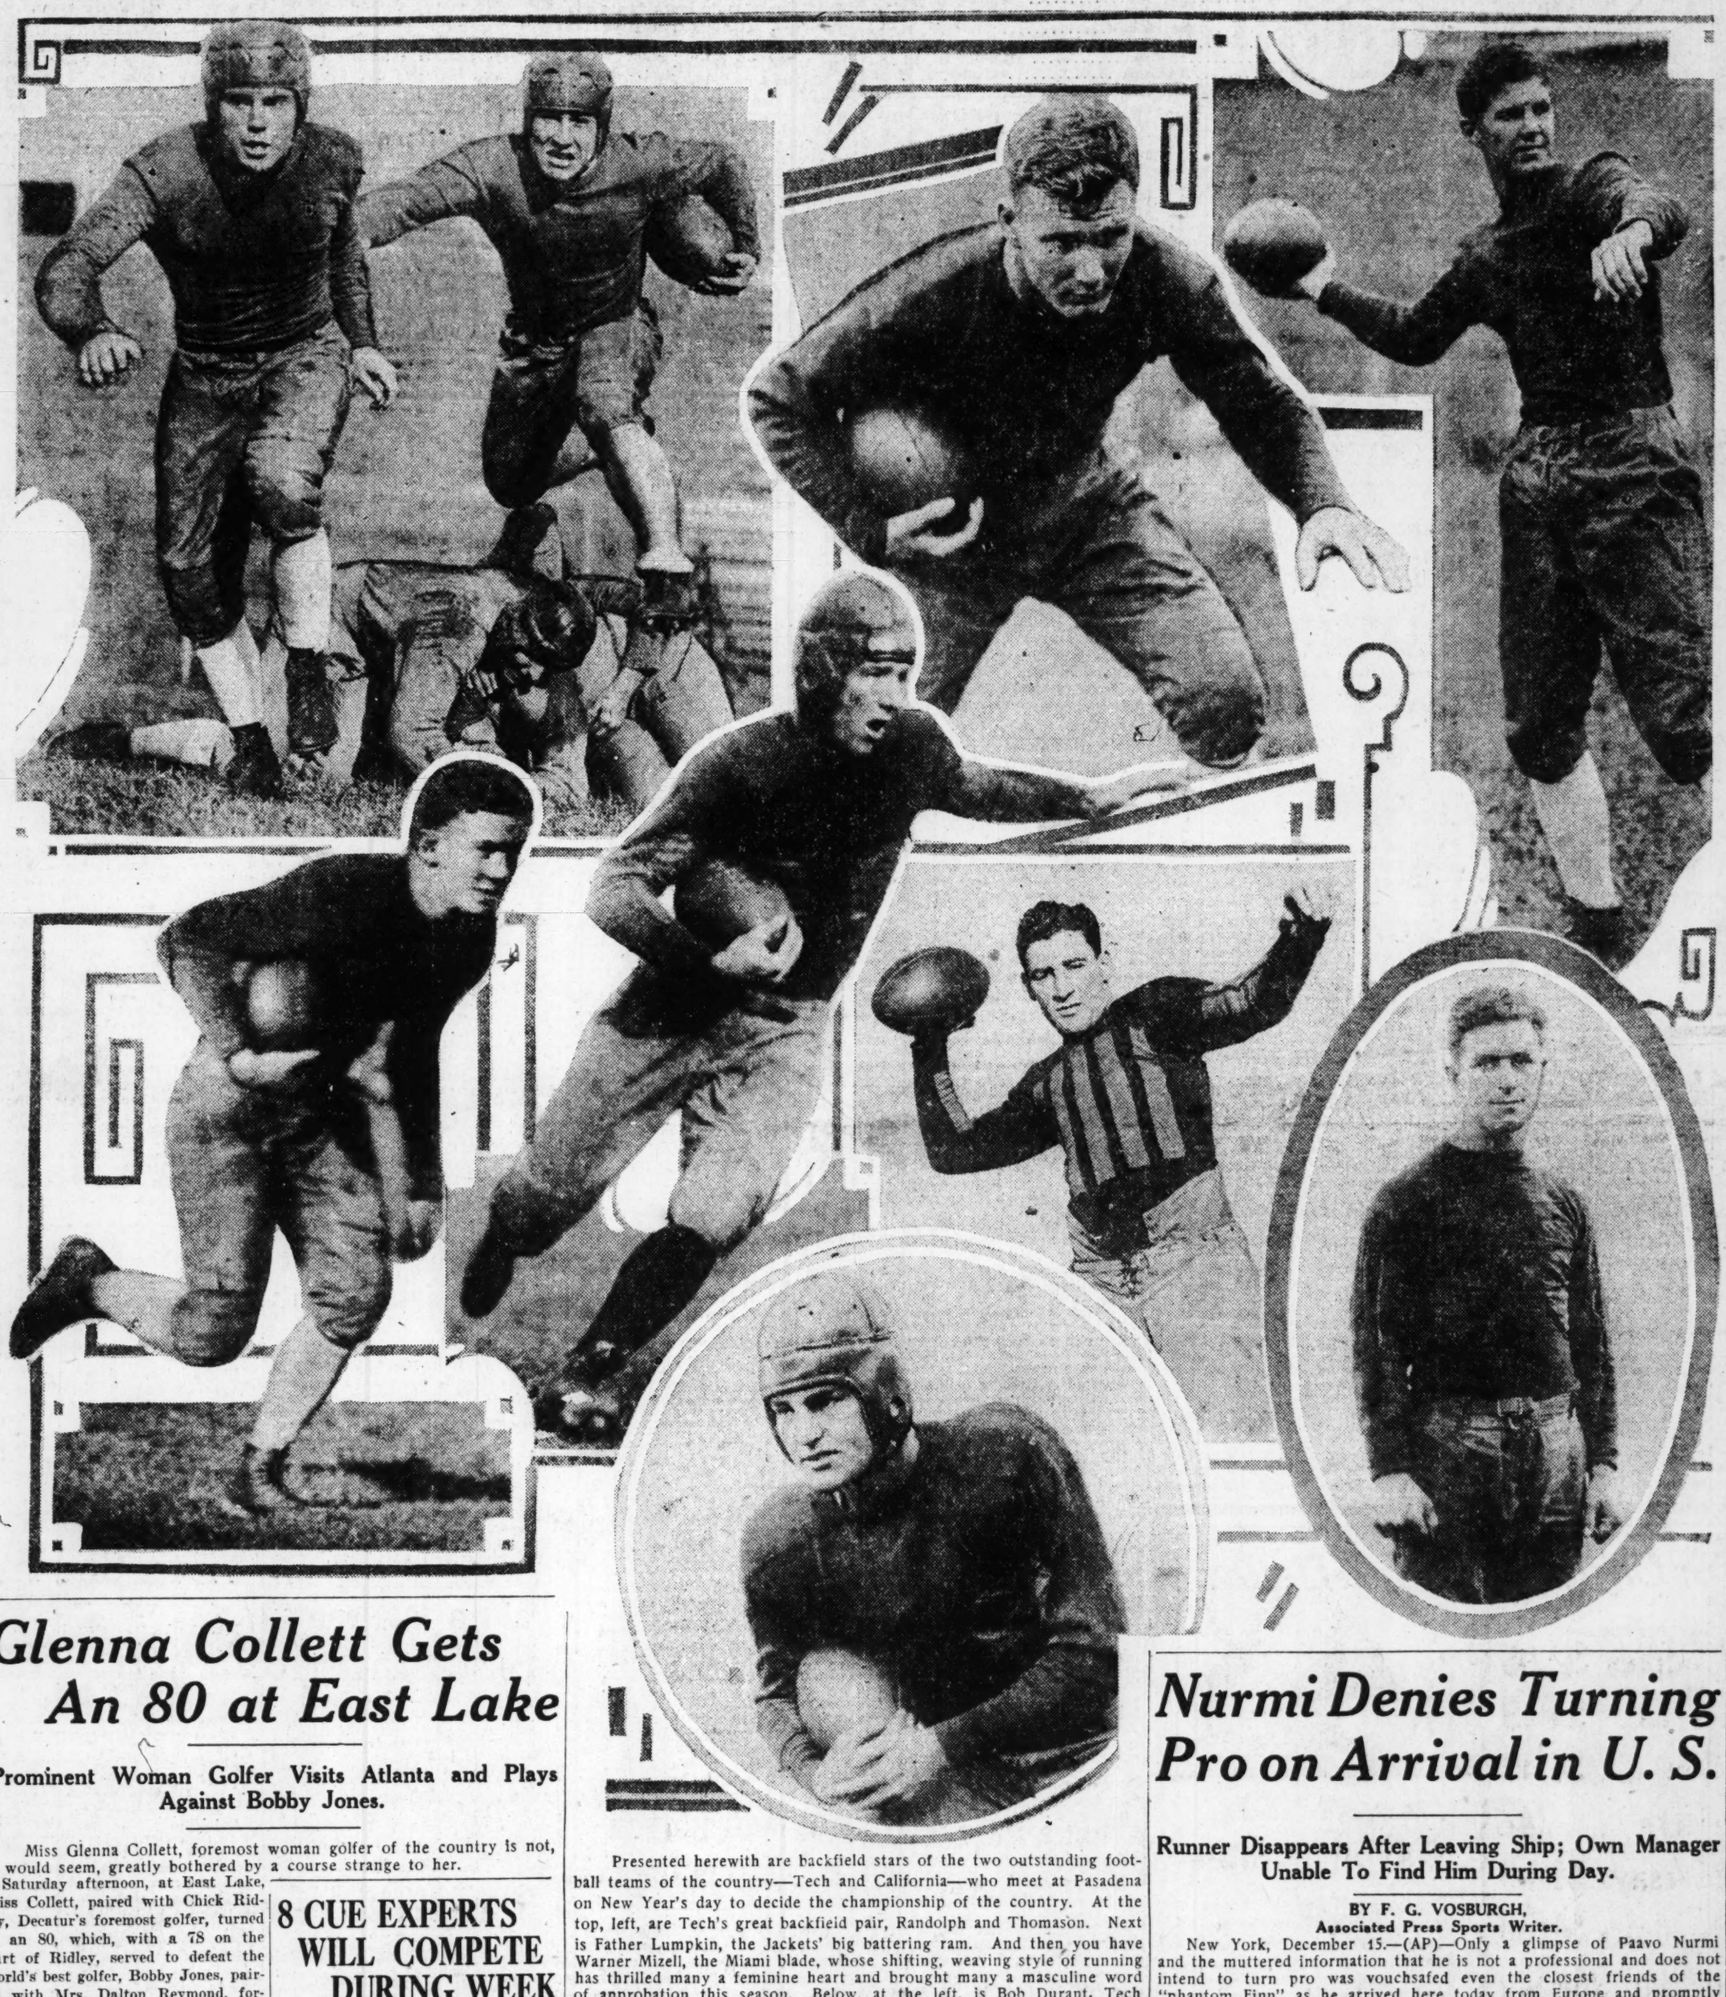

Here the Barnesville line tightened. Bryan and Brown broke through and spilled Tech High backs before they were started and the ball went over to Gordon on its one-yard line.

Benton, behind his own goal line, punted and Mott caught it 37 yards away. Cutting clear across the field, twisting and shifting across white lines until the ball was back almost from where it had started—on Gordon's three-yard line. The lads in red buckled down again but this time Tech High wasn't to be denied, so Mott, Hutt and Hadley, one after the other, a yard at a time, took it over. Mott attempted to drop-kick goal but the ball went far to one side.

Hadley kicked-off again and Gordon started a drive that saw Barrentine and Benton pounding away until the Smithies' 21-yard line was reached. Here Gordon relapsed into fumblitis again. Barrentine dropped the ball

TECH AND CALIFORNIA ACES WHO MEET NEW YEAR'S

Presented herewith are backfield stars of the two outstanding football teams of the country—Tech and California—who meet at Pasadena on New Year's day to decide the championship of the country. At the top, left, are Tech's great backfield pair, Randolph and Thomason. Next is Father Lumpkin, the Jackets' big battering ram. And then you have Warner Mizell, the Miami blade, whose shifting, weaving style of running has thrilled many a feminine heart and brought many a masculine word of approbation this season. Below, at the left, is Bob Durant, Tech quarterback. The young man running at full tilt and just before stiff-arming someone, is Lee Rice, California halfback. The serious-visaged fellow about to throw a pass is Ben Lom, Rice's running mate. In the circle is Lee Eison, quarterback and brains of the California attack. The young fellow below is Charley Schmidt, plunging fullback. These are the lads who'll do most of the leather lugging on New Year's.

First Special Off Saturday On Coast Trip

Second Train Will Depart for California Following Wednesday.

Miller and Speer Off for Coast Monday

Don Miller, assistant coach at Georgia Tech, will leave Monday for Pasadena, Calif., to make arrangements for the arrival of the Tornado squad the following week.

Miller will be accompanied by Frank Speer, tackle, who will not see action in the New Year's game.

Miller will seek permission to use the Rose Bowl for practice sessions and will also map out the program for entertainment of the players, it was stated.

BY DICK HAWKINS.

Just another Sunday and tomorrow is just another Monday to everyone but members of Tech's Tornado who leave this week for California and Tournament of Posies. Tomorrow will be a welcome day to these gentlemen who play football. It will mark the resumption of training for the national championship game.

A few days of work and the Jackets will pack up their little satchels and set out for new worlds to conquer and in the meantime several score of Atlanta's faithful fans are preparing to embark by train, bus, automobile, airplane, freight train, blind baggage and by foot for the west coast.

In Various Ways.

These fans will represent every walk of life. They are going in luxurious staterooms and they are going in battered flivvers. They are preparing to spend half a thousand dollars in their travels and they are planning to spend one tenth of that amount but they all going for the same purpose—to see Tech win a national title in the famous Rose Bowl.

Many notables will follow the team and among these are the names of several rooters who have followed the fortunes of the Gold and White since before most of us knew there was any difference between gold and white. Among these are the famous "Three Musketeers," Major Jack Cohen, "Mr. Joe" Rhodes and Lowry Arnold and their wives. Along with them will be Mr. and Mrs. Robert Tyre Jones, Jr. The head of that family knows enough about national championships to judge accurately the value of Tech's victory-to-be. The names of Mr. and Mrs. "Ferd" Kauffman are not yet on the list but in view of the fact that Mr. Kauffman has not missed many games in the past 15 years he will probably be in the party when the time comes to start.

First Fan Special.

The first fan special will leave the city on the 22d, and will be called the "Yellow Jacket Special," while the later train, leaving on the 26th, will be known as the "Tornado Special."

The fleet of busses will leave Friday for the long grind to the Pacific and at the present writing it appears that at least six busses will be filled with rooters for the trek. In addition there is a movement on foot, headed by Howard Haire, of The Constitution, to organize an airplane expedition to the coast. The plan is to get four more passengers to add to the six already signed and make the trip in a tri-motored Ford ship.

Haze to Brighten.

The football situation at the Flats, which has cast a dull haze over things in that vicinity, shows some promise of brightening soon.

The hospital squad, which has been composed of six of the mainstays of the Jacket machine, was disbanded Saturday, when Waddey, Holland, Lumpkin, Westbrook, and Brooke left their cots at St. Joseph's infirmary and took up the business of life again. Luna is now the only Jacket sufficiently ill to be confined to bed, and his condition is reported as improving so that he may be in his cleated shoes again by Monday.

Practices for the few days remaining before the Jackets entrain for their trip to the coast for the New Year's day fray are expected to be light, and designed with the purpose of bringing the boys back into shape after their lay-off.

The hard work in preparation for the battle will be done during the ride westward and scrimmages will keep the Jackets busy in the time which elapses from the day of their arrival in Pasadena and the occasion of the battle. This will give the Jackets a familiarity with the terrain of the Rose Bowl.

Glenna Collett Gets An 80 at East Lake

Prominent Woman Golfer Visits Atlanta and Plays Against Bobby Jones.

Miss Glenna Collett, foremost woman golfer of the country is not, it would seem, greatly bothered by a course strange to her.

Saturday afternoon, at East Lake, Miss Collett, paired with Chick Ridley, Decatur's foremost golfer, turned in an 80, which, with a 78 on the part of Ridley, served to defeat the world's best golfer, Bobby Jones, paired with Mrs. Dalton Reymond, former southern woman's champion, in an informal match which was played without any advance ballyhoo in the local press.

Miss Collett took advantage of the match as a means to break her long journey from Pasadena, Calif., to Pinehurst, N. C. Arriving in the city without advance heralding, the match was quietly arranged. Miss Collett's friend, Mrs. Reymond, joined her at New Orleans, came to Atlanta for the foursome and Saturday night Mrs. Reymond was on her way to New Orleans, proceeding thence to Baton Rouge, her home.

Miss Collett sailed through the second nine with a 37, just one stroke over the mark exacted for male players who expect to turn the second nine in par figures. Except for the short eleventh hole where Miss Collett, for some strange reason, took three putts, the second nine was clicked off in machine-like par fashion.

The first nine was a rather exciting adventure, for Miss Collett, being a total stranger to the course and being forced to make her shots as she came to them. But she performed exceedingly well and her playing was of such caliber as to draw words of approbation from East Lake's star professional, Frank Ball.

Bob Jones, to whom she was opposed, shot his usual good game, and on the whole it was a match that was interesting from start to finish, although there was no gallery, due to no advance advertising.

8 CUE EXPERTS WILL COMPETE DURING WEEK

Chicago, December 15.—(AP)—Eight outstanding players will compete in the combination three-cushion and pocket billiard tournament to be held in orchestra hall next week.

In Monday's opening pocket matches, Erwin Rudolph, Chicago, will play Frank Taberski, Schenectady, N. Y. A three-cushion match between Willie Hoppe, New York, and Otto Reiselt, Philadelphia, will follow.

Ralph Greenleaf, New York, national champion, will meet Pasquale Natalie, of Baltimore, in the second pocket match.

John Layton, Sedalia, Mo., national three-cushion champion, will meet Gus Couplos, Detroit.

The tournament will close Wednesday.

MacFarlane Wins Bermuda Tourney

Hamilton, Bermuda, December 15. (AP)—Willie MacFarlane, former United States open champion, today won the Bermuda open golf title, scoring 135 for the 36-hole test over the course of the Riddell's Bay club here.

Tech Alumnus Seeks To Have Cheers For Jackets Broadcast From Atlanta

Pasadena, Calif., December 15.—(AP)—Georgia Tech will not send a rooting section here for the New Year's day football clash against the University of California, but efforts are being made to bring the cheers of the southern institution's students to the Rose Bowl—via the radio.

William O. Brice, a Los Angeles attorney and an alumnus of Georgia Tech, has communicated with the athletic association of the Dixie institution relative to the plans to carry Georgia enthusiasm to the Rose Bowl via the radio hookup. It is proposed to have Georgia Tech cheering sections get together in the yells of their college two or three times during the intersectional struggle.

"Bull" Brown Signs As American Umpire

Pittsburgh, December 15.—(AP)—Frank E. (Bull) Brown, of Pittsburgh, today signed a one-year contract to umpire in the American association next season. Brown, who was an association arbiter for part of last season, formerly umpired in the Pacific Coast and Eastern leagues.

Amateur Flyweight Champ To Turn Pro

Los Angeles, December 15.—(AP)—Hymie Miller, national amateur flyweight champion, will enter the professional boxing ranks as a bantamweight early next year.

Miller, who also was a member of this year's United States Olympic games boxing team, today signed a five-year contract accepting Al Lang, Los Angeles boxing man, as his manager.

Nurmi Denies Turning Pro on Arrival in U. S.

Runner Disappears After Leaving Ship; Own Manager Unable To Find Him During Day.

BY F. G. VOSBURGH,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, December 15.—(AP)—Only a glimpse of Paavo Nurmi and the muttered information that he is not a professional and does not intend to turn pro was vouchsafed even the closest friends of the "phantom Finn" as he arrived here today from Europe and promptly whisked himself away to parts unknown.

After a search which carried him to Paterson, N. J., and back again to the Bronx, Hugo Quist, the New York Finn who managed Nurmi's American tour in 1925 and is anxious to learn his running plans for the present visit, summed it all up in the pressive phrase:

"Can't find Paavo."

Nor could anyone else, for the time being.

Ahead of Schedule.

The French liner Rochambeau on which Nurmi sailed from Havre on December 5 after a false start on the Berengaria crept into quarantine at 5 a. m. and as though in league with the secretive Finn's desires slid into its piers at 10:15, nearly an hour ahead of schedule.

Among those taken by surprise and therefore not at the pier to meet him was Quist, and Paavo landed pretty much alone except for fellow passengers and the few newspapermen who went down to the bay to meet the boat.

To them he granted his only interview, a series of monosyllables, shakes of the head and repeated declarations of "no spik English" that are peculiar to Paavo and typical of the man.

Silent On Plans.

He was emphatic in his statement that he had not turned professional and did not expect to do so. About his running plans he gave no information at all, becoming evasive and parrying direct questions with a "no spik English" accompanied by a total lack

Gibson To Retire From Fight Ring

New York, December 15.—(United News.)—Billy Gibson, former manager of Gene Tunney, again announces his retirement from the ring—this time, he says, for good. He is dickering with Jimmy Johnston in an attempt to dispose of his interest in Knute Hansen, the Dane who fell before K. O. Christner's fists in Cleveland some time ago.

Basketball Barred Prior to Holidays

Columbus, Ga., December 15.—(AP) They are whispering about this town that members of the "C" club of Columbus High school did such amazing things as cutting the hair of the neophytes of the organization. The result is a faculty ruling that there shall be no basketball played at Columbus High until after the holidays.

Plenty Home Runs.

The Western league fans saw plenty of home runs last year. Four players hit more than 34 each. Stroner, of Wichita, hit 42; Munson, of Tulsa, 39; Bennett, of Tulsa 35; Allington, of Wichita 34.

G. M. A. Defeats Havana Eleven

Havana, December 15.—(AP)—The Georgia Military academy football team today defeated the Havana Yacht club eleven by a score of 19 to 7 in the first game of what is planned as an annual series.

The cadets were slow in starting and the Cubans took their seven-point lead early in the game. In the second period, however, the Georgia team came through with its first score and added too additional ones in the last. An end run by Sheppard was responsible for their fight, while the other two were made on passes.

Sheppard, Hackney and Clark were outstanding for the Georgia team. Hernandez, who scored the lone Cuban touchdown, led for the Havana eleven.

Stribling Will Take On Two Foes in Georgia This Week

Cracker Club Boasts Seven Mound Artists

Spiller Discusses Trades Made This Winter; Talks on Chances of Team.

BY BEN COTHRAN.

R. J. Spiller, Atlanta's baseball man, took time out between halves of the Tech High-Gordon game Saturday, to talk baseball.

Mr. Spiller is feeling quite confident over the prospects of his club for next year, which is a common failing of baseball club owners, but maybe he has a right to be optimistic.

He returned a week or so ago from Toronto with a number of players and intends buying a few more. Mr. Spiller at present has seven pitchers, two catchers, five infielders and several outfielders.

When spring training time arrives he intends to have at least two men competing for every position except pitching and catching, where he'll have more than that.

Pitching Staff.

The pitching staff at present consists of five right-handers and two southpaws. The men who throw with their right hands are Brice, Keifer, Rauch, Dudley and Blethen. The southpaws are none other than the venerable Rube Robinson and Red Oldham, both with Atlanta last season, and both are expected to do very well next year.

Brice, Keifer and Rauch are new to Atlanta. The two-first-mentioned had very successful seasons last summer and, though that is no indication that they will be all right here, it at least sounds well. Rauch served last year at Macon and will come to Atlanta via Brooklyn. Spiller intends to trade Dumont for another left-hander, name unknown.

Robbie Passes Through.

Uncle Wilbert Robinson, manager of the Brooklyn club, passed through Atlanta Friday, headed for Dover Hall, Ga., and a deer hunt. He paused long enough to tell Spiller that he could get help from the Robins. Though the Dodgers might not be in such a fair way to be of great help, it's better than nothing at all, and if Nick Cullop and Max West can be brought back, that'll help a lot.

For his infield Spiller has Jim Poole at first base and a new gentleman, Jack Sheehan, who, following a long and variegated career, wound up with Syracuse from where Wilbur Good, new Cracker manager, bought him. Sheehan will play second base. At shortstop you'll see either Leo Bader, the youngster who made such a hit last summer, or Johnny Jones, a regular in 1928 until a leg gave way. Bill Marriott is expected to play third base.

Tom Angley and Alphonzo Lopez, both very young, are the only catchers at present. There has been some talk of Butch Henline being wafted down from Brooklyn to add his mature wisdom gained after years of big league experience.

Nick Cullop they expect will come back from Brooklyn. Cullop has, for some unknown reason, formed a violent affection for Atlanta and refuses to play baseball in any other place. So he'll most likely come back. At Toronto, Mr. Spiller bought Maurice Archdeacon, one year younger than Ty Cobb but still good enough to play well in a Class A league, so they tell us. Those two seem to be fixtures, while Zoeller, Miner and two or three more will fight it out for the remaining position.

That finishes up the players in Mr. Spiller's clutches right at present. He said Saturday that new manager Good was very hopeful of a winning ball club this season and that more player purchases would probably be forthcoming in a short while.

In parting, Mr. Spiller said that there was absolutely nothing to the report that Jimmy Hamilton would become business manager of the Crackers.

Tech High Places Six Men on All-City Prep Team; Four B. H. S. Men Selectde

Hackney, G. M. A., at Quarter, Offers Real Star for Year.

Mott and Hammond Are Placed in Backfield; McCallie Also Picked.

BY CHICK HARRIS.

Choosing an all-star team of any kind from among the city prep teams of the city this year as usual is no easy task and one picking a team of this kind is never confronted with a simple job. However, in picking this team the writer has taken in consideration all available material of the local teams, and made his decision with the following players:

At ends, Miller, of Boys' High, and Vess, of Tech High, look best. These two lads have shown plenty of power in all the games for the whole season and in picking a team that is composed of the best, these lads could hardly be left out.

For tackles, Henderson, of T. H. S., and Winn, of B. H. S., have the call. Winn, who in 1927, captained the Boys' High eleven from an end position has all that a player needs in the way of experience not only as a good offensive man but defensive as well. Big Boy Henderson, gets the call for the same reason, although being held out in the latter part of the season on account of injuries.

All-City Prep Teams

The Constitution's city all-prep football teams follow:

FIRST TEAM.	Pos.	SECOND TEAM.
Miller, B. H. S.	End	Holland, Marist
Winn, B. H. S.	Tackle	Couch, B. H. S.
Morris, T. H. S.	Guard	Nix, U. S. B.
MacNamara, T. H. S.	Center	McWhorter, B. H. S.
Branch, B. H. S.	Guard	Davis, T. H. S.
Henderson, T. H. S.	Tackle	Mullins, T. H. S.
Vess, T. H. S.	End	Grubbs, T. H. S.
Hackney, G. M. A.	Quarterback	Hutt, T. H. S.
Mott, T. H. S.	Halfback	Davis, B. H. S.
McCallie, B. H. S.	Halfback	Elliott, B. H. S.
Hammond, T. H. S.	Fullback	Hadley, T. H. S.

At guards, Morris, of T. H. S., and Jimmy Branch, of Boys' High, are two players hard to beat, not only in the city but in the state at large.

In the center position there are many good players deserving mention for all-round playing this year but in considering all the material and records, the choice simmers down to McWhorter, of B. H. S., and Macnamara, of T. H. S.

Macnamara gets the call. He is a real star, both on defense and offense.

The backfield presents even a greater task than the line. City schools this year boasted an unusual array of excellent ball carriers and any all-star team must necessarily ignore several outstanding players.

In a backfield, however, composed of Mott, Tech High, and McCallie, Boys' High, at halves; Hackney, G. M. A., at quarter, and Hammond, of the Smithies, at full, the writer believes he has chosen four men who, behind a reasonably strong line, can advance the ball as well as any other combination in the city, if not the state.

Quarterback calls for brains, first of all, as any good quarter must know how to run his team, call signals in emergencies and carry the ball himself. In addition he must be reasonably immune from injuries and sickness to give his team maximum strength. Hackney, of G. M. A., the writer thinks, is the best that the city can offer. Hackney has played in every game this year and has shown real talent throughout.

Mott and McCallie get the call at halves. Had these two boys been working together on the same team they would have broken up many a ball game this year. Mott has a knack of fumbling at critical times but his all-round playing overcomes this fault.

Hammond, Tech High, and Elliott, B. H. S., have been fine ground gainers at fullback this season and have proved themselves good defensive men as well. But in Hammond, one has a man who can be depended on to deliver if it comes to extra points after touchdowns or field goals as he has proved many a time.

In picking this team much good material had to be relegated to the second team.

G.M.A. Basketball Schedule Drafted

Milledgeville, Ga., December 15.—(AP)—The tentative basketball schedule of the Georgia Military college five, as announced here by Athletic Director T. H. Rentz and Coach Johnny Broadnax, includes games with 10 well-known teams of the state, with the probability that several more contests will be arranged.

The Cadets will open the season on December 20 with the Macon All-Stars. The January schedule already includes games with Macon All-Stars, Perry High school, Montezuma High school, Vienna High, Riverside Military academy, Georgia Freshmen, Lanier High, Gordon institute, Monroe Aggies and Richmond academy, of Augusta.

Coach "Babe" Florence, star of the University of Georgia five of 1928, will have direct charge of the Cadets this year.

O'Neil Is Medalist In Rail Golf Meet

Mount Plymouth, Fla., December 15.—(AP)—Dave O'Neil, of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad, shot the low qualifying score in the Southeastern Railroad Men's Golf association tourney here today when he turned in an 85 for the par 72 St. Andrews course.

Nearly one hundred railroad men from all sections of the south are here for the tournament. Offices of the association will be elected tomorrow.

Flight leaders after 36 holes of play today were D. H. Harrison, William Starke, C. P. Hunt, Ed Haire, C. F. Decker, F. P. Sanderson and Mr. O'Neil The final round will be played tomorrow.

Colgate Taken On.

Colgate has been added to the Wisconsin football schedule for 1929 and Northwestern replaces Michigan. Notre Dame will be played again.

May Become Cadet.

Earl Clark, best back in the Rocky Mountain conference, may get an appointment to West Point.

DOWN THE LINE

MISS ANNE MORGAN.

Miss Anne Morgan, who promoted the Leonard-Mitchell bout, one of the most melodramatic of the lightweight championship fights at the old Madison Square Garden, is in sports promotion again in an amateur way. This time Miss Morgan, resting on her laurels, achieved in the one venture into the cauliflower industry, is promoting the gentler game of golf.

Miss Morgan's lone venture into the cauliflower industry was a distinct triumph, financial and artistic. She took $75,000 from the old Madison Square Garden for her fund for devastated France, and the bout itself thrilled all of the customers. Mr. Benny Leonard, after being floored for the count of nine and a half, rose from the rosin sprinkled canvas and knocked Ritchie Mitchell down for the count of several thousand and no fractions.

But that was merely incidental. Miss Morgan got her $75,000, and France still has it. She received the entire sum, despite the fact that some of her co-workers for the exhibition were Mr. Tex Rickard, Mr. William Westchester Biltmore Gibson and Mr. Benjamin Leonard, who is quite as adept with the adding machine as he is with the punching bag, if not a bit more adept.

Usually, when a prizefight is staged for charity that sterling virtue is knocked quite horizontal. Every time I have seen Charity in the prizering, Charity either was lying out as horizontal as Joe Beckett, or in the ignominious act of dusting the rosin dust from the seat of its tights. But with Miss Morgan in its corner—so to speak—on that particular night, Charity walked out of the Garden not only intact, but carrying away $75,000, which was even a trifle more than Mr. Benjamin Leonard took away with him.

The boys with the long experience in the racket were very gracious about it when they realized that nothing could be done about it. They were—in the parlance of the racket—outsmarted. Mr. William Westchester Biltmore Gibson was profoundly impressed by the financial ability of Miss Morgan. Mr. Leonard was silent. He was too full of some sort of emotion for utterance.

Mr. Rickard finally mustered a smile. He was looking into the future. He insisted that the nice people who had come to the Garden to see Mr. Leonard and Mr. Mitchell go through their exercises would add no little tone to Garden, and Mr. Rickard does love to see nice people at Madison Square Garden. They pay their admissions and they do not know enough about the prizefight racket to be too critical.

So in this instance Charity was not only allowed to escape from the old arena with no battering, but with a decided profit. Before and since several persons have taken their pet charities into the fight racket, only to have them knocked silly, and subsequently to have their pockets picked. After a number of these experiences charities of various sorts became decidedly ring shy.

Miss Morgan has promoted sports of other sorts for some of the various works in which she is interested. She introduced whippet racing to New York as a sport—though it subsequently became a racket. Also, she tried to promote a tennis match between Tilden and Richards and some of the French players for the fund for devastated France. But the United States Lawn Tennis association forbade the matches.

Now Miss Morgan is backing the International Golf exposition, the proceeds of which will go to the new clubhouse of the American Women's association. This is not a charity—by the way—though it is a pet project of Miss Morgan's.

Trimming the Pachyderms.

Following the success of Miss Morgan in the field of amateur sports promotion, Mrs. Marshall Field, of Chicago, sponsored a wrestling match under the pineapple trees beside Lake Michigan. Mrs. Field's acquaintance with the pachyderms and their habits was quite as limited as Miss Morgan's with the cauliflowers before she made the first centure.

Mrs. Field managed to emerge from this adventure with $19,000 for her pet charity, and Mr. Jack Curley still in wondering how she did it. Mr. Curley, who has been dealing extensively in pachyderms all of his life, never drew that much profit from one wrestling bout. The pachyderms, he contends, eat up all of the profits, and if you ever have seen a pachyderm at the table you will know that Mr. Curley does not exaggerate.

Miss Morgan sat out her first prizefight and remained to the bitter end. But Mrs. Field did not stay for the duration of the wrestling bout. Very few people can sit that long, no matter how polite and considerate they may be of the feelings of the pachyderms.

In about the third hour one of the Zbyszko boys, wrestling in the main event, caught his opponent in the toe hold and preceeded to apply pressure. Mrs. Field was located in a ringside box directly in range of the flying pachyderms. She arose hurriedly at the psychological moment, tendering her apologies to all concerned. She explained that she did not want to sit there until one of the pachyderms was thrown into her lap.

Which was quite discreet. There have been times when one infuriated pachyderm has seized his opponent and hurled him out to one or two of the customers. And if Zbyszko had known that Mrs. Field was getting $19,000, he might have hit her with a pachyderm by way of protest.

Wrestling at Princeton.

Speaking of pachydermy, I have just received a letter informing me that they are taking up the art in a serious way at Princeton. This is not exactly new. They had one of the Zbyszko boys around there last year illustrating for the undergraduates the toe hold, the flying mare and the half-Nelson holds.

The letter informs me that amateur wrestling is strictly on the level, and at Princeton even more so than that. Which makes it sound as though it might be somewhat uninteresting. I believe that I did see one wrestling bout that was on the level, but it lasted all night, and when the gray dawn came the wrestlers still were on the mat, but there was nobody in the house. At any rate, the promoter said it was strictly on the level, but in the same breath he said he would never commit another faux pas like it.

The invitation to Princeton is most cordial and hospitable. It seems that it is in no sense a private wrestling match, but that anybody who feels so inclined may take off his coat, step into the ring and see if he can qualify for piano moving. The last time your correspondent wrestled was with Kid Gleason, young correspondent winning only one fall out of five and carrying with him the firm conviction that the Kid let him have this one so that the match would not appear too one-sided.

It Is Just as Well.

Since Miss Morgan pioneered the cauliflower industry other ladies have ventured into it with no little success. Mrs. William Randolph Hearst promoted several bouts for the milk fund and showed some net profits that made Mr. Rickard quite envious.

Perhaps it is just as well that all of the women sports promoters are amateurs in heart and spirit. Otherwise the racket might be ruined for the dumber males in it.

Miss California Wins Boat Race

San Diego, Calif., December 15.—(AP)—Establishing a new world's record, Dick Loynes, piloting the Miss California, in the first heat of the 151 class limited hydroplanes here today shot his boat over the two laps of two and a half miles each at the rate of 49.09 miles an hour, in a total elapsed time of 6 minutes, 6.7 seconds.

The Miss California broke the record established here last year by Ralph Snoddy in the Angeles, of 47.12 miles an hour. Loynes now stands a good chance to win the celebrated Elgin trophy, if his time is not beaten during the regatta, according to officials in charge of the national speed boat races, being held on San Diego bay.

Cutic, piloted by K. Jenkins, of San Diego, won the first heat of two and a half miles for Class B outboards, averaging 29.58 miles an hour. At the beginning of this race, the boat Oh Kay, driven by Helen Henchel, of New York, overturned while approaching the starting point. No injury or damage was sustained.

The second heat of the 151 class hydroplane race was taken by Miss Westchester II, owned by E. W. Hammond, of Larchmont, N. Y. The winner's time was 6:19.5, an average speed ot 47.43 miles an hour.

Another world's record fell in the class C outboard race when Bonnie Lass, piloted by Floyd Pierce, of Lake Elsinore, made 38.20 miles an hour.

PittsburghCancels Basketball Games

Pittsburgh, December 15.—(AP)—Basketball games scheduled by the University of Pittsburgh on its home court with Dartmouth, December 22, and Iowa, December 29, were cancelled today as precaution against spread of influenza, according to announcement by W. Don Harrison, director of athletics. The university was closed last Thursday.

Harrison said efforts would be made to rearrange the schedule and bring both Dartmouth and Iowa here later in the season.

A game scheduled with Indiana here January 1, may be played, Harrison said.

South Carolina Will Play Vols

Columbia, S. C., December 15.—(AP) The University of South Carolina will play the University of Tennessee in a post-season game in Knoxville on December 7, 1929, according to an announcement today by James G. Driver, athletic director.

The addition of Tennessee gives South Carolina seven conference games, with Florida as another newcomer on the Gamecock schedule. Other conference games are North Carolina, North Carolina State, Maryland, Virginia and Clemson.

Furman Eleven Elects Captain

Greenville, S. C., December 15—(AP) Henry H. Smith, of Gaffney, S. C., a tackle, was named captain of the Furman Purple Hurricanes for next season at the annual Furman banquet tonight. Ernest Bull, of Greenville, was named alternate captain.

West Coble, Monroe, N. C., was awarded the silver trophy as the most valuable player on the team during the past season. Coble played quarterback.

Barrager Is Elected 1929 Trojan Captain

Los Angeles, December 15.—Nathan Barrager, all-Pacific coast center, ho started his football career in high school as a fullback, will head the University of Southern California eleven during the 1929 season, having been unanimously elected by his teammates upon the completion of the Trojan 1928 schedule.

Barrager is a blond of fiery temperament and if the Trojans next year are not one of the "fightin'est" teams ever produced it will not be his fault. The captain-elect is six feet in height, weighs 180 pounds, is 20 years of age and calls San Fernado (Calif.) his home town.

May Join League.

Youngstown and South Bend have expressed interest in the Central league, which has been a six-club circuit.

Also a Boxer.

Russ Crane, the new Illinois football captain, is a heavyweight boxer of great promise. Illinois turned out Les Mariner, who is now one of the big fellows in the race for the title.

Charity Game Players Begin Grid Practice

Workouts Planned While Eastern Team Is En Route to Coast to Play Dec. 29.

Chicago, December 15.—(AP)—Twenty-two of the leading eastern and middle western football stars took their initial workout at Dyche stadium today in preparation for the east-west gridiron encounter at San Francisco, December 29. The team entrained for the Pacific coast tonight but will take several workouts en route.

The squad, chosen and coached by Dick Hanley, Northwestern, and Andy Kerr, of Washington and Jefferson, went through a light drill consisting of dummy tackling and rudimentary formations. No intricate formations will be attempted by the eastern eleven. Coaches Hanley and Kerr said they would rely on straight line plays mixed with a passing game to carry the east to victory.

Composed of nine Western conference players, six of whom captained their teams during the 1928 season; two players from Nebraska and 11 of the east's best, the squad ranks as one of the greatest collections of football talent ever assembled as one team.

Only two of the stars originally selected for the eastern team failed to answer the roll call today. At the last minute New York university athletic authorities forbade Kenneth Strong, halfback and the nation's leading scorer, and Robert Barabee, an end, to make the trip. Their places were taken by Cy Letzelder and Tony Sweet, of Carnegie Tech.

The players represent 15 college teams, Northwestern and Carnegie Tech being the only schools to land as many as three men.

Historic Place, Once War Scene, Made Into Links

Fredericksburg, Va., December 15.—(AP)—Golf balls instead of bullets now disturb the air around the famous Mannsfield Hall estate.

The historic Virginia mansion is now a country clubhouse, and the golf links mark the spot where General Rufus Dawes, father of Vice President Dawes, led a charge against the Confederate lines. It will be included in the Fredericksburg and Spottsylvania County Battlefield Park authorized by congress.

George Washington often roamed the terrain with his dogs when he was a small boy. The estate dates back into the eighteenth century, although the present Mannsfield Hall was not erected until 1805. It forms an ideal site for the exclusive club, overlooking the Rappahannock river that flows only a stone throw from the porch.

President Coolidge spoke from the porch of the old mansion when he dedicated the Battlefield Park in October, when the first memorial was unveiled.

Nashville Pilot Seeks New Talent

Chicago, December 15.—(AP)—Clarence Rowland, manager, coach and American league umpire, is on the lookout for an entire team for the Nashville club of the Southern association, which he will pilot next season.

Rowland put in his bid for several major league players at the league meeting here this week, but failed to complete any deals.

"I am still hopeful of picking up the much-needed material before the 1929 season gets under way," Rowland said today.

Paluso Is Ready For Cuban Negro

New York, December 15.—(United News.)—Emil Paluso, Salt Lake City bantamweight, who has been heralded as the hardest hitting bantam in the ring wound up preparations today for his bout with Kid Chocolate, Cuban negro. Paluso is another westerner with a great record. His managers claim he has been defeated only once in the past four years.

Southern California Loses Several Stars

Los Angeles, December 15.—University of Southern California's football team will lose half of its starting backfield and the entire left side of its line by graduation this year. Don Williams, quarter, and Lloyd Thomas, right half, both all-American backs, will be lost from the backfield, while Lowry McCaslin, left end; Captain Jesse Hibbs, left tackle and 1927 all-American and Charles Boren, left guard, will no longer be seen in a Trojan grid lineup.

The right side of the line, Francis Tappaan, end; Frank Anthony, tackle; Clark Galloway, guard, and Nathan Barrager, center, will remain intact next year, these four men being juniors this season.

Youth Gets Chance.

The eight American league clubs will try out 72 young ball players in the spring. A few of them are not really youngsters for they have been up before.

Thrice a Winner.

Jones, of Cornell, is the only college runner to win the cross-country event three times. Cox, of Penn State, failed this fall to make it a third victory.

Mike Takes It Easy.

By advise of his physician Mike Thompson, for years a prominent football referee, has been serving only in less strenuous roles, such as head linesman and field judge.

Coach Is Honored.

In recognition of his great success with this year's team alumni of Wisconsin presented Head Coach Thistlethwaite with a watch.

Harper Did It, Says K. Rockne Of Team's Rise

Wichita, Kans., December 15.—(AP) Knute Rockne, football coach at Notre Dame, and his former gridiron instructor there, Jess C. Harper, now a prosperous cattle man of this section, give each other credit for the school's renown in football.

J. C. Harper

Harper, who operates a 20,000-acre ranch of his own and manages another of 15,000 acres under lease, admits he occasionally gets the "coaching fever," but business, he says, keeps him from even thinking football.

When illness of a relative called Harper to Kansas to take up the cattle business in 1914, he recommended "Rock," then his assistant, to succeed him as head coach of the Hoosiers. Authorities of the institution, looking askance at the youthful appearance of Rockne, graduate of only a year, reluctantly gave him the job.

Rockne made good, and now his old mentor says "Knute is the greatest football instructor the country has ever known and second only to Alonzo Stagg as a character builder for young men."

It was under Stagg that Harper played his first football at the University of Chicago.

"Jess, not myself," counters Rockne, "was the reason for Notre Dame becoming famous in football. Jess put the school on a high plane. I have tried to carry out what he started."

52 TURF STARS ARE NOMINATED FOR N. O. RACE

New Orleans, La., December 15.—(AP)—Fifty-two thoroughbreds, among them several outstanding stake winners, have been nominated for the New Orleans handicap carrying $5,000 added at a mile and a sixteenth, which is the feature of the inaugural card at the Fairgrounds.

The list made public today by the Louisiana Jockey club includes Justice F., winner of the New Orleans handicap last year, Gallahad, Thanksgiving handicap winner at Jefferson Park; War Eagle, E. McLean's fast son of Man O'War; Hal Price Headley's Helen's Babe, the Seagrave stable's Solace, frequent winner on Metropolitan tracks, and a number of other stake horses capable of stepping the distance in fast time.

Added interest will center on the race as 12 two-year-olds that on January 1, the day of the race, automatically advance a year in age and become eligibles for the Louisiana derby and the Kentucky derby, have been nominated for the stake.

Thoroughbreds that have been nominated for their possible three-year-old debuts on their "birthdays" include Miss Peggy Bailey's Burning Sun, a son of Black Servant; C. Granffagini's Minotaru, E. B. McLean's Mayor Walker and several others that as two-year-olds have shown promise.

Athletes Compete For Penn Teams

Philadelphia, December 15.—(United News.)—A record group of atheltes are working out daily in an attempt to win berths on the indoor sports teams at the University of Pennsylvania. Basketball, hockey, wrestling, boxing, fencing and swimming squads all are working regularly.

Yankees, Giants Vie for Grid Title

New York, December 15.—(United News.)—The New York Yankees meet the Giants here tomorrow in an effort to decide the football supremacy of New York city. The teams have met once before this season, each winning one game.

Plenty of Freshman Material at N. C. S.

Raleigh, N. C., December 15.—More than 100 freshmen are working out daily under Coach Ray Sermon, former Missouri player, for the North Carolina state yearling basketball varsity, and indications were today that others would join the big squad after the holidays.

Presence of several players, who are six feet tall or taller on the squad, may make it possible for Sermon to have a team of "six footers," if he so chooses. The freshmen have several intrastate games booked for January and February. The squad includes.

H. S. Culbertson, of Woodleaf; Herman Gardner, Greensboro; H. H. Garber, Louisburg; D. M. Adams, Philadelphus; H. A. Frank, Denton; F. W. Outlaw, Seven Springs; E. T. Senter, Lillington; M. C. Davenport, Lafayette, Ga.; I. J. Jackson, Middleburg; W. C. Boyce, Woodland; C. D. Pickernell, Acme; E. S. McLeod, Candor; R. E. Smith, Magnolia; J. Hasr, Wilmington; E. H. Greenwood, Barnardsville.

Frank Gorham, Raleigh; O. J. Gaylord, Jamesville; A. D. Rose, Marshall; T. G. Angell, Mocksville; J. M. Tow, Linden; J. A. Sutton, Rosewood; W. J. Stewart, Garner; J. B. Lamer, Leaksville; C. W. Howell, Pikeville; B. Ballard, Greensboro; N. D. Worth, Brooklyn, N. Y.; F. R. Anderson, Rutherfordton; J. K. Brown, Jamesville; C. V. Morgan, Ender; W. M. Smith, Oakboro; M. A. Tow, Linden.

R. G. Blaylock, Guilford college; A. Benson, Nashville; H. C. Yelverton, Fremont; J. L. McPhaul, Red Springs; H. Fulford, Bluefield, W. Va.; W. D. Avery, Smithfield; W. Brittian, Elizabeth City; P. Macon To See Native Boxer On Thursday

Heavyweight Title Contender Will Take on Blackstock at Augusta Friday.

BY BEN COTHRAN.

The annual Christmas rush seems this year to have had its effects on the manly art of modified murder, sometimes vulgarly referred to as prize fighting. This statement is occasioned by the fact that Georgia's fistic pride and joy, William Lawrence Stribling, this week is fighting on two successive nights, in the same state and is hiding it from no one.

Not only that, but it seems that the millenium has arrived in our midst when the Striblings make it public property that one of the bouts is nothing more than a two or three-round workout for the young but able Mr. Stribling.

Don Pancho First.

Thursday night in his home town, William Lawrence meets a gentleman of Spanish extraction known as Don Pancho Castano with a record said to be as imposing as his name. And then Friday night we find Mr. Stribling in Augusta meeting a young ringman, Marshall Blackstock. Blackstock is the one whom the Striblings credit with being nothing more than an exhibition match for one of the country's leading heavyweights. After such intensive activity, Young Stribling is firmly resolved to repair to his home in Macon and pass the holidays.

We have heard of stumblebums who slip about the country fighting about every night, but never have we heard any of them admitting it. But Stribling has a reason. He avers that he can progress in more satisfactory fashion fighting thuswise than in a gym and perhaps he has the right idea.

Stribling Agrees.

His two fights on successive nights came about in this manner: Over in Augusta they have been holding a heavyweight elimination tournament, for what reason we don't know, and three weeks ago William Lawrence averred that he would meet the winner Friday, December 21. Meanwhile, Macon fans and admirers of the flying fighter—Mr. Stribling drives his own airplane, you know—became insistent that they be provided with the chance to see their favorite boxer in action and the bout was arranged for Thursday night with Don Pancho.

Don Pancho holds two heavyweight titles—both unimportant. He is absolutely heavyweight champion of Cuba and also of Porto Rico. He is called the "Cuban Tornado." He is six feet two inches in height. He weighs 200 pounds. He is 23 years old. Whether or not he can fight is not exactly known.

He has fought a 10-round draw with Jeff Carroll. He did just as all boxers do and kayoed Tiny Fred Roberts in three rounds. And he fought to a 10-round draw with an Al Freeman, of Boston, whom Stribling knocked out last winter in Miami. Sidewalk chatter in Macon is to the effect that Freeman will last three or possibly four with Stribling.

Want to See Strib.

The fans, however, want to see Stribling and it probably wouldn't make much difference to them if a sawdust filled dummy was placed in the ring, just so Stribling knocked it down. That's what jdolatry does for the public.

The fight will be held in the new city auditorium and they are expecting a good crowd. People are even coming from as far away points as Miami. It probably will be a very good bout and end in another knockout victory for Stribling.

After Thursday comes Friday and Blackstock in Augusta. All we know about Mr. Blackstock is that he is a right nice young man, weighing 205 pounds, comes from Tulsa, Okla., and is champion of all the heavyweights in Augusta. He once fought a young man at Fort Benning, Willie Ptomey, and suffered the humiliation of being knocked out by Ptomey, it being one of the few times that Ptomey has won a fight and one of the very few times that he has won by a knockout.

It will be little more than a sparring match for William Lawrence, but the people in Augusta also want to see him box.

A Quick Victory.

Red Cunningham, a pro golfer, won a 36-hole Middle Atlantic open tourney at the Woodholme Country club, with 154 strokes, and finished the task in exactly five hours.

Sox Get Five Players for Myer; Rhem Waived to Minors

Boston Owner Says New Men To Aid in Race

Washington Gives Up Gaston, Reeves, Bigelow, Lisenbee, Gillis for Infielder

Boston, December 15.—(AP)—President Bob Quinn, of the Boston Red Sox, announced tonight that he had traded Buddy Myer, third baseman, to the Washington club of the American league in exchange for Horace Lisenbee and Milton Gaston, pitchers; Bob Reeves and Grant Gillis, infielders, and Ed Bigelow, outfielder. Myer came here from Washington in 1927.

The trade for Myer was made over the telephone with Clark Griffith, president of the Washington club. Quinn said the negotiations lasted eight days because Griffith was unwilling to part with two of the five players, preferring to give the Red Sox cash.

Needs Ball Players.

"I need ball players more than I need cash," Quinn said, "and I told Griffith that he would have to give me the five players named or the deal was off."

Before letting go of Myer, who was one of the most popular players on the Washington team two years ago, Quinn obtained the approval of Bill Carrigan, Red Sox manager, over the telephone from Lewiston, Maine.

"Buddy is a good ball player," Carrigan told his boss, "and I hate to see him go. But I believe the deal will benefit the club as the players we will get for him will help us more than one player could."

Best Batsman.

Myer was the best batsman on the Red Sox team last season, playing in 147 games and finishing with a batting average of .313.

In return for him, Washington gave Gillis and Reeves, two infielders who were expected to add much to the Red Sox's defensive strength, Gaston, a veteran pitcher; Lisenbee, a good hurling prospect, and Bigelow, a hard-hitting outfielder who batted for .393 in 124 games for the Birmingham Southern league club last season.

LEBOURVEAU, WINGARD SENT TO MILWAUKEE.

Philadelphia, Pa., December 15.—(AP)—The Philadelphia Athletics announced today that Outfielder Dewitt Lebourveau and Pitcher Ernest Wingard had been sent to the Milwaukee club of the American association on option.

THREE BROWN BOYS OF 'BAMA

: Johnny Mack, Billy and Tolbert All Star for Red and White :

LEND COLOR TO CRIMSON TIDE

BY HORACE RENEGAR,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

The name Brown has been synonymous with power in the University of Alabama's football offensive for eight years and the 1928 season was no exception.

Billy Brown, a flashy little runner, is the latest of the Dothan, Ala., brothers to step out for the Tuscaloosans and it looks like he will be heard from plenty by the time he ends his career.

The first of the Crimson Tide's gridiron great by that name bobbed up back in 1924 when Johnny Mack Brown, now of the movies, brought acclaim from the entire nation with his deeds of prowess at the halfback position. He led his team to victories in 1924 and 1925 against Georgia Tech and others in the south and played an important part in the Crimson triumph over the University of Washington in the Tournament of Roses.

His brother, Tolbert, then jumped into a star role in 1926 and was heralded as one of the greatest blockers and interference runners Dixie had seen. He also carried off his share of glory in the second Alabama invasion of the west, starring in the Pasadena affair against Stanford.

Tolbert starred in 1927 and this year Coach Wallace Wade gave little Billy, the youngest of the brothers, a chance at halfback and he came through with colors flying. In his first start, against Kentucky, he played the major role in the Tide's 14-to-0 victory and the next Saturday he proved a problem for Georgia Tech.

Billy's play is more on the order of Johnny Mack's style, showing a tendency to keep going after tacklers have their hands on him. His speed also should prove an asset in taking passes, especially if the Tide develops another passer of the ability of Grant Gillis, Pooley Hubert or Wu Winslett, three great oval heavers who gave Johnny Mack an opportunity to show his dash and pass-receiving ability.

Wood Offers Plane For Special Air Races

Miami, Fla., December 15.—Gar Wood, who has someone else to do his piloting, is trying to arrange a special race for the Miami air derby January 7 and 8.

Wood is willing to pit his Fairchild machine against any other ship not exceeding his own by fifty horse power.

The internationally known builder and racer of speed boats also hopes to race his Miss America VII against the British-built boat which Captain Malcolm Campbell is planning to bring to the Bay Biscayne regatta in March.

Minneapolis Obtains 1926 Ace of Cards

Hero of First St. Louis Pennant Rejected by All Major League Clubs.

St. Louis, December 15.—(AP)—Charles Flint Rhem, of Rhems, S. C., one of the pitching heroes of the St. Louis Cardinals in their pennant season of 1926, has been waived out of the major leagues and has been released to Minneapolis in the American association under optional agreement, Vice President Rickey announced tonight.

The announcement came as a surprise as Rhem could have been claimed by any major league club for the $7,500 waiver price.

"Rhem did not fit into our club," Rickey declared. "He thought more about doing as he pleased than he did about helping out the club. Furthermore in his infractions of club rules, he took others of the club with him. He was not the sort that fits into our present plans and so we passed him along.

Rhem Understood.

"The fact that the other major league clubs passed him along indicates that Rhem has been pretty well sized up by the managers of both leagues."

Phil Ball, manager of the St. Louis Browns, said he did not know in time or he might have given Rhem a trial.

"Manager Friel passed him along because he was reported to be a bad actor," Ball said. "There ought to be some good pitching in that arm. I know his folks down in South Carolina and might have handled him."

Rhem was signed by the Cardinals as a free agent in the winter of 1923-24 after he had made a great record as a pitcher for Clemson college. He was sent to Fort Smith of the Western association in 1924 and was the leading strikeout pitcher of organized baseball that season, fanning 282 batters in 37 games.

Hit By Illness.

In 1925 with the Cardinals, he was handicapped by illness, winning only eight games and losing 13. In 1926 he struck his best stride. He was in splendid condition at the opening of the season and won 11 of his first 12 contests, keeping the Cards near the top until the other pitchers could get into condition. He finished with 20 victories and seven defeats.

Rhem was a holdout the next spring and did not report to the Cardinals until a few days before start of the season. He won his first two starts, but the strain of pitching without training was too much for him and his arm became sore. He lost his overhand delivery, his most effective pitching style, and won only 10 games and lost 12.

Last year Rhem was erratic and ineffective and Manager McKechnie did not use him much. He also was handicapped by illness. He is 26 years old.

NEGOTIATIONS DRAWN OUT FOR WEEKS.

Minneapolis, December 15.—(AP)—Sending of Charles Flint Rhem, pitcher with the St. Louis Cardinals, to Minneapolis of the American association, culminated several weeks of negotiations, Mike Kelley, manager of the Millers, said tonight.

The transaction was held up for several weeks because of the difficulty in getting Rhem waived out of the National league, Kelley said.

LEADING TRACK STARS INVITED TO K. C. GAMES

New York, December 15.—(AP)—Ray Barbuti, Olympic 400-meter champion, and James Ball, of Canada, who finished only six inches behind him in a second place, have been invited to race in the "Columbus 500," feature event of the K. of C. games which open the indoor tracks January 5 at the 106th infantry armory in Brooklyn.

If the invitations are accepted the crack field of quarter-milers in the 500-yard chase for the Governor Alfred E. Smith trophy also will include Frank Cuhel, former University of Iowa track captain, who was runner-up to Lord Davis Burghley of England in the Olympic 400-meter hurdle championship.

With Barbuti and Ball heading the field, the race should prove a "natural," as their only previous meeting produced one of the most hair-raising finishes in history. Barbuti has been training steadily since the Olympics. Graduated from Syracuse university in June, he is now an insurance salesman here.

Lloyd Hahn, whose retirement was reported on his return from the Olympics, has been invited to run in the special half-mile event, which he won last year, and sponsors of the meet hold some hope that he may return for another indoor whirl. Other half-mile stars invited are Phil Edwards, Ray Conger, and Bernard McCafferty.

Old Diamond Star Hears Call of Game

Chicago, December 15—(AP)—Frank Isabell, one-time White Sox second baseman and former owner of the Wichita club of the Western league, wants to get back into the game.

Isabell wanted to purchase the Omaha club of the Western circuit, but found it was not for sale.

"I'll pick up some minor league club before the 1929 season rolls around," Isabell said.

Miami University Beats Union, 7-6

Coral Gables, Fla., December 15.—(United News.)—University of Miami defeated Union university in football today, 7 to 6, although the visitors battered the Miami line and came close to scoring, only to lose the ball on fumbles, several times.

Union scored first in the opening period, Stewart breaking through tackle from the three-yard line, after line plunges had brought the ball there.

Miami's touchdown came in the second quarter on a pass, O'Brien to Ashman. Ashman converted to give the margin of victory.

They Call Him Bo-Peep.

Bo Cuisinier, Wisconsin quarter, is said to be the smallest man in the Big Ten, and also one of the best. He is five feet five.

Short and Heavy.

Lawrence Koepke, a stocky fellow five inches short of the regulation six feet, holds down a regular guard with Navy.

Bigger and Better.

In 1906, 22 years ago, the World Almanac, a record book for everything, carried only 30 football teams. There are five times as many now.

Welcome Baltimore.

The University of Baltimore will make its debut in the football world next fall. The school is only a few years old.

FOOTBALL NO LONGER TARGET

Grid Sport Enriches Schools and Helps Pay for All Other Games

OF EDUCATORS' CRITICISM

BY GEORGE KIRKSEY.

New York, December 15. The annual barrage against football apparently is going to be late in making its appearance this year, if, indeed, it makes its appearance at all.

The football season is over, but not one prominent educator so far as known has scored football as "the evil of the college campus."

Criticizing strenuous sports has ever been a popular fad among those who lead placid lives. Football has been a target for criticism dating as far back as 1583, when "foot balle," a forerunner of the present game, was played in England."

Phillip Stubbes in his "Anatomie of Abuses," called "foot balle," more "a bloody and murderous practice than a fellowy sport of pastime."

Was Termed "Unfit."

President Charles Eliot, of Harvard, in his annual report of 1895, said of football: "The game of football grows worse and worse as regard to foul and violent play and the number and gravity of the injuries which the players suffer. It has become perfectly clear that the game as now played is unfit for college sport."

More recently William Allen White paraphrased the opposition against football by his famous remark, "The tail is wagging the dog"—the tail being football and the dog the college.

The main charge against modern football is "overemphasis." Upwards of 30,000,000 persons paid more than $50,000,000 to see the football games played from coast to coast the past season. The Notre Dame eleven alone played to almost a half a million. Pennsylvania drew 465,000. The Army drew almost 400,000. The Army-Navy game at Soldier's Field, Chicago, attracted the largest crowd, 120,000.

Now It Pays the Bills.

Football pays the bills for almost all college sports and encourages athletics for all. The annual report of the University of Pennsylvania illustrates the point. Football receipts at Pennsylvania totaled $936,838.56 and showed a profit of $460,503.56. Out of 15 other sports, only one other, basketball, showed a profit, and only a mere $24,754.26 in comparison to the large sum realized from football.

Football is no longer considered "a brutal game." In 1905 President Roosevelt called a conference of representatives from Princeton, Harvard and Yale to discuss ways and means to preserve the game. Several schools, including Columbia, California and Stanford temporarily abandoned football at this time.

Yet there are more injuries and deaths caused by football now than in 1905, but this is accounted for by the fact that more players by several times play the game today than did in those days. The percentage of casualties is about the same.

Nineteen deaths were caused by football the past season. This is two more than in 1927 and one less than the highest total in recent years, 20 in 1925.

Football deaths and injuries are due in a large measure to starting men who are not in proper physical condition to stand the hard knocks of the game, according to Keene Fitzpatrick, Princeton trainer.

Fitzpatrick's Idea.

"The greatest difficulty is that in many schools and colleges scrimmages are started too soon," he said. "The men have not become hardened and cannot stand the battering."

Few of the larger colleges had many casualties the past season. Only three college stars died from football injuries. Miles Fox, Navy halfback, died on Anugust 31 after having been rendered unconscious by a sunstroke in practice the previous day. James Fenton, Holy Cross, died from a spine injury received in practice September 11. Leo Goodreau, Villanover quarterback, died October 2 from a broken neck received four days previous in practice.

Fitzpatrick believes that every boy who plays football should be required to submit to a physical examination and that conditioning exercises should be held for a period of two weeks before actual practice is attempted.

Conference Officials Approve Charity Game Here In 1930

:-: WHEN TECH HIGH WON A G. I. A. A. TITLE :-:

Dr. Sanford Is Reelected S. C. President

Tournaments Awarded and Atlanta Gets Annual Basketball Meet Set for March 1.

BY HORACE C RENEGAR.

Nashville, Tenn., December 15.—(AP) Meeting in open session, with opposition bobbing up from several members, the southern conference today adopted a plan for a New Year's day charity football game in 1930 to be played at Atlanta.

The vote was 11 to 8 for the game with the other institutions not voting. The plan, to be revised in some details, will be the only post-season game sanctioned in 1930 and will be continued annually if the conference and its outside sponsors so desire.

Dr. S. V. Sanford spoke in light disapproval of that portion of the plan which would call for one team to be chosen from institutions in the upper section of the conference and the other from the lower section. He declared this might be seized upon by some members of the press and others to be used as a weapon for splitting the conference, pointing out that the conference yearly was becoming more harmonious.

Shrine Benefit Game.

This game would be played for the benefit of Shrine hospitals in the south.

The conference at its closing session unanimously voted permission for Georgia Tech to go to Pasadena, Calif., New Year's day to play the University of California in a football game at the Tournament of Roses.

In the awarding of tournament dates and cities, March 1, 2, 4, 5 were the days set for the annual basketball tournament at Atlanta. Permission also was given for the teams to carry 10 men on their squads to the tournament instead of eight as has hitherto been provided. Expenses for the extra two men, however, would be carried by the schools probably rather than the basketball committee.

The tennis tournament was awarded Tulane university for the week of May 14-19. The cross-country event will be staged at the University of North Carolina the Saturday before Thanksgiving and the boxing tournament will be held at the University of Virginia March 1-2.

Southern Relays April 13.

May 17 and 18 were the dates set for th track and field meet while Coach W. Alexander also announced that the southern relays, a meet sponsored by Georgia Tech, would be held at Atlanta April 13.

The conference also brought the amendment for a central booking office for athletic contest officials from the table and adopted it. This amendment was tabled at last night's session.

Dr. S. V. Sanford, of the University of Georgia, was reelected president of the conference; Dr. J. F. Broussard, of Louisiana State university, was chosen vice president, and Dr. W. D. Funkhouser, of the University of Kentucky, was reelected secretary and treasurer. The conference adjourned following the afternoon session.

Bruner Cage Coach.

Los Angeles, December 15.—Jack Bruner, all-coast basketball center for the University of Southern California last year, has signed as Trojan frosh coach this season, according to Willis O. Hunter, director of intercollegiate athletics at S. C.

Reports 'Boloney,' Says Al Lassman, Regarding Health

New York, December 15.—(AP)—Al Lassman, New York university football captain who was injured in the game with Carnegie Tech, has returned from Pittsburgh to deny personally the many rumors about his condition. Great care was taken to keep his arrival secret, but after he had reached the hospital where he will remain for the next two weeks he set at rest the rumors that he was paralyzed and not in full control of his mental faculties by sitting up and saying that such stories were "boloney."

Charley Vye, assistant football coach who remained with Lassman after his injury and returned with him in a private car, reported that the giant tackle was in good spirits all the way and kept up a lively conversation. Lassman plans to remain in seclusion in the hospital for at least two weeks more, then go to some southern resort to recuperate.

Tech High Wins Title of G. I. A. A.

and about six Tech High men fell on the leather.

Another Touchdown.

So the Smithies took it and set off for another touchdown. Carnes got seven yards at right end and Hadley made it first down on his own 31-yard line with a five-yard crash through center. Next they gave the ball to Mott and he was off on another one of his yell-producing runs, slashing off 15 yards at left end for another first down.

Thus it continued. Carnes got five at right guard, Hadley made four on a fake kick and then cracked left guard wide open for eight yards and first down on Gordon's 37-yard line. Hutt and Mott made another first down as the quarter ended. They kept on going with little resistance from Gordon until the 18-yard line was reached. The Smithies were penalized five yards for offside, a pass failed and Hadley was held to two yards.

Mott took things in hand, ran straight back and threw a high, wavering sort of pass to Vess, who caught the ball on the dead run and was forced out of bounds on Gordon's two-yard line. The ball was brought in and Hadley sent through center. He came to rest about two inches from the goal line and carried the ball over on the next play. Mott drop-kicked the point after touchdown and the score was 13-0.

Gordon Scores.

Tech High kicked-off to Gordon and the conquerors of Riverside made their most sustained offensive effort of the day that was crowned with success in the form of a touchdown.

Following three plays which availed little, Benton pranced through an enormous hole at left end and had made 16 yards before being hauled down on his own 43-yard line. With the line charging fiercely, Barrentine tucked the ball under his arm and, stumpy legs churning away, went twisting and turning off left tackle for 37 yards to put the ball on Tech High's 23-yard line.

Tech High was on the defensive now, but it couldn't hold those two ball carriers. Benton and Barrentine. Benton in two plays made 13 yards and here you were on Tech High's 10-yard line. Hutt was knocked out on this play and carried from the field. Benton took the ball again and made nine more yards. Owen failed to gain. Then Benton again, one more yard and touchdown. Benton failed to kick the extra point.

Gordon kicked off to Tech High which began marching back down the field, aided greatly by a long 31-yard pass from Mott to Vess. But another pass thrown by Mott went over the goal and Tech High was momentarily halted, the ball going to Gordon on its own 20-yard line.

Gordon Punts.

Gordon soon punted, however, Mott catching the ball and returning it to Gordon's 24-yard line. Mott, Carnes and Hadley soon made a first down with the ball on Gordon's 13-yard line. Then Mott got three at right tackle and Hadley made four with a lunge through center. He tried again and made two yards, but the play was called back and Gordon penalized five yards for off-sides which put Tech High in possession of the ball one yard from a touchdown. Hadley was stopped a bare six inches from the line on a center rush but made his goal on the next try. Mott missed his try for the extra point and Tech High was leading by 19 to 6 when half-time arrived.

That first half had been chock-full of scoring and excitement and the second was little more than the denouement with Tech High pushing over another score, threatening a couple of times, while Gordon did very little.

The Smithies' final score came midway of the third quarter. Hadley, in one of the few times that either team punted, kicked from his 30-yard line to Benton, who let the ball roll by him, gave chase and grabbed the ball which slipped out of his hands, with Tippett recovering for Tech High on Gordon's 14-yard line. Carnes got three yards on a twisting drive off right tackle and then Hadley, assisted by Mott once, drove the ball the rest of the way to a touchdown, employing powerful bucks through the line's center. Mott kicked goal.

Gordon flashed again on the kick-off, Owen breaking loose with a 36-yard gallop at left end, going to Tech High's 30-yard line. Tech High clamped down here and held.

After that Tolbert drifted in numerous substitutions for Tech High who were able to effectively check any Gordon drives.

So they battled on in the quickly-gathering dusk and a little while afterwards Referee Mack Tharpe's whistle sounded and it was all over. Fans and supporters crowded out on the field and congratulated the Smithies on their victory which brought them a G. I. A. A. title and successfully ended one of the school's best seasons in years. It was a good football game.

Uniform Code For Athletics Is Proposed

Amateur and Professional Standards Would Come Under New Rule for Sports.

Columbia, Mo., December 15.—(AP) A uniform athletic code for all American colleges and universities would be formulated under terms of a resolution adopted here today at the fourth annual congress of the National Student Federation of America.

A discussion group led by M. A. Cheek, of Harvard university, recommended the code be drafted by a national convention of student leaders, athletic directors, coaches and athletes, and non-subscribing colleges would be boycotted by the ones governed by its terms.

The code would deal with standards of amateurism and professionalism, eligibility rules and with participation in professional sports such as summer baseball by college athletes.

Cheek pointed to the disparity in eligibility rules, stating that a man could be an amateur in one conference and a professional in another.

Committee to Be Named.

A committee will be named to arrange details of the proposed code-drafting convention.

Ursel C. Narver, of Portland, Oregon, who was graduated last June from Oregon State college, was elected president of the federation late today.

Miss Martha Biehle, of New York city, a student of Wellesley college, was reelected vice president, and Max J. Carman, of Oberlin college, Oberlin, Ohio, was elected treasurer.

The 1929 congress will be at Leland Stanford university in California. The retiring president is E. H. Miller, of St. Louis, formerly of Washington and Lee university and now a Harvard law student.

The SPORTLIGHT — Grantland Rice

NO REST FOR THE WEARY.

The western conference has apparently decided that one football game is about the same as any other and the only system is to plunge in neck high and keep swimming through heavy surf all the fall.

The idea is to open at top speed in early October and keep going as long as you can stand up. It may be just as good as any other plan. If you are to be beaten you at least are beaten by a big team.

Practically every team in the conference plays at least six big games and many of them play seven.

Take Ohio State's dainty menu—Iowa, Michigan, Indiana, Pittsburgh, Northwest, Navy and Illinois!

How many coaches would like to see that dish planted before them?

Or take Wisconsin's case—Colgate, Northwestern, Notre Dame, Iowa, Purdue, Chicago and Minnesota. The others are just about the same.

Suppose, for example, Princeton played Pennsylvania, Dartmouth, Army, Navy, Harvard and Yale? This schedule would be about on a par with the conference schedules.

Notre Dame, of course, keeps to her hard march—the hardest schedule, year in and year out, that any team faces. But they can't build schedules much tougher than the western conference hands every one of its ten teams.

In addition to battling with one another, where a championship game may be played the first week in October, they lug in Army, Notre Dame, Princeton, Pittsburgh, Washington, Navy and several others.

Brown, it might be remembered, had a much finer season than the attending publicity showed. Brown lost only one game, which is all you can ask from any outfit.

Ohio State's New Leader.

Dear Sir: Ohio States university will announce the appointment of Sam Williamson as the successor to Dr. John W. Wilce as Buckeye football director. William is an Ohio graduate and played one year under the man he succeeds.

Willaman has been coaching for more than 12 years, and for the last eight in the collegiate field. After winning success as a high school coach in Ohio, he went to Ames, Iowa, where he gave that college several winning elevens. Two years ago he returned to Ohio State as Dr. Wilce's chief assistant.

Willaman is a shrewd football man, with ability to get close to his players. He is expected to make a good showing at Ohio, although he faces a tough schedule of seven major games in 1929. If his team wins five of those contests he can be rated a successful leader.

It was while at Ames that Willaman had his quarterback pull one of the smartest stunts the game has seen in a long time. Ames was playing Drake and had scored a touchdown and kicked the extra point. Then Allen Drake drove Ames back into his own territory, Johnny Gehm, the Iowa quarterback, made three intentional safeties to win by one point. Or that's the way the story goes, at any rate.

BUCKEYE BELL.

The Old Battle Again.

Chicago's Cubs and New York's Giants have about as good a shot at the National league pennant this next year as any other platoon. This means keener rivalry than ever—rivalry that goes back more than 20 years, to Brown and Mathewson, Chance and McGraw, Tinker and Evers, Devlin and the rest.

The addition of Hornsby will give the Cubs a great chance. Several of the new Giant stars have become seasoned enough to add more stuff to the club. With an even break in luck these two ancient rivals should be under the same cloud of dust when they swing down the stretch.

"Here's a tip to the eastern picked for the annual coast game," writes F. H. "The western team will stop Strong, just as it stopped Cadlwell, and the western pass defense will make Harpster look like an ordinary quarterback and an ordinary passer." Many things can happen in a football game. This may be true. But the coast will be willing to admit that two pretty fair football players have arrived when they get a look at Strong and Harpster, whatever the final score. They may look no whit better than Carroll and Maple, but Carroll and Maple will also do fairly well when some one is paging football players.

Second Tunneys and second Dempseys flock along about as often as second Ty Cobbs and second Babe Ruths.

Also one of the finest ways to slice is to face toward the left of the course and think about slicing. It hasn't failed yet out of several million fair trial

Dixie Star's Jersey Preserved in Case

Macon, Ga., December 15.—(AP)—The famous "42" of the Mercer university football field is to be preserved for posterity.

The football jersey worn by Phoney Smith, Mercer's quarterback, who ended his football career here in 1927, has been presented to a campus fraternity by a friend of Smith's.

It will be preserved in a glass case and displayed in the university library. Smith was one of the outstanding athletes of the university.

Huskiest Tacklers.

Two of the huskiest tacklers in the country this year are Captain Sprague, of the Army, 216 pounds, and Milo Lubratovich, 210 pounds, of Wisconsin. The latter is out with a broken ankle.

Tech Cagers Show Signs Of Good Team

Coach Mundorff Tries Many Combinations as Work Progresses.

BY HERB CLARK.

Georgia Tech's cage squad, hard at work for the opening of its season on January 5 when Josh Cody will bring the Clemson basketeers to the court at the Flats to open Tech's official schedule, has been spending its time of late in stiff scrimmages against all manner of opposition.

The scrubs and freshman team, which latter is adding to Coach Mundorff's worries until the return of Bill Fincher from the trip to the coast with the Tornado, and various outfits from the campus and town have appeared in opposition to the Jackets, and the varsity squad is gradually showing some improvement.

Until recently the Jackets could not be induced to pass the ball with the result that many impossible shots had to be attempted, and the ball fell into the hands of the opposition with an alarming frequency. Each failure to keep the ball in motion to real advantage brought comment of a caustic nature from Mundorff. However, the boys have learned to get rid of the ball, and are finding passing an interesting and profitable pastime.

Show Good Signs.

The Engineers give promise of becoming a real floor aggregation by the time the season opens. The ball is being worked down the floor with speed and ease, and the tries for points are not being made until some one of the gold-jerseyed boys are in a position which makes the attempt fairly certain to success.

A number of different lineups have been used by Mundorff, any one of which could take the floor with some hope of success, or could furnish the material out of which a new quintet could be formed. Captain Gus Heeke, and his alternate, Sid Goldin, find a place in most of the teams, with Heeke being nominally at the center post and Goldin playing a standing guard. The other guard position is being best filled by Wages, a graduate of the 1927 rat squad. At forwards, Mundorff has his two veterans of last year, Wilson and Williamson, ready for action to start.

Plans Long Tour.

Relief material is also plentiful. A squad of about thirty men are working out for varsity posts, and will provide four capable forwards in Warner, Coker, Tippin, and Lewis for insertion when either of the starters is forced to come off the floor. Hudson seems to be the best of the crew out for the tip-off post, while Vance Maree and Stumpy Thomason, of grid fame, will be fighting to be included as a pair of guards, along with Hutchinson, Colvin, Vinson, and one or two more.

Mundorff is working up a trip which will keep the Techsters busy over the holidays, and is expected to include games with several of the leading quintets of this state, Florida, and possibly Tennessee and Alabama. This jaunt will give the mentor a slant on the possibilities of his outfit under real fire, and should have them on top for the opening conference battle on January 5.

Can't Lose in N. Y.

The West Virginia team has yet to be beaten in any of its games in New York. The game against Fordham on election day was the fourth in the big town in the last few years.

First Captain Of 'Gators Praises 1928 Team's Work

University of Florida, Gainesville, December 15.—Florida's first football captain, Roy W. Corbett, who led the 'Gators of 1906, is not unmindful of the present day success of the Floridians.

From Seattle, Wash., Corbett wired to the Florida coaches and members of the squad: "Please accept heartiest cogratulations from perhaps your farthest away but not least interested alumnus. Twenty-two years ago when I enrolled as first student at Gainesville, our squad numbered 18, with used suits and shoes. Incidentally 'Gators came from nickname given substitute center (Bogator Shorter). This boy, who had his first train ride coming to Gainesville—he didn't know what football was—finished school as captain of the varsity.

"Your wonderful record brings almost daily space in the newspapers of California. I wish you were playing out here. Go get Tennessee and finish your big job again. Best wishes.

"ROY W. CORBETT."

Nurmi Arrives On Mystery Trip

of facial expression. "Nope," was a favorite reply to all questions and invitations.

It is expected, however, that Nurmi will make his first appearance on this second American tour at a meet to be conducted by the Finnish-American A. C. at Madison Square Garden, January 12, and will probably run in such big events as the Millrose, Illinois A. C. and Boston A. A. games later in the season.

Carries Suitcases.

Nurmi gave eloquent proof of his physical condition and at the same time an evidence of his unassuming habits when he stepped off the boat carrying four heavy suitcases and scorning the attentions of the ship's stewards eager to do something, anything, for the man who proved in the last Olympics that he still can defend his title as the fastest thing in shoes.

For the benefit of cameramen Nurmi went through a few racing paces along the pier and he was still traveling fast when he disappeared aboard a taxi.

When Quist arrived shortly before 11 o'clock he found Paavo had gotten his baggage cleared some minutes before and the pier was deserted except for a customs employee who was glad to announce he had shaken Nurmi's hand.

Trail Turns Cold.

Sleuthing about among the cab drivers Hugo found Paavo's destination had been Paterson.

The trail seemed warm and Quist headed for the New Jersey City confident Nurmi would be found there at a residence where he had made his headquarters part of the time while in the United States in 1925.

But Paavo was not there and Quist, returning to New York, began combing the Bronx in the hope of locating Nurmi at another of his haunts of three years ago. After hours of searching Quist was about ready to give it up and confess that all he knows about the case is that he "can't find Paavo."

Heavy Traffic.

It took 530 traffic cops to keep football fans straightened out at the Navy-Michigan game.

Jim McLarnin And Joe Glick Sign for Bout

Lightweights Will Battle Early Next Year in Gotham; Slattery Hurt.

New York, December 15.—(United News.)—Jimmy McLarnin, Vancouver, B. C., lightweight and Joe Glick, Brooklyn, signed today for a 10-round bout at Madison Square Garden January 11.

McLarnin, recently knocked out by Ray Miller, in Detroit, hopes to build himself back into a contender for the lightweight or welterweight title. The hard-hitting Irish boy has had trouble making the lightweight limit of 135 pounds since he was defeated by Sammy Mandell in a title bout at the Polo Grounds last spring and may elect to campaign in the welterweight ranks.

McLarnin was scheduled to depart for Vancouver tonight to spend the holidays at home. He will return to New York January 2, to complete training here for his bout with Glick.

In his last appearance in a New York ring McLarnin knocked out Phil McGraw, Detroit Greek, in the first round. Glick has run up a long string of victories recently and defeated Baby Joe Gans, sensational Los Angeles negro lightweight, shortly after Jack Dempsey bought part of the latter's contracts.

Jimmy Maloney, Boston heavyweight, whose successful comeback has again placed him high among the contenders for the title vacated by Gene Tunney, will arrive in New York Monday to complete training for his 10-round bout with Con O'Kelly, Irish battler who has whipped two Boston fighters, Al Freidman and Jack Gagnon, in his only two starts in this country.

The proposed bout between Jimmy Slattery and Jack Delaney, scheduled for January 4, probably will have to be postponed because of an injury to Slattery's hand. Red Carr, Slattery's manager, announced today that the Buffalo boy hurt his hand in training.

LOUGHRAN ENDS TRAINING FOR BOUT.

Chicago, December 15.—(United News.)—Tommy Loughran, world's light heavyweight boxing champion, completed training today for his bout with "Big Boy" Peterson, of Minneapolis, here Monday night.

The bout will be the Philadelphian's first start as a heavyweight. His handlers said today that if he wins by a knockout, he will relinquish the 175-pound championship, and battle only heavyweights in the future.

Jack Dempsey is expected here Monday and may attend the bout. Dempsey is displaying unusual interest in the crop of heavyweight contenders.

Cage Outlook Dark At Carnegie Tech

Pittsburgh, December 15.—(AP)—Boasting a near championship football team during 1928, Carnegie Tech of Pittsburgh finds the pendulum of fortune swinging the other way, so far as basketball is concerned.

The Tartans last season did not win a single game, and the outlook for the 1928-20 schedule is just as dark.

Captain J. Harvey White, Detroit, playing his last season as a regular, will be the king pin of the combination. The available first year material is not very good.

California Coach Works On Defense Against Jacket Plays

Golden Bears In Good Shape For Big Game

Nibs Price Names 50 Men for Classic in Rose Bowl With Tech Eleven.

California Off For Rose Bowl Thursday

Pasadena, Calif., December 15. (AP)—Practice for the New Year's day game between Georgia Tech's Golden Tornado and the Bears of California in the Rose Bowl begins next week with indications that the western team will have a decided advantage in reserve strength over the Dixie squad.

It was revealed today that Nibs Price, California coach, will bring about 50 men to Pasadena next Thursday to start intensive training.

California's squad will outnumber by about 16 players the team Coach Bill Alexander is said to be planning to bring here December 24.

San Francisco, Calif., December 15. (Special.)—Coach Nibs Price, of California, has received storm warnings of an impending tornado in the form of complete charts and descriptions of plays used by Georgia Tech in overwhelming Georgia. These were gathered by the California freshman coach, Brick Mitchell, who visited Atlanta to see the game. Price is now busy devising a defense for these plays and is also concocting a new set of offensive tricks the better to fool the opposition.

In the meanwhile the California team has temporarily laid aside moleskins and headgear and is busily bucking the textbooks and struggling through final examinations. The Bears will continue to struggle with finals until December 20. On that night they will bundle into the Pullmans and head for Pasadena, where they will practice on the following day in the Rose Bowl. Price is anxious to accustom his team to the fast turf field and the warmer climate of Pasadena. He also believes that 10 days of intensive practice should enable him to develop the same type of bewildering offensive that so completely dazzled the Pennsylvania team when it played California at Berkeley last December 31.

Bears Come to Life.

Northern California fans will long remember how in that game the Golden Bears, who all season had lacked a deceptive attack, suddenly came to life and performed all sorts of football legerdemain to confound the Quakers and cop the game by a 27-to-13 score. Followers of the Bear see a marked parallel between their favorites' record of this year and last and consequently look forward to a New Year's victory brought about by a surprise attack.

During the past season the Bears have been handicapped by a slow, turfless playing field in the Berkeley stadium which prevented Lom, Clymer, Barr, Eisan, Ewing, Rice and Schlichting, the speed burners of the backfield, from performing up to their known possibilities. The only game played by the Bears away from home was the Washington game at Seattle, played in a pouring rain on the worst possible sort of field. It was in this game that California fully demonstrated its great defensive strength by repeatedly preventing Washington's all-American Carroll from plunging to a touchdown. California won by a 6-to-0 score and without the aid of Benny Lom, its backfield ace, who was confined to the sidelines with a wrenched shoulder.

Dry Field Assured.

California has not represented the west at the annual Pasadena game since seven years ago when it engaged in a scoreless mud battle with Washington and Jefferson. This year, however, there is certain to be no mud even if the "unusual phenomen" of rain in southern California should again occur, for a huge rubberized canvas cover belonging to the Berkeley institution has been shipped to Pasadena to insure a dry turf for New Year's day.

Minor injuries sustained in the Stanford game by Charley Schmidt, Captain Irvine Phillips and Benny Lom have all been healed by now and the ravages of the flu have been dissipated. In fact every member of the squad is in first-class shape except Assistant Coach Brick Muller, who admits that he is laid up with a combination of influenza and chicken pox, but declares that he will be up in a day or two. Coach Price has named the 50 men who will comprise his squad and it is likely that there will be one or two additions to the list before the team goes south on December 20. It now includes the names of 20 backs and 30 linemen. In addition the California Student association has arranged to send to Pasadena its crack 110-piece band and also its glee club.

N. Y. U. Is Named X-Country Winner

New York, December 15.—(AP)—A decision of the executive committee of the Middle Atlantic States Collegiate association naming New York university instead of Alfred university, the winner of the association's cross-country championship run at Van Cortlandt Park, November 17, was announced today.

Union and Johns Hopkins also lost ground by the revised standing, which makes N. Y. U. first with 36 points; Alfred second, 37; Lafayette third, 73; Rutgers fourth, 110; Lehigh fifth, 115; Union sixth, 125, and Johns Hopkins seventh, 134. The original team scoring had Alfred first with 33 points and N. Y. U., which contributed the individual winner and runner-up, second with 46, while the order of the others was Lafayette, Union, Johns Hopkins, Rutgers and Lehigh.

Tide Hurts Star.

Purdue's 19-19 tie and Lubratovich's broken ankle were obstacles in the way of Wisconsin's hopes for a championship in the Big Ten this year. The star tackle was hurt in the Alabama game.

HAWK-EYE-ING SPORTS

by DICK HAWKINS

Goldie Locks and 50 Bears.

COACH NIBS PRICE will lead a pack of 50 (fifty) little Golden Bears to Pasadena to meet the Tornado of Tech on New Year's day. It may be a good thing this game isn't to be a gang fight. Fifty to thirty-one would be rather uneven.

But the fact that Coach Price is taking half the University of California to the Rose Bowl in football uniforms is no cause for serious alarm when you read the list of letter men on the squad. As you may remember, it was stated in this column a few days ago that Coach Price gave but 16 letters to football players this year. Coach Alexander gave 27 at Tech. That may or may not mean much, but the statement that California has the advantage of Tech in the matter of reserve seems ill founded.

The statement from the California university publicity bureau referred to above, gave the total time played by each letter man this past season. It was noticeable that eight men played practically every minute of every conference game. How many men at Georgia Tech have played more than three quarters of the time this year in every conference game? The answer is "durned few, if any."

Just in case the readers of this literary endeavor might get the wrong idea of our arguments, let us state right now that those eight Golden Bears referred to above are doggone good bears or they wouldn't have played as consistently as they did. A glance at the first string line—that played nearly all of every conference game intact—gives some idea of the great strength of that forward wall.

Here is a list of the men with weights and heights:

End—Avery, 195, 6 feet 2 inches.
Tackle—Bancroft, 198, 6 feet 2 inches.
Guard—Schwarz, 200, 6 feet.
Center—Riegel, 176, 6 feet.
Guard—Beckett, 190, 6 feet 1 inch.
Tackle—Fitz, 200, 6 feet 1 inch.
End—Captain Phillips, 190, 6 feet 1 inch.

There isn't a man in that line under six feet in height and five of the seven are over six feet. The average weight of the line is 192.5 pounds per man. It will take some battering to get that line in shape for a slaughter. In the backfield Coach Price has but two real substitutes, but his first string backfield has followed the great Lom through that giant wall most consistently this season. Out in California they think everything is rosy besides the tournament, but high winds certainly do play havoc with flowers.

Plenty of Punch.

THERE MAY BE BETTER football played in this world but for sheer fan interest Tech High and Gordon Institute of Barnesville can have the celluloid cigarette holder. Tech High won the G. I. A. A. title at Spiller park Saturday afternoon by the rather one-sided score of 26-6 but the score does not indicate what kind of game it was.

Neither team had any defense except at rare intervals, but they both had considerable offense. Though no accurate figures are at hand, it is probable that both teams carried the ball something over 300 yards per each from scrimmage. It has been suggested that if the coaches had instructed their ends to refrain from boxing tackles and take out the secondary on each offensive play there would have been a touchdown for each side on each snap.

It certainly is true that hardly a man felt the restraining hands of a lineman at the line of scrimmage. Tech High made 12 first downs and Gordon made eight but players of both teams got away for runs of half the length of the field more than once.

For a sick squad the Smithies smeared themselves with glory Saturday. There was no stopping the golden-clad lads on offense and their defense was a shade better than that of Gordon. "Beans" Hadley, fullback for the Purple and Gold, made the crowd forget all about Heavy Hammond for a day. Heavy is good, but "Beans" was positively undeniable Saturday. Buster Mott, the flashy halfback, played his usual tricks on the opposition and made them like it. Carnes, another half for the Smithies, continued his good work and little Red Hutt filled out the trio very admirably until he was injured in the middle of the game.

These Smithies could not but share the glory with several Gordonites, however. Barrentine, Benton and Owen demonstrated a few tricks themselves. This little Benton boy is about as fast as they make 'em. His end running was one of the big features of the game.

A Game To Look Forward To.

THE officials of the southern conference have voted to permit the charity football game proposed by the Shrine to take place in Atlanta on New Year's day of 1930. This action should be greeted with cheers. That will mean that Atlanta fans will be able to look forward to a real football classic each year as soon as the regular season is over.

The conference made no announced ruling on the request of the Shriners that the conference allow no team in the organization to play any other post-season game. That news, too, should be very acceptable. Undoubtedly the sanctioned charity game should take precedence over any intra-conference post-season tilt, but if one team is selected for national recognition and asked to play an intersectional game to establish national leadership, the conference should allow that team to go. That probably will be done and it should have little or no serious effect on the charity game. That, however, should be left to the future. "Sufficient unto the day is the football thereof."

Armour Sets Record In Coast Tournament

Professional Shoots 66 To Lead Golden Three Strokes in Sacramento Golf Meet.

Sacramento, Calif., December 15.—(AP)—With a record-smashing 66 for the day's play behind him, Tommy Armour, 1927 national open champion, loomed a heavy favorite tonight to carry off the Sacramento open golf tournament.

Armour collected six birdies and an eagle for the 18 holes, dropping a stroke on the ninth and one on the sixteenth. Coupled with yesterday's 74 Armour enters tomorrow's 36-hole finals with an edge of three strokes on John Golden, of New Jersey, his nearest competitor, who in turn is one stroke ahead of Eddie Loos, of Pasadena.

The round that saw Armour better the course record of 68, formerly held jointly by Abe Espinosa, Art Demaine and Frank Minch, local pro, also saw the partial collapse of Ed Gayer, of Chicago, and Horton Smith, of Joplin, Mo., who turned in cards of 70 yesterday. Both took 77 today.

Ed Loos stood tonight the lone even par golfer, his 74 today averaging with yesterday's fast 70 for par over the 36 holes. "Wild Bill" Mehlhorn, who turned in a disappointing 78 yesterday, came back today with a brilliant 70 to place him back in the running. William Goggin, of San Francisco, who took a 73 yesterday, was in in 75 today to tie with Mehlhorn at 148 for fifth place.

The 64 low scorers will be paired in the finals tomorrow.

Navy Quintet Wins From West Maryland

Annapolis, Md., December 15.—(United News.)—Western Maryland was no match for the Navy on the basketball court here today and the Midshipmen inaugurated their 1928 season with a 49-to-27 victory.

Tuffy's Rep Only Bubble, Says Trumbull

Battler, Hailed as Another Dempsey, Far From Being That Sort of Fighter.

BY WALTER TRUMBULL.

(Copyright, 1928, by North American Newspaper Alliance and The Constitution.)

The great reputation which Tuffy Griffiths brought eastward proved to be only a bubble, which burst before the puncturing fists of James Braddock of the Jersey Braddocks. Yet we should not be too hard on Tuffy.

He was greatly handicapped by the advance notices which heralded him as "another Dempsey." In peering at many ringmen who have been announced as second Dempseys, I have come to the sorrowful conclusion that there is no such animal. It would be exhilirating to see a second Dempsey, but when they say a man is as good as Dempsey I have come to believe that, while the boosters are trying to be truthful, they are not wholly frank. It would appear that they are referring to Dempsey when he was ten years old.

Takes Time.

But it takes time to make a heavyweight. In 1915, Jack Dempsey himself was all but massacred by a dusky opponent named John Lester Johnson. Four years later, in the burning heat of a July day, Dempsey knocked out Jess Willard and became heavyweight champion of the world.

Willard in 1911 had little except size to recommend him. He won the title from Jack Johnson in Havana four years later. Gene Tunney was seven years on his way from a marine's uniform to Jack Dempsey's crown.

So a single setback for a young fellow such as Griffiths means little. He may come on to be a champion in the next few years. It is true that he shows small indication of anything of the sort at present and he may never be better than a third rater. But, if he has the courage and the patience and the right stuff in him, a single defeat, however humiliating, means little in any youngster's career.

Tex Disappointed.

Naturally, Tex Rickard was disappointed at Tuffy's showing. Mr. Rickard can develop a great affection in a very short time for any boxer who has a real punch and can use it. The great promoter is looking for just such a young man, with the intention of making him financially independent for life. This is not sheer benevolence on the part of Mr. Rickard. He would figure on getting some small part of the financial benefit himself. Mr. Rickard is only altruistic to a certain extent.

Still, Tex Rickard is not mad at Tuffy, even though disappointed. A boxer who blows into New York and packs the Garden to the roof is all right with the Garden's president. If Tuffy Griffiths went to Florida, the chances are that he would be permitted to wield a mallet on Mr. Rickard's croquet course or go fishing. If young Lochinvar himself should come out of the west he could not reasonably be expected to do more than fill the Garden. Any time they discover another lad fistically inclined and "as good as Dempsey" Mr. Rickard will be charmed to pay his carfare to New York. His return arrangements are his own affair.

James Braddock may come out of this affair a bigger drawing card. James has been busting jaws and knocking second Dempseys for a loop and would appear to deserve something for his efforts. No less a person than Gene Tunney, the Italian traveler, once said that Braddock looked like a very sweet prospect.

Too Light.

The trouble with Braddock has been that he has been unable to take on weight. Regardless of his earnest efforts at eating and building up, he has continued to resemble a wire on which the master workman has neglected to put the insulation. But in spite of his lack of bone covering, this lad swings a very adamantine fist. He socks with vigor and abandon and seems to enjoy his work. It may be that James will grow to his height and the size of his fists, and become high among the logical contenders.

Young Stribling and Jack Sharkey still seem to be the favorites in the winter books. Johnny Risko appears to be on the down grade. The Cleveland baker boy is not as tough as he used to be. Perhaps he needs a rest. A good long rest certainly has done wonders for Jim Maloney.

The chances are, of course, that the next great heavyweight is somewhere on his way, as yet unhonored and unsung.

Athletic Heads Convene in East

Philadelphia, December 15.—(United News.)—Football talk held the attention of eastern coaches and officials who attended the seventh annual middle states collegiate athletic conference here.

The rules of the game, the tendency to overuse the forward pass, the suggested changes in the game, and even the equipment used furnished topics for discussion.

Walter R. Okeson, commissioner of the Eastern Football Officials association, made one of the feature talks of the program, discussing the progress undergone by officials who handle the gridiron and other sports.

He compared officials of the past with those today and outlined the advancement in officialdom from the beginning of the century until the present when the eastern association, with a membership of 74 colleges, furnished officials for more than 600 games.

Henry Cook Mathaway, of New York university, was elected to his third term as president of the association. Charles W. Kennedy, Princeton, vice president, and Dr. Leroy Mercer, Swarthmore, secretary-treasurer, were the other officers named.

Harry J. Rockefeller, Rutgers; H. K. Preston, Delaware; Harold Omwaka, Franklin and Marshall; Robert P. Moore, Lehigh, and L. D. Grossman, Susquehanna, were named to the executive committee.

Youngest Coach.

Though he has been at Iowa for several seasons now, Bert Ingwersen still is the youngest coach in the Big Ten.

Plenty Six Footers.

Of the 150 freshmen at Yale nearly 100 of them are said to be six-footers.

HIGH-SCORING HIGH SCHOOL TEAM

The University of Florida may have been the high scoring college eleven in the country for the 1928 season, but these boys, representing the Marion institute, of Marion, Ala., are claiming some sort of record for their work during the season. They piled up a total of 605 points against 51 for their opponents and lost but two games out of thirteen and tied one. The boys above are, left to right, bottom row: Rainer (back), Doster (back), Burford (back), Captain Parker (back), McRee (back), DeBardeleben (back) Walker (alternate captain, back), C. Mullins (back), Colvard (end). Middle row: Simon (tackle); W. Mullen (end), Godfree (tackle), Bullard (guard), Curlee (center), Bunkley (guard), J. Mullen (tackle), Cruce (end), Hamilton (guard). Top row: T. H. Williams (coach), Pope (guard), Robison (center), Howell (tackle), McKee (student manager).

S. S. A. A. FIVES ENTER THIRD WEEK MONDAY

Basketeers of the S. S. A. A. will start the third week of the 1928-29 season Monday night at the A. A. C. going over to Tuesday night at the J. P. C. to finish the week's play.

Games in the first four nights of play have proven successful in every respect, but the anticipation is keen toward even harder fighting, evenly matched and interesting games in all of the three leagues.

Probably the hardest task is in front of the Calvary Methodist five champions of last season. These cagers must play Bowie Class who is now in a tie for the leadership with the Methodist crew and then has First Presbyterian on Tuesday evening. The First Presbyterian aggregation now holds the league lead with three straight triumphs.

Triple E., leaders of the National league, with two triumphs and no defeats, meets the Morningside Presbyterian team. The G. F. G. class of the Capitol Avenue Baptist church tussles with Lutheran, and its position as runner-up is endangered.

Having a perfect record in the Girls' league, the Bowie lassies lead the race. These girls battle Lutheran Monday evening for the first game in the Girls' league, and Morningside Presbyterian girls meet Westminister.

Registering 16 field goals and 4 foul shots, Davis, Druid Hills Baptist, is the leading point-getter of the association. The National league star holds a margin of eight points over Mitchell, of Lutheran, who has 27 for second place. Both are National league members while Smith, of the G. F. G. class, is the third representative from this circuit who is in the first five in the leading scorers. Lewis, of Calvary, and Berry, of Central, are American best basket shooters in the leaders.

Schedule for week:

MONDAY NIGHT
AT A. A. C.

Bowie Bible class, St. Luke's Episcopal vs. Calvary Methodist (American), 7:30.
Bowie Bible class, St. Luke's Episcopal vs. Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, (Southern Girls), 8:20.

Three Teams Tied In Scott League

Three teams are tied for top place in the Trammell Scott league following the completion of the second week of play. Atlanta Lowry, Georgia Power and the Swift company are the teams bunched at the top of the heap. They have each won two games.

Either Swift or the power company will drop a notch in the percentage this week as these two quints will clash Wednesday night in what should be the feature game of the evening.

EPWORTH FIVES ENJOY REST IN HOLIDAYS

The Epworth Athletic association closed out its fourth week of basketball play last Friday night on Wesley court, when five games were played, completing 15 games for the entire week. Large crowds have been present each night, proving that an added interest is being taken by all leagues in backing up their respective squads.

Of the games played during the past week several were won by upsets. The most prominent were, in the girls' division, a 20-13 victory for Cascade over Park Street, and a win for Martha Brown over Decatur, 20 to 18. In the boys' division, play went about as predicted, except for two games The first was a win for Druid Hills over the scoring combination of White, Chambers and English of Park Street Hi, 18 to 8, accounting for the first defeat of the season for this bunch. The other was a loss for the St. Paul Senior quintet to the Grant Park Senior five 15 to 22.

The standings of the different loops developed few changes in the respective positions of teams as compared with last week's summary. In the girls' "A" loop, Emory is still leading the pack, the only change over the past week being the vacating of the cellar position by Cascade to Calvary. Martha Brown still led the "B" loop with three wins, with Haygood the runner-up, and Oakland City occupying the zero level.

For the boys' loops, and in the "A" group, Druid Hills have strengthened their lead to three wins with no losses, Park Street dropping a notch by losing to the leaders. The "B" loop leadership is tied for by the Hi teams, St. Paul and College Park. Grace has won four games and English Avenue three, no losses, and as a result are at the head of the "C" loop.

Play by the Epworths will cease for a period of 12 days, at the conclusion of this week's schedule Friday night, to be resumed January 3. This will allow all teams to gain their full strength after the ravages of the flu epidemic. All teams' standings, through last Thursday night, as well as the schedule for this week's games, are as follows:

Former Coach Of Army Is Dead

Chicago, December 15.—(AP)—Colonel Henry Meredith Nelly, member of the Sixth Corps Area staff and former West Point football coach, is dead.

Colonel Nelly was taken seriously ill a week ago and an operation was unsuccessfull. He died Thursday. He was 50 years old.

Graduated from West Point in 1902, he later served for six years as coach of the academy football eleven. He also refereed in many Big Ten football games and was regarded as a leading gridiron strategist.

CLEAN SLATES OF Y-CHURCH PUT TO TEST

A busy week lies ahead for the teams of the leagues sponsored by the Y-Church Athletic association, as every club has one or more league games scheduled. As usual the Sewanee league will open the week with a four-game series at Central Presbyterian court. Although the league is only two weeks old, with only two exceptions every club has met defeat, verifying the balance the Y-C. A. A. leagues have.

The coming series is sure to see a shake-up in the standing of the teams, as the schedule call for teams that are tied in the race to meet. So far the Pattillo Memorial and Alpha class quintets have shown the class of the group, but neither has won by large margins and a defeat is expected at any time.

As in the past, the teams of the Dixie league are showing a brand of ball better than is usually displayed by teams of Sunday school league and the two series played have produced some very fine team work with close scores resulting. In the past series the Peachtree Christian team, which was counted on to be the strongest of the league, was forced to bow to the cagers of Northwest Atlanta by a 2-point margin, furnishing the first of the season's upsets.

Another perfect record held by one of the clubs is doomed in the series for Thursday night at the Y. M. C. A., as the Inman Park Baptist and Western Heights Baptist quintets are slated to meet in the second game and the records of these clubs made by pre-season play gives this game the feature role.

The girls' Cherokee league refuses to give all the spot light to the Dixie league on Thursday night, as it is the regular playing night of this league and large crowds have been treated to some of the best games seen by fans of the girls' division in many years. The races for the league honors are certain to be closer than ever before as all teams seem more evenly balanced.

The defeat of the girls from Peachtree Christian came as a big surprise to many of the fans of this league in the past series and this leaves only two teams remaining with perfect records. What should be the feature game of the coming series on the Central Presbyterian court will be played at 7 o'clock Thursday night as the teams of Central Presbyterian and College Park Methodist meet with a change in the standing hanging on the result.

Closing the week's play, the teams of the Piedmont league will go into action Saturday night on the Y. M. C. A. court and as only five clubs are in this league the Center Hill Baptist quintet will be idle unless it schedules an independent game.

The complete schedule of all association league games and the teams' standing follow:

SEWANEE LEAGUE Y-C. A. A.

Artillerymen And Infantry Win Contests

Battalion Teams Open Annual Grid Tourney at Tech; Signal Corps Beaten.

BY HERB CLARK.

The battalion grid schedule opened Saturday afternoon on Grant field, with two games. In the first encounter the Coast Artillery watched the breaks and overpowered Signal Corps squad to win by a 25-0 count. The Infantry made its superior reserve strength felt in the second game, when they took the scalp of the Ordnance, 20 to 0.

The curtain-raiser was all in favor of the C. A. C., after a first quarter which was spent in feeling out the weak spots. Trost started in to tear up the Signal Corps' line as the second frame opened, and with DeFore and Cooking, running the ends and slipping off tackle, the first score was chalked up in short order, with Cook carrying the oval across the line. DeFore place-kicked the extra point.

Cook Drops Punt.

The Signal Corps was given a chance to score a moment later, when Cook dropped a punt, but a subsequent bad pass cost their opportunity. Cook took the defensive punt for a 20-yard run, and on the next play skirted left end for 60 yards and another touchdown. The extra point was missed, and when the half ended a few minutes later the C. A. C. held a 13-point lead.

The Coast Artillery added 12 points in quick order in the third quarter, and played out the game with a substitute team on the field. The first of these latter scores came when Brock, a reserve end, picked up a fumble in mid-field and crossed the line standing up. On the kick-off, another Signal Corps miscue was recovered, Cook and DeFore toted the ball 40 yards to the 4-yard stripe in two plays, and Cook again got the score. The game drew to its close with the C. A. C. holding to its lead to win.

Infantry Scores.

The Infantry received the kickoff in the second game, and started right in to get points. Langley drove over after some ten plays had been run, but the try for the extra point was blocked. Another drive immediately got under way, but failed when a futable sent the ball over just as the Infantrymen reached the six-inch stripe. The quarter ended as the Ordnance punted out of danger. The Infantry came back to push over their second marker from this point, with Hall circling end for the points. Daniels kicked the point. The half was played out in a series of short drives.

These unsustained efforts were kept up throughout the third frame and the first part of the fourth. As the final whistle neared, the Infantry uncorked a march which culminated with Smith, a substitute halfback, going across the last line for the last score. Daniels again converted.

Stars of Contests.

In the first game, Cook, DeFore, Trost, Kinnett and Altaberry were best for the winners, while Rhea, Irwin and Newson shone for the Signal Corps.

Winemiller was the outstanding lineman for the Infantry, and the entire backfield, Roy Daniel, "Lit" Daniel, Hall, Langley and Leydecker, who went in to replace Langley at full, showed an ability to advance the ball powerfully. Renfrew, Hicks and Ross starred for the losers.

The next game in this loop will be played Wednesday afternoon, when the Navy, last year's titleholders, meet the powerful Coast Artillery outfit. This should be one of the best games of the year, as both squads are conceded to be in the front ranks at the Flats, and the struggle for supremacy should be interesting.

Cleveland Hopes To Bolster Club With New Diamond Talent

Three Players Set Indians Back $125,000

Porter, Zinn and Averill Are New Men To Join Club for Next Season.

Cleveland, Ohio, December 15.—(AP) Alva Bradley and his associates are digging into their pockets in an effort to guide the Cleveland Indians from the lowly baseball haunts which have been theirs of late.

In doing this they have one eye cocked on the thrill of building up a winning team and the other on the financial returns in sight when Cleveland's new municipal staudium is available.

Three Men Bought.

Bradley, a banker, who was forced to watch him team finish in seventh place last year, his first as a major league mogul, already has purchased three minor league celebrities for an outlay of something near $125,000 and several players.

First Billy Evans, general manager of the Tribe, went east to land Dick Porter, Baltimore outfielder and one of the International league's leading hitters, for $30,000 and two players. Then he went across the continent and took Earl Averill, star outfielder of the San Francisco Seals for a reported price of around $40,000 and two more players.

The next time Evans led with Mr. Bradley's bank roll he connected with Jimmy Zinn, crack right hand pitcher of the Kansas City club of the American association. For Zinn, who won 46 games in his last two seasons with the Blues, Evans is understood to have parted with cash and players amounting to about $40,000.

Purse Still Open.

Averill, Porter and Zinn join the troupe of players who have filed here in large numbers, but disappointing ability, since the Speakerless Indian outfield started to slip. Porter hit .350 for the Orioles and Averill .340 for the Seals.

Bradley has indicated his purse still is open for promising material. He hopes to have pennant-winning prospect by the time the new municipal stadium is completed either in 1930 or by the opening of the 1931 season. The Indians will lease the stadium. Whereas Dunn field, their present home, seats around 25,000 persons, the management will be able to accommodate turnouts of between 50,000 and 80,000 in the new stadium.

Vets Due to Go.

Several veterans are due to go to make room for new men. George Uhle, right-handed hurler, who had an off year last season, is persistently named as a choice offering to lure a badly needed infielder or dependable outfielder into the Tribe wigwam. Billy Bayne, veteran moundsman, who was sent to Boston, was the first of last season's players to go.

NEW INDIAN WARRIORS

Cleveland is paying for fresh batting and pitching punch with cash. Porter and Averill, minor league outfielders who hit .350 and .340, respectively, in 1928, are two of the new additions. A third is Zinn, a pitcher, who won 46 games in the last two seasons.

10-Man Team Gets Support From Breadon

Cardinal President Says Change Would Do Much To Aid National Game.

St. Louis, December 15.—(AP)—Sam Breadon, Cardinal president, before leaving for Honolulu, said he expected the baseball world to accept eventually, in modified form, the suggestion of President John Heydler, of the National league, to take the burden of batting, or trying to bat, off the shoulders of pitchers.

"Ten men on a team," he said, "is a radical departure from baseball as we have known it for so many years. We are not ready for that, and I don't think we will ever depart from the basis of nine men on a side. But there is no good argument in favor of making the pitcher bat. He is a specialist.

"It is tedious work, this learning to pitch and while a man, when he starts in baseball as a pitcher, may have the qualifications as a batter, he soon loses his batting ability because he spends so much time learning the fine arts of pitching.

"My suggestion is that the manager of a team be given the privilege of letting his pitcher bat, or of passing along his turn to the next man in the batting order. You will still have nine men on a side and certainly no one will argue that the batting of a pitcher is one of the things that draws cash customers to a ball park.

"On the other hand, the presence of a pitcher in the batting order gives you a dead end, a recurring dull spot in your ensemble ball game."

Heydler's suggestion for a ten-man team might force a reorganization of playing rules, player limits and cause chaotic conditions, Breadon said.

Basketball Exclusive.

Madison, Wis., December 15.—(AP) Spectators, other than students of Wisconsin, who attend Badger basketball games this winter, will be an exclusive group of 300. There are just that many seats available to the general public.

MEET THE WIFE

Ken Strong, brightest gridiron star of New York university, is enjoying a honeymoon in the west with his bride, who was formerly Anne Hanneman. They were married in the Little Church Around the Corner, New York city.

These Girls Are Okay.

The Philadelphia girls field hockey team has never been beaten in intercity play and two goals is the highest score ever made by an opposing team.

Two Clubs Dropped.

Ottumwa and Marshalltown were ousted from the Mississippi Valley league at the annual meeting.

Macon To Build Stadium.

Macon, Ga., will build a municipal stadium for all sports and will rent it to the Sally league club in the summer months. Terre Haute and Evansville in the Three-I league have similar parks.

What! No Title?

For the first time in years no title was at stake when Pitt and Washington and Jeff met this year.

Cotton States Cage Tourney Dates Are Set

Auburn Will Stage Annual Basket Contest in February Next Year.

Auburn, Ala., December 15.—(Special.)—Sixteen leading high schools from five states will again compete in the eighth annual Cotton States basketball tournament to be held February 21, 22 and 23 at Alabama Polytechnic Institute, it was announced Saturday by Auburn officials.

The tournament is sponsored annually by the Auburn coaching staff, headed by Coach Wilbur Hutsell, and will bring together the outstanding prep school quintets from Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi and Alabama. Georgia teams have won the tournament six times, while Alabama won in 1924.

Tech High, of Atlanta, won the title the first year, 1922. Georgia Military academy, also of Atlanta, carried off honors the following year. Simpson High, Birmingham, Ala., managed to break the Atlanta string in 1924, but the title came back to Georgia the next season when Marshallville, Ga., took first honors. G. M. A. won its second title in 1926. Then followed the two wins by Vienna, Ga., one of the strongest prep teams in the country.

Entries for the tournament will not be selected until high schools in the various states have played the major portions of their schedules.

Invitations will then be forwarded to the apparently strongest teams in each state. The winner will be eligible to enter the national basketball tournament, held annually at Chicago, whether it wins its state title or not.

Cuba Beats Mexico In Tennis Matches

Havana, Cuba, December 15.—(AP) Capturing both singles matches today, Cuba won the Marti tennis trophy from Mexico, three matches to two.

Lila Mamacho, of Cuba, defeated Maria Tapia, of Mexico, 6-0, 6-4, and Zolia Rodriguez defeated Luz Rincon Gallardo, 6-4, 7-5.

SEVEN GAMES ARE SCHEDULED BY MARQUETTE

Milwaukee, Wis., December 15.—Two intersectional games with New England foes, two contests with members of the new Big Six circuit and three with leaders of the Missouri Valley conference are included on the 1929 Marquette university football schedule, as announced by Conrad M. Jennings, Marquette athletic director.

Holy Cross college, which tied Harvard this fall, will be met at Worcester, Mass., again, this time on October 16, while Boston college, on top of the heap in the east this fall as the result of an undefeated season, will invade Milwaukee November 10 for intersectional combat.

Kansas Aggies, coached by Bo McMillan, will be back on the Marquette schedule for the first time since 1926 when they lost here, 14 to 0, while Iowa State is the other Big Six foe. Drake, this year's Missouri Valley champions, will be played at Des Moines, while Creighton and Grinnell, of the valley circuit, also are listed.

The schedule follows:

October 5—Open.
October 12—Grinnell in Milwaukee.
October 19—Iowa State in Milwaukee.
October 26—Holy Cross at Worcester, Mass.
November 2—Drake at Des Moines, Ia.
November 9—Creighton in Milwaukee.
November 16—Boston college in Milwaukee.
November 28—Kansas Aggies in Milwaukee.

South Carolina Lists Five Fights

Columbia, S. C., December 15.—The schedule for the University of South Carolina boxing team calls for five matches, four of which will be in Columbia. The University of North Carolina team, which last season won the Southern conference championship, is among the teams which will be seen here.

The schedule follows:

January 11—Presbyterian College at Columbia.
January 19—University of North Carolina at Columbia.
February 8—The Citadel at Columbia.
February 16—Clemson at Clemson.
February 23—University of Georgia at Columbia.

There are 60 out for the team which is being coached by Jack Crawford.

Four Dual Meets Booked by Irish

South Bend, Ind., December 15.—(AP)—The Notre Dame indoor track schedule for 1929 will include four dual meets with Western conference squads and two intercollegiate carnivals, Coach John P. Nicholson announced today.

The intercollegiate meets in which Notre Dame will participate are the central intercollegiate meet at Notre Dame on March 9, and the Illinois relays at Champaign, Ill., on March 16.

All the dual meets with the Western conference teams will be held at the Notre Dame gymnasium with the exception of the Wisconsin meet, which will be held at Madison on March 2. The other dates, Indiana, February 9; Illinois, February 16, and Northwestern, February 23.

Ocean Yacht Race Planned in Florida

Palm Beach, Fla., December 15.—(AP)—The first ocean yacht race in which American, British and Cuban government officials would play a part was planned today by Palm Beach Yacht club, the Rolay Sailing club, of Nassau, and Havana Yacht club.

The race, as now planned, will be run in three heats starting at Palm Beach on February 23, and will go for a total of about 900 ocean miles. The governor of Florida will present a trophy in one heat, the governor of the Bahamas another and President Machado another.

Efforts are now being made for presentation of another trophy as a grand prize by an official of the United States government.

'Hoosier Playboy' Flirts 14 Years With Ring Fame

Indianapolis, December 15.—(AP)—The boxing game seldom has produced a figure that has been so close to fame and yet so far away as the venerable Chuck Wiggins of Indianapolis.

After 14 years in the ring Wiggins' only title is that of "Hoosier playboy." A half million dollars have slipped through his fingers because he, at times, took neither himself nor his opponent seriously.

Because the Illinois commission barred him for six months for a foul blow he is in disrepute in 27 other states affiliated with the Illinois body.

Seldom in the last half dozen years has he bothered with hard work before a bout; a little bag punching, setting up exercises and a few rounds of sparring the week before the bout. He has been known to enter the ring without any training.

A fine physique, natural skill and ring craft enabled the Hoosier to carry on, winning oftener than he lost, but occasionally being outpointed by inferiors. When he was "right" Wiggins was regarded as one of the "toughest" heavyweights of the ring.

He gave the late Harry Greb half a dozen of the hardest fights the former middleweight champion ever had. The same was true with the Gibbons brothers. Wiggins usually was willing to meet anybody his manager suggested and last year participated in more than 40 bouts.

Wiggins' latest chance to get in the "big" money was in Chicago when he met Otto Von Porat and lost on a foul.

The Indianian was one of Gene Tunney's sparring partners when he trained for the second Dempsey bout. He gave the champion some of the hardest workouts he had, at times outboxing Tunney.

'SHOP EARLY,' IS HIS MOTTO; HAS GOOD SEATS

University of Florida, Gainesville, December 15.—Some folks may delay buying football tickets until a day or two before a game. But not Sam Mixon, secretary of the Baird Hardware company of this city.

Certain that he would occupy 50-yard line seats for all of the Florida games next fall, Mr. Mixon has notified James R. Boyd, Jr., graduate manager, to reserve him four tickets for each Florida game on the 1929 schedule, and for the home-coming game with Clemson November 16, Mr. Mixon ordered an even 50.

To bind the contract, Mr. Mixon forwarded a check with the order. A case of football "seat insurance," which isn't such a bad idea at that.

One-Point Jinx Shaken by Trojans

Los Angeles, December 15.—University of Southern California kicked 60 per cent of its goals after touchdowns this season, and was never threatened by the one-point jinx that followed the Trojans in 1926 and 1927.

Out of 40 touchdowns scored during the season, the Trojans kicked 24 goals. The goal kicking improved as the games went on and in the last three contests the Southern Californians converted 10 out of 12 touchdowns.

Adding to its goal kicking record, the Southern California team put over a perfect field goal in the Stanford game, the first three points to be scored in this way for many years at Southern California.

Trojan Team Boast Clean Slate on Coast

Los Angeles, December 15.—Two years without a defeat by a Pacific coast team, is the remarkable record of the University of Southern California squad, which ended its season by walloping Notre Dame.

Only one defeat, a 7-6 game dropped to Notre Dame at Chicago last year, stands in the loss column for the Trojans during the two-year period. Out of the 20 games played with teams representing the cream of the coast and with Notre Dame during 1927 and 1928, the Trojans won 17, tied two and lost one, which is believed to be the greatest record made by any university eleven in the country this period.

HOWARD JONES FACES '29 RACE MINUS STARS

Los Angeles, December 15.—With their team ending a brilliant season at the top of the Pacific Coast conference standings, University of Southern California football followers are already looking forward to next year and wondering if Coach Howard Jones, the "Miracle Man of Troy," can continue his remarkable success after losing five regulars and three leading subs of the 1928 squad.

At least three of the five who have played their last football for the Trojans, Don Williams, quarter; Lloyd Thomas, right half, and Captain Jesse Hibbs, left tackle and All-American, are All-American material, and are now landing on various mythical teams now being selected by gridiron experts. The other two, Lowry McCaslin, left end, and Charles Boren, left guard, are considered among the west's best performers at their positions. The graduating subs, Herschel Bonham, fullback; Hilton McCabe, center, and Al Schaub, guard, were all exceptionally good men at their positions and put in a great deal of time with the S. C. varsity this season.

Despite the loss of good men from the 1928 team, Trojan fans can see more bright days ahead in the material returning from the varsity next year and coming up from this year's freshmen. Using regulars and leading subs of this season, Jones could put a formidable team on the field that would line up like this: r. e., Francis Tappaan; r. t., Frank Anthony; r. g., Clark Galloway; c., Captain-elect Nathan Barrager; l. g., Tony Steponovich, Boren's sub; l. t., Cecil Hoff, Hibbs' sub; l. e., Ralph Wilcox, McCaslin's sub; q., Marshall Duffield, Williams' sub; r. h., Jesse Mortensen, Thomas' sub; l. h., Harry Edelson, and f. b., Russell Sanders.

Apsit appears to be the class of this eleven and it would not be surprising to see him break into the starting lineup next year at either left or right half.

Even with these two teams made up of returning regulars and subs, there are more good men among the hero material of 1929. Included in the group of players not on the two teams mentioned are Mahlon Chambers, q. b.; Vaughan Deranian, g.; Harvey Durkee, e.; George Decker, t.; Jesse Hill, f.; Rockwell Kemp, q.; Stewart Philp, h.; John Porter, g.; James Snider, h.; Cliff Thiede, q.; James Truher, e.; Howard Bell, g.; Ward Bond, t., and John Ward, t.

Plenty of competition will be given the regulars and subs of 1928 by the fresh of this year. Six freshmen backfield men, Ernie Pickert and Gaius Shaver, q.; Garrett Arbelbide, Tom Mallory, and Harold Hammack, h., and James Musick, f., will be hard to keep off any varsity team in 1929. Quarterbacks Pinckert and Shaver looming as particularly bright prospects. Frosh linemen who look like good varsity material are Tony Jurich and Howard Joslin, e.; Bob Hall and Tom Mason, t.; John Baker and Harold Snider, g., and Stanley Williamson, c.

Add to the varsity and frosh squad prospects George Dye, star lineman from Alabama who was ineligible because of the transfer rule this season; Dan Moses, star Trojan fullback of 1927 who is returning to the university, and perhaps a few other strays and enough material will be found to give Coach Jones a good start toward new Pacific Coast and national football honors.

Usually it is a defeated team whose followers say, "Just wait till next year," but the Trojans, with an unbeaten eleven firmly believed to be the greatest in their history, can say, "Just wait till next year" in the confident hope of a repetition of a wonderful season.

Nine Six-Footers On Missouri Squad

Columbus, Mo., December 15.—(AP) Coach George Edwards, of the University of Missouri, can put a basketball team of six-footers on the floor this year.

Nine of his squad are over six feet. The tallest is Charles Huhn, sophomore candidate for center from Independence, who is six feet, six inches. Six letter men are back. The Tigers play eighteen games, including two exhibition games, Indiana university and Butler university.

SOUTH AMERICAN CHAMP VACATES HIS TITLE

Lima, Peru, December 15.—(AP)—Alex Rely, light heavyweight champion of South America, today vacated his title because of illness and the loss of an eye.

In a letter to the South American boxing federation Rely said he was returning the title. He was also the Peruvian and Chilean champion and during his 18 years in the ring is said to have fought 72 times, losing only two battles by knockouts.

Peruvian and foreign boxers here have announced a benefit for Rely.

A New Thrill In Motoring

Owners say they get a new thrill driving a Graham-Paige with four speeds forward. Fourth, used most of the time, gives a new smoothness and swiftness—third, a quiet internal gear, provides rapid acceleration in traffic, and up steep hills. The gear shift is standard. You start in second—first, in reserve, is seldom used. A six or eight is at your disposal.

ATLANTA TO VIEW CHEVROLET'S NEW SIX-CYLINDER MODELS IN AUDITORIUM SHOW BEGINNING TUESDAY

SALES CONVENTION STARTS MONDAY

One of the most interesting and constructive features with which the Atlanta Automobile association has been connected for some time, is the sales convention for automobile salesmen, which will be conducted in Atlanta December 17, 18, 19 and probably December 20, under the direction of William B. Burruss, of the National Automobile Dealers' association. A large number of the automobile dealers, members of the Atlanta Automobile association, have entered from two to 20 salesmen each, for the course of instruction in automobile selling.

Mr. Burruss is a nationally-known sales instructor and analysist, and has done some of his best work in the automobile selling field. He has appeared before automobile associations in practically all of the large cities of the United States as a speaker, and has conducted classes of instruction for hundreds of individual firms and associations. Automobile dealers in other cities, who have entered salesmen in classes conducted by Mr. Burruss in those cities, are enthusiastic about the work and the results secured.

This feature is simply in line with the association's policy of bringing to its members the most up-to-date methods of conducting their business affairs.

PROSPERITY RESULT OF MODERN METHODS

According to a recent writer on American business one of the reasons for our prosperity is the efficiency of modern marketing methods. In this efficiency the automobile plays a large and growing part.

Surveys indicate that salesmen traveling by automobile can make from three to eight times more calls than they could if they traveled by train. They cover their territory in a fraction of the time that would be required if they depended on train schedules, and the flexibility of movement afforded by their cars at the same time permits them to cover the ground with far greater thoroughness.

In addition to this saving in time, the low cost of transportation afforded by the modern motor car has materially reduced traveling expenses and cost of sales based on the number of calls made and the volume of business transacted.

It is interesting to note that two out of three salesmen prefer the convenient two passenger enclosed car, which carries their personal baggage and sample cases in the rear compartment.

The special adaptability of this type of car is evident in the widespread popularity of the Studebaker's Erskine Six Cabriolet, which seats two passengers comfortably and has 10 cubic feet of storage space in the dustproof and waterproof rear compartment—ample room for a sample trunk and several suitcases.

According to J. E. Yarbrough, Studebaker-Erskine dealer here, the extremely smart appearance of the Erskine cabriolet is combined with qualities of economy, reliability, and durability that make it particularly fitted for the severe demands of daily service in all kinds of weather over all kinds of roads.

"The handsome appearance of the Erskine six does credit to the dignity and standing of the salesman's concern," he declares. "At the same time its low initial cost, thriftly gasoline consumption and low upkeep cost materially reduce the expense of covering sales territories. It is powered by the same sturdy motor that set a record for stock cars listing under $1,000 by the traveling 1,000 miles in 984 minutes under the supervision of the American Automobile association."

Whippets by the Train Load

This is a daily sight these days at the Willys-Overland plant at Toledo. A solid trainload of the 1929 Superior Whippet fours and sixes on their way to the four points of the compass.

NEW AJAX TIRES ARE GUARANTEED

A sweeping warranty for a period of eighteen months against blow-outs, cuts, bruises, wheels out of alignment, underinflation, accidents and any other road hazards that may render the tire unfit for further service is being given in writing to each buyer of a new line of passenger car tires now being advertised in newspapers and trade papers throughout the country by an old established tire manufacturer.

The manufacturer that expresses such confidence in its product is the Ajax Rubber Company, Inc., and the new line of tires, marketed under the name "Ajax Gold Bond balloon," is designed for general passenger car service and sold at popular prices. This fact was disclosed Saturday by J. G. Callahan, manager of the local Ajax branch, who has just returned from a conference on this subject at the factory in Racine, Wis.

"An important feature of the 'Gold Bond' performance contract," Mr. Callaghan said in commenting on the new warranty, "is the provision that it is backed by all the resources of the Ajax Rubber Company, Inc., and its terms will be fulfilled upon presentation by the owner to any authorized Ajax franchise dealer or to any Ajax Rubber Company, Inc., branch. This feature of service everywhere appeals particularly to tourists, now that improved highways have so greatly increased the distances that most motorists frequently travel.

"So successful have been the efforts of the manufacturer to build exceptional mileage into the new 'Gold Bond' tires that if they receive proper care, there is little likelihood of any need of adjustment during the 18 months warranted period. But since the tire carries such a sweeping pledge against road hazards, it is greatly to the advantage of the owner to be able to present his tire and 'performance contract' to any Ajax dealer anywhere for fulfillment of the terms."

New Taxicab Service For Colored People Now Is Active Here

A new taxicab service is entering Atlanta to serve the needs of colored citizens. After investigation by officials of this new company of cab operations in other large cities of the United States, it was decided to follow the same principles as other well organized companies do in rendering exclusive service for colored people.

The new fleet of cabs on the streets at this time, subject to dispatching from the nearest stand, which has been provided for by phoning Main 1500, the central office.

Every taxicab is equipped with a meter which furnishes a receipt for the service rendered, and there is no charge for extra passengers. This new taxicab service offered to colored citizens is modern in equipment and standard in operating principles.

Christmas Buying Raises Auto Sales Totals; Record Production Year in '29 Seen

Public Interest Centered in Auto Shows, With Many New Models Slated To Appear.

BY WALTER BOYNTON.

Christmas shopping has been a factor in retail sales in the Detroit territory for the week. Detroit has had an opportunity to get a first view of several of the important pre-show exhibits and these have increased the impression that the industry has once more been able to turn out more car for less money, value for value. The Whippet fours and sixes, the Chrysler Imperial, the new Packard de luxe eight, the new Reo "The Mate," companion to the Reo "The Master," have been inspected and highly approved. A holiday atmosphere has been given to the showrooms with the newest lines on display and these have been crowded, day, night and Sunday.

Every known means of attracting public interest is being utilized to draw and hold the crowds and the response has been even unusually large. Music, flowers, radio and movies are offered as side attractions to the visitors, but the cars have really been the center of attraction. Detroiters, who have had every opportunity to grow blase in the matter of new offerings from the automotive industry, seem never to lose their capacity for interest in whatever is new.

With many of the important lines out and prices for next year announced, a pretty fight for business is seen. The manufacturer and the dealer are prepared for a struggle. Colin Campbell, head of the Willys-Overland sales forces, summer it up when he said that 1929 would be a Irishman's fight—that a head would be hit wherever it was seen.

"We know," added Mr. Campbell, "that the industry is launched on its most highly competitive campaign and like everybody else we are going out to get our share of the business that lies in our pocketbook price bracket. There will be as many fours sold in 1929 as of all other types combined. The size of the buyer's pocketbook will continue to be the controlling factor in volume."

Willys to Press Fours.

It is known that Willys-Overland will concentrate on four production and on a larger scale than ever before. Ford estimate for 1929 is that 1,800,000 cars and trucks will be built and sold in 1929 as the result of activities of the company in the United States and Canada, with an additional 300,000 in the overseas territory. This will be equal to, if not in excess of, the company's peak year of 1924, when something over 2,000,000 units were made and sold. Ford is now running at the rate of close to 6,500 units a day, a very material step-up from the record established in November, and in November itself 105,891 units were produced from assembly lines in the United States. Canadian and foreign production, at 7,591 and 7,555, respectively, brought the November grand total to 121,037. Ford's first year of production of the new lines totaled close to 705,000 units.

Taken over a period of 11 months, the passenger car registrations in Wayne county totaled 79,541 for 1928, compared with 50,300 for the same period of 1927. This shows a gain of 29,241 cars, or 58.1 per cent.

Chevrolet led all other makes, with total registrations of 14,949 cars, or 18.8 per cent of the total. Ford was second, with 11,133, or 14 per cent; the combined Hudson and Essex registrations were 11,120, or almost exactly those of Ford; Oakland-Pontiac and Chrysler-Plymouth were very close to a tie, with 6,584 and 5,829, or 8.3 per cent; Buick accounted for 4,791, or 6 per cent; Whippet and Willys-Knight, 3,845, or 4.8 per cent; Graham-Paige, 3,690, or 4.6 per cent; Dodge, 2,976, or 3.7 per cent, and Hupmobile, 2,557, or 3.2 per cent.

The most important percentage gain was of course that of Ford's amounting to well over 300 per cent.

December Registrations.

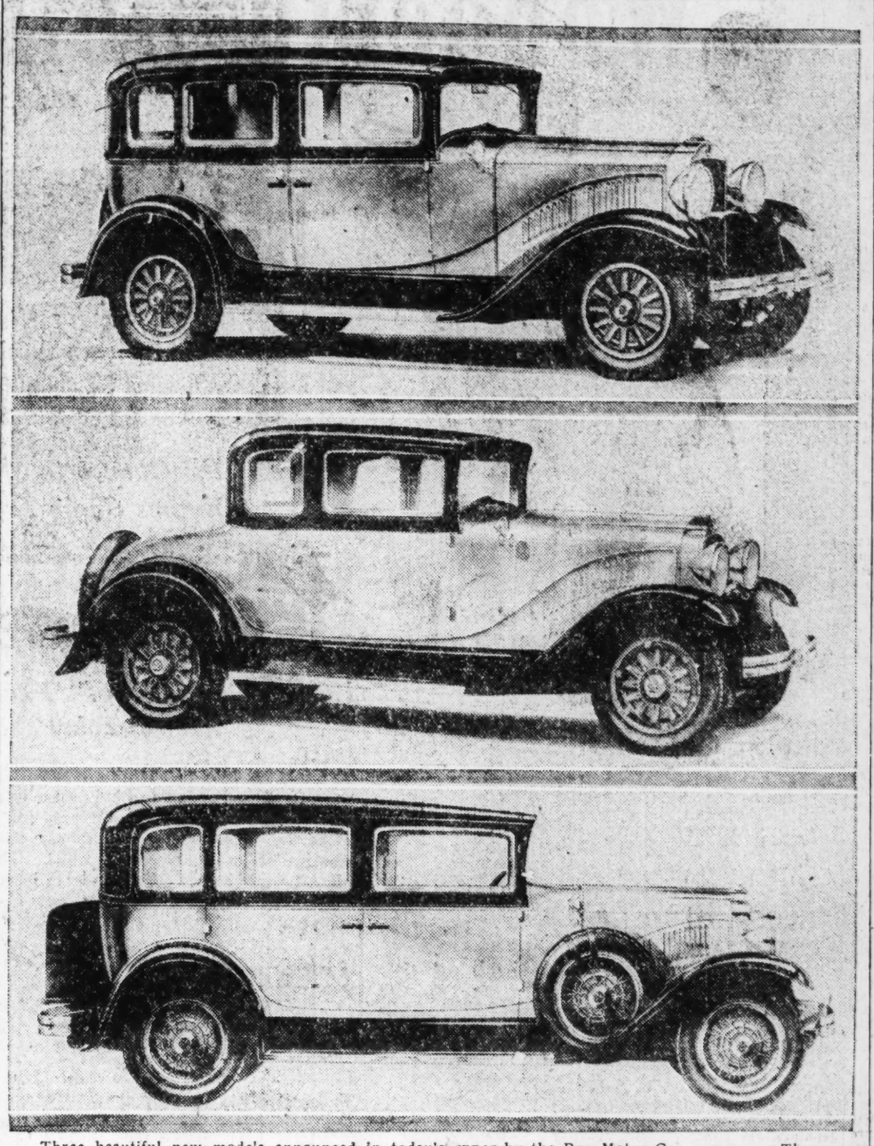

December registrations in the county show a healthy increase over the November figures, with a gain of close to 95 per cent. The first five in rank are as follows: Ford, Buick, Hudson-Essex, Chrysler-Plymouth and Oakland-Pontiac. A curious feature of the picture is that the miscellaneous group showed unusual strength. This was the result of spectacular price-slashing locally, in order to make a clean-up before the end of the year.

Used cars for Christmas gifts are moving rapidly, in response to price cuts as the result of thawing used car assets. There will be more people driving late models of cars this holiday time than has been the case in previous years, with the cars bought off the used car lots. The "cats and dogs" have had their innings, too, thanks to prices that have made them gifts in two senses, first from the dealer and second from the buyer who has bought for the family. One large distributor lumped his slightly shop-worn cars is a group offered at $185 apiece and they moved with promptness. His proposition included deferred payment terms on a liberal basis and 1929 license plates free.

Resumption of manufacturing activity in plants closed down for inventors, rearrangement or expansion has had a heartening effect on the general employment situation, though in Detroit proper another weekly reduction in payrolls was reported by the Employers' association. This amounted to 2,294, bringing the total down to 272,103, which is still 73,451 above the figures for the same week last year. Out in the state, Olds Motor Works and the Fisher Body corporation at Lansing have resumed operations, giving renewed employment to about 6,500 workers. Oldsmobile schedule of production for December, in spite of the shutdown for expansion purposes, is expected to reach about 6,000 cars.

With the new Big Six Pontiac just around the corner and the unveiling of the new Roosevelt set for December 19, public interest will have little chance to cool off. The mysterious White Price, too, is in the offing and other surprises are in store for the novelty-loving motoring public.

'The Mate' New Reo Flying Cloud Here

Three beautiful new models announced in today's paper by the Reo Motor Car company. These new cars will be on display all this week in the display rooms of the Reo Sales and Service, Inc., 419 Peachtree street.

'The Mate' New Flying Cloud Announced by Reo Factory

The Reo Flying Cloud—The Mate, a worthy companion to the Flying Cloud—The Master, which has enjoyed wide favor since its introduction two years ago, has just been announced by the Reo Motor Car company.

Its outstanding features are speed, the high efficiency of its braking system, its general appearance and attractive color combinations in the paint work and upholstery.

The exceptional speed and power would be far less useful were it not for the fact that its acceleration is matched by its deceleration, thanks to internal expanding two-shoe hydraulic four-wheel brakes of an unusually efficient design.

In addition to the quick and positive stopping assured by the Flying Cloud brakes, dirt and moisture are prevented from coming in contact with the brake lining while the placing of the operating cylinders inside the wheel prevents damage and reduces the possibility of foreign matter interfering with its mechanism. The effectiveness of the brakes with the Flying Cloud in reverse motion is the same as when the car is traveling forward.

But in addition to its many mechanical refinements and improvements this new Flying Cloud model has real beauty. It can truly be called a good looking automobile.

The Mate is, in general a smaller edition of the illustrious Reo Flying Cloud.

It appears in two body models, a commodious five-passenger sedan with many exclusive and distinguishing characteristics and a two-passenger coupe. The latter model is to be offered either with a rumble seat or with the space behind the driver's seat arranged as a baggage compartment and reached by raising the hinged rear deck.

In the design of the body of the new Flying Cloud—The Mate, three major considerations are kept in mind: Appearance, comfort and structural strength. Months of study and design work were devoted to the problem of creating a body whose appearance combined both beauty and originality.

The outstanding appearance characteristic of this new Reo model is unquestionably the wave line or sweeping depression impressed into the lower section of the body and bonnet. This pleasing line which is harmonious with the lines of the fenders and running board gives distinction to the car and accentuates its length. The line produces the optical effect of a low swung vehicle suspended gracefully between the front and rear wheels, much the same as the regal carriages of previous centuries in foreign lands.

Full consideration was given to comfort in designing these new Flying Cloud bodies. The outstanding feature from this standpoint is the roominess of the body interior. Particular attention is called to the unusually wide rear seat. Not only is the seat wider at the top of the cushion, but it is considerably wider than the conventional body at the height of the passengers' shoulders where crowding is usually most objectionable. The front seat is also wider than that of the average five-passenger sedan. There is ample leg room in both compartments. The doors of the new Reo are sufficiently wide to permit easy entrance and egress. A particularly wide windshield, large side windows and a large rear window provides excellent vision not only for the driver but for all passengers as well.

Durability, structural strength and rigidity have been provided to an unusual degree in the coach-work of the new model. Higher speeds, larger engines, more rapid acceleration and four wheel brakes with their resultant rapid deceleration subject the body of the present day car to strains and wracking much more destructive than was the case a few years ago. An examination of the coach work of the new Flying Cloud model will result in a full appreciation of the many provisions made to withstand this punishment.

The new Reo Flying Cloud—The Mate has a high compression L-head motor with a compression ratio of 5.5 to 1. This engine is six cylinder, 3 3-8 inches bore and 4 inch stroke developing 60 H. P. at 2800 R. P. M. The piston displacement is 214.7 cubic inches. Engine, single plate clutch and gear set form a unit power plant. The engine is mounted front and rear on rubber spools, which absorb the shock between the motor and the frame of the car. The camshaft drive is through silent chain and the camshaft is mounted on four bearings. Intake valves are of chrome nickel steel and exhaust valves of Silchrome steel. The crankshaft is mounted on seven bearings and carries a vibration damper on the front end. The connecting rods are drop forged steel and the pistons are aluminum alloy.

The lubricating system is high pressure force feed to crank, connecting rod and camshaft bearings and the oil pump is of gear type. A centrifugal water pump with thermostatic control gives ample cooling underhevy service. The carburetor is equipped with an air cleaner.

Another important feature is the use of a fuel pump and strainer which supplies gas to the carburetor under the correct pressure regardless of engine speed or load. This pump is selfpriming. Under the most extreme conditions, after running bone-dry for instance, only about 15 revolutions of the engine are required to get fuel to the carburetor. The gear shift lever has been placed well forward and the parking brake is located on the left hand side thus allowing easy passage of the driver to either side of the car.

The wheelbase is 115 inches. The springs are suspended in rubber shock insulators which result in quietness at all times and do away with the necessity of lubrication. To further add to the riding qualities of the car, Lovejoy shock absorbers are used both front and rear. The frame is of pressed steel with seven cross members. The steering wheel is of the golf grip type with levers set down into the wheel. All of the instruments are centered in one cluster and indirectly lighted on the attractive instrument panel. The radiator and all fittings are chrome-plated. Four-wheel internal expanding hydraulic brakes make it possible to use with safety the full speed and power of the new Reo Flying Cloud-The Mate.

EXHIBITION HERE TO BE ELABORATE IN SHOW SETTING

All Modes and Mechanical Features on Display; Movies and Demonstrations Added Features.

Presenting the outstanding Chevrolet in the company's history, Atlanta officials have spared no expense in giving this section of the country the largest and best automobile show ever held in Atlanta.

Starting at noon Tuesday, the doors of the auditorium will be thrown open to the public enabling them to inspect and see the outstanding Chevrolet, a "six in the price range of the four."

The showing will be conducted in customary automobile show style, except that there will be no admission charge. Each model in the line will be on view—coach, convertible landau, coupe, sport cabriolet, sedan, phaeton and roadster. The auditorium will be especially decorated for the occasion. Each of the models will be placed so as to permit a thorough inspection.

Incidental to the presentation of the new line, there will be an interesting mechanical exhibit, including a complete passenger car chassis. Throughout the day a Chevrolet factory expert, speaking through an amplifier, will describe the improved mechanical features of the new car, and relate interesting details regarding the development of the new engine.

Pictures Show Tests.

Motion pictures of General Motors proving ground, the 1,245-acre outdoor laboratory, where during a four-year period Chevrolet engineers tested 100 six-cylinder engines prior to giving their approval to the new six, will be on view at all hours throughout the exhibition.

Afternoon and evening, Rudy Brown and his orchestra will play for the visitors.

Aside from the unusually large number of mechanical improvements which the new Chevrolet six incorporates, improvements which set new performance standards with an economy averaging better than 20 miles to the gallon, visitors to the Chevrolet advance showing will be impressed with the beauty of the new line.

Fisher body designers, working in close cooperation with Chevrolet officials, have succeeded in characterizing the new models with an attractiveness of line and color hitherto unknown to the low-priced field. Each model has its own color combination, chosen with care to harmonize with the type of car it enhances. Distinctively grouped hood louvres, placed toward the rear of the hood, add to the smartness of the long unbroken lines.

The appointments, too, seem to come in for favorable comment. They are the richest and most luxurious ever offered by Chevrolet. The seats are wider and more restful. The driver's seat in all closed models is easily adjustable, forward or back, a feature recently introduced in a few of the high-priced cars. The re-designed dash carries an attractive grouping of all control instruments, indirectly lighted, including the new water temperature indicator. Rich, long-wearing upholsteries and specially-designed Ternstedt hardware are other comfort and appearance features.

One entirely new body style takes its place in the line, supplanting the imperial landau. It is the convertible landau on which the top rear quarter may be completely folded down.

The commercial line embraces a new and larger utility truck of one and one-half ton capacity, a new light delivery chassis and the sedan delivery, a de luxe paneled body truck.

Two Performance Records Made by Graham-Paige Cars

Two performance victories in official contests in Australia have served to bring into prominence the Graham-Paige, a comparatively new comer, on the island continent.

The Graham-Paige victories were scored in a hill-climb conducted by the Royal Automobile club of Victoria, when two models, a 610 and a 619, won three firsts out of four; and in a 900-mile reliability run under the auspices of the Royal Automobile club of Queenland, in which a 614 model finished ahead of all other American entries, ending the run with perfect scores for mechanical reliability and time on controls.

In the hill-climb contests, held near Melbourne, the Graham-Paige 619 gained first place for the fastest time made by any car, while first place on formula (based on engine displacement, car weight, and other factors to put all entries on an equal footing) was won by a Graham-Paige 610. Each competitor made the climb twice, and out of the four runs, Graham-Paige was first in three. Other competitors included the cream of British and Continental cars. Both Graham-Paige entries were strictly stock chassis, with bodies conforming to the rules of the contest.

The reliability run covered a distance of 900 miles from Brisbane, Queensland, to Katoomba, New South Wales, 65 miles from Sidney. The contest lasted six days. The Graham-Paige 614 model was one of only a few cars to finish with perfect scores for reliability and time on controls. It took first place of all American cars on formula, and won five out of seven events, including the hill-climbs; acceleration, and the flying quarter mile.

Million, Quarter Chevrolets For '29 Predicted by Knudsen

W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager of Chevrolet Motor company, reputed one of the most conservative executives in the industry, predicted at Detroit last week that Chevrolet production schedules for the coming year would call for an output which would equal at least 1,250,000 cars and trucks.

Fifteen mammoth factories throughout the country, according to Knudsen, are now working at top speed building the new six. Cars are being distributed to the dealer organization as fast as they come off the line, so that as many as possible will be on display and ready for delivery December 29.

The tens of thousands who have already placed orders can feel assured of early deliveries, Mr. Knudsen said, when they bear in mind that 90 days after the introduction of the 1928 car more than a quarter million of them were on the highways in owner service. He further recalled that by June 1 of the present year, five months after the January announcement, a half million cars were in use. And before October 1 the company established a record of building and delivering 1,000,000 cars which Mr. Knudsen referred to as the greatest single achievement in the history of the automobile industry.

Mr. Knudsen's optimism over the forthcoming year, he explained, has its basis in continued prosperity and in what he interprets as a well-defined preference on the part of the public for the six-cylinder car. "The coming year will find national prosperity solidly entrenched, and Chevrolet, with a new and improved product carefully designed to meet public preference, is prepared to handle its full share of the coming year's business growth," he said. "All of our production facilities are being keyed up to meet the rising demand so that Chevrolet will be able to make deliveries as rapidly as our precision methods permit.

"The year just coming to a close found Chevrolet preparing itself for the advent of the new six. Numerous expansions were brought to completion, adding to our facilities several hundred thousand feet of factory floor space. The natural result of all this has been an increased productive capacity.

"With these expanded and improved facilities, and our new and improved product which is to sell at virtually the same price as our four-cylinder cars, we feel assured of marching toward new records this year, at the same time striving to our utmost to maintain in full the public's confidence in the Chevrolet Motor company."

Mr. Knudsen concluded by expressing his gratification at the reception which the new six is being accorded every place it has been seen at advance showings. Upwards of one million persons in a dozen cities have already seen the new car.

HUPP BREAKS EXPORT SHIPMENT RECORDS

The largest single day's export shipment by the Hupp Motor Car corporation in the twenty years of its history was reached on Tuesday, November 27, when 102 Hupmobile Century cars left the factory at Detroit for foreign delivery.

The shipment was consigned principally to South America and South Africa. Fifty cars were shipped to Buenos Aires alone, representing about one-quarter of orders on hand from that city, it was stated by R. S. Cole, Hupmobile vice president in charge of sales. They were part of an order totalling 183 cars, the remainder of which were to follow as rapidly as they could be delivered.

South African cars, as is customary with orders from that continent, were mostly of the closed type, about 98 per cent of all cars sent there being sedans. The consignment to Buenos Aires, however, was practically all open cars.

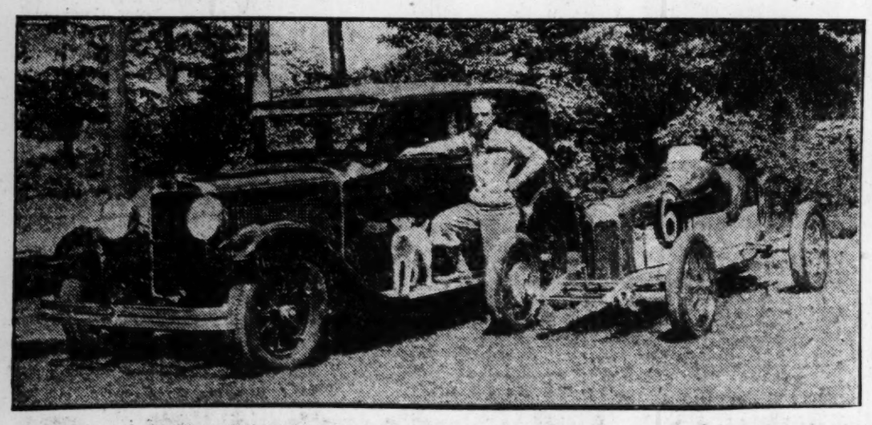

The record daily shipment comes as a fitting climax to a year of unprecedented Hupmobile activity in both domestic and foreign sales. According to figures announced December 1, exactly 500 Hupmobiles were shipped aboard during November, an increase of 118 per cent over exports in the same month of the preceding year. The November figures brought the total shipments since January 1 to 5,701 cars, compared with 2,745 cars in the entire twelve months of 1927, and representing 208 per cent of the total exports for last year.

Domestic shipments for November told a similar story, carrying the total for the first eleven months of the present year to 64,235 cars, an increase of 26,838 cars or 72 per cent over the corresponding period of 1927 and 56 per cent over the total production for the entire twelve months of last year.

Canadian shipments this year to the end of November totalled 1,809 cars against 1,091 in the first eleven months of 1927, an increase of 65 per cent.

Hupp carried over into December 721 unfilled orders with demand continuing normal for this season of the year.

Vestris Victim a '400' Enthusiast

Fate snatched gallant Earl DeVore from the brink of death a score of times on speedways, only to lose his body in the vast Atlantic in the recent Vestris tragedy. Norman Batten, another knight of the roaring road, also was lost when the ship foundered. DeVore, who counted his race fan friends by thousands, is shown here with his tiny Miller race car, the Nash "400" Advanced Six sedan he used for pleasure and to tow the racer, and with the terrier pup that went down to sea with him. The picture was taken in Salem depot, North Carolina, shortly before he sailed. DeVore turned in "Old Faithful," the Nash car he had driven more than 60,000 miles, when he purchased the "400" model.

A Studebaker Beauty

Two Studebaker President Eight Roadsters established 12 new records for fully equipped stock cars recently when they both traveled 24 consecutive hours at average speeds of better than 85 miles an hour. The low, racy body lines of the President roadster illustrated above are suggestive of the eager power that lies under the hood.

Parents Can Get Them

Simply by sending in their own subscription, if not now a reader, and one of their relatives or friends. The dolls are ready and waiting for you. Prompt action is advised. It takes only two new six months' subscriptions.

Anyone may earn a "Princess Ann" doll. The offer is open to boys, girls, men and women of all ages. Boys and girls who live in other towns and cities where the Daily and Sunday Constitution is sold and delivered by local news dealers are eligible.

Here Are the Terms of the Offer. READ CAREFULLY!

Two new subscriptions to the daily and Sunday Constitution are required, each for a term of six months, subscribers to pay the carrier at the rate of 20c a week, or 90c a month.

This applies to the city of Atlanta and nearby suburbs. For other points in Georgia and adjoining states where we have a carrier delivery service, three subscriptions are required. The extra subscription for contestants out of town is required to defray expense of packing and delivery of the doll to the contestant.

We investigate the validity of the order, and the subscriber's responsibility, and reserve the right to accept or reject any subscription order at our option for the city and suburbs of Atlanta, and the local dealer outside of Atlanta will exercise the same right.

Clip out the coupon blank below and bring or mail to The Atlanta Constitution, circulation department, Atlanta. A subscription book with all the necessary instructions for securing the subscriptions will be delivered to those who present the enrolment blank in person.

Those sending the enrollment blank by mail to The Constitution will receive the subscription book and necessary instructions by return mail. CUT OUT BLANK AND BRING OR MAIL TODAY.

BY JOHN P. BOUGHAN,
Associated Press Market Editor.

Chicago, December 15.—(AP)—Lively upturns in corn resulted today from the government crop report, but the market quickly ran against something like a stone wall. Profit-taking sales by holders of corn futures were encountered, and a sudden downward swing of wheat tended also to cool the ardor of corn bulls.

Closing quotations on corn were unsettled. 3-8 at 1-2c to 3-4c a bushel net higher. Wheat finished 1-4 to 3-4c down, oats unchanged to 1-8c off, and provisions varying from 2c decline to a rise of a shade.

Topmost prices of the day in corn came at the start, general buying demand being active and offerings then being scarce. Announcement that the official estimate of the 1928 yield of corn in the United States had been reduced about 56,000,000 bushels as compared with a month ago was commented upon by trade leaders as startling in view of the negligible carryover liberal feeding, and the movement of corn to market ahead of the usual time, besides, new export purchasing in considerable amount and at a good premium was apparent, and bids for additional quantities were also said to be in the market at close to a working basis.

In some quarters, it was asserted the United States now has a total corn crop, carry-over and visible supply 2,500,000 bushels less than last year. The fact was also pointed that the big feeding months of corn are yet to come, and that with exporters likely to make large shipments early in 1929, farm reserves next March promise to become surprisingly small, with 35 per cent more cattle on feed and the likelihood that hog population figures would have to be revised upward. On the other hand, there were contentions that oats and barley are being largely substituted for corn, and that domestic feed grains as a whole are much in excess of last year.

Estimates suggesting that Argentine corn acreage has increased 10 per cent tended further to handicap corn bulls, and although rallies were in progress at the last, corn closed at bar little above low figures for the day.

Wheat setbacks handicapping the corn advance were ascribed largely to selective selling of wheat disclosing that the wheat market was without any aggressive support. Slackness of export demand today for wheat from North America was also a bearish influence. Oats were influenced largely by the action of other grain.

Provisions were steady as results of hog prices showing but little change.

N. Y. COTTON UNIT MAY OPEN JAN. 2

New York, December 15.—(AP)—Provided members approve at a meeting to be held December 26, trading in the new southern deliveries contract will start on the New York Cotton Exchange January 2, it was announced today. October will be the first position placed in trading. Under the rules, cotton would be deliverable at seller's option at Norfolk, Charleston, Galveston, Houston or New Orleans in addition to New York.

Secondary Rail and Utility Groups Accorded Support

DAILY BOND AVERAGES.

10 first grade rails	93.96	93.96
10 secondary rails	96.85	96.80
10 public utilities	97.22	97.02

Combined average	96.95	96.89
Combined month ago	97.74
Combined year ago	99.66

Total bond sales (par value) $4,625,000.

New York, December 15.—(AP)—Price movements were without definite trend in today's dull short session bond market. Losses as great as 6 points appeared in the general list, but there were numerous small gains to give support, particularly in the secondary rail and utility groups. Trading was broad, with total sales reaching $5,165,000.

American Telephone and Telegraph 6s and International Telephone and Telegraph 4 1-2s changed hands in some volume without moving from yesterday's levels. Public Service of New Jersey 4 1-2s sagged about 2 points, but a number of other utilities made fractional gains.

Strong spots in the industrial group included American Writing Paper 6s, Dodge Brothers 6s, Loew's 6s, Standard Oil of New York 4 1-2s, Humble Oil 5s, Barnsdall 6s and International Match 5s. Coppers lost more ground, Andes 7s selling off 7 points on a small turnover. Among other recently strong issues to yield to selling pressure were General Refractory 6s, Kayster & Co. 5 1-2s, Westinghouse 5s and Certainteed 5 1-2s.

Continued buying of Katy 5s A, Minneapolis & St. Louis 4s, Seaboard Air Line 6s, Canadian Pacific 4s and a few other rails produced gains running nearly to 2 points. Improvement in this group apparently reflected increased demand for railroad stocks.

The foreign list was steady. Bolivian 7s closed with a small gain and the 8s held to yesterday's levels.

United States government obligations showed little change.

SOUTHERN SALES SEND COTTON DOWN IN QUIET TRADING

PRICES ON COTTON FIRM DURING WEEK

BY UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

Cotton prices were practically unchanged for the week, with quotations December 14 about 1-16c per pound higher than those of December 7. The domestic and foreign demand situation changed but little during the week with no perceptible improvement. Some reports, however, indicated a stiffening in the basis for almost all cottons. The December 8 estimate of the crop reporting board of the department of agriculture indicating a 1928 crop of 14,373,000 bales of 500 pounds, was a little above trade expectations and the market declined about 1-2 cent upon its release but recovered this loss by the end of the week. Production in 1927 was 12,955,000 bales and in 1926 17,-977,000. According to the bureau of the census, domestic consumption of cotton for November was 610,844 bales, compared with 626,742 for November, 1927. Domestic consumption to November 30, this season, 2,248,-622 bales, compared with 2,502,566 the corresponding period last season.

Quotations for middling, 7-8-inch cotton, December 14—Norfolk 19.50c; Augusta 19.25c; Savannah 19.52c; Montgomery 18.70c; New Orleans with 19.42c; Memphis 18.75c; Little Rock 18.78c; Dallas 18.75c; Houston 19.35c; Galveston 19.35c; Average price of these ten markets December 14, 19.14c, compared with 19.11c December 7, and 18.79c the corresponding day last year. Sales of spot cotton for the week in ten designated markets were somewhat lighter, amounting to 158,666 bales, compared with 161,675 last week and 97,-312 the corresponding week last season. December future contracts for the week at New York advanced 8 points to 20.34c; at New Orleans 4 points to 19.57c, and at Chicago unchanged at 19.65c.

Certificated stocks, December 14, New York 16,314 bales; New Orleans 10,825; Houston 17,202; Galveston 24,721.

Exports to December 14, this season, 4,204,923 bales, compared with 3,553,377 the corresponding period one year ago.

Grades Differences—Grades above and below middling had a narrowing tendency during the week, with average of ten markets for good middling 39 points on middling; strict middling 25; strict low middling 78 off middling; low middling 155; strict good ordinary 236 and good ordinary 319. A year ago good middling was 44 points on middling; strict middling 30; strict low middling 35 off middling; low middling 81; strict good ordinary 156 and good ordinary 238.

Staple Cotton—A little more life was injected in the market for premium staple cottons, with reports indicating a widening of premiums for almost all lengths with, however, volume of business still limited. A good inquiry was reported for strict low middling to strict middling in the lengths 15-16 and one inch. More activity was also reported in New England for middling, ranging from 11-8 to 13-16 inches.

Southern Mill Centers—A rather quiet situation prevailed during the past week in southern mill centers with the usual pre-holiday dullness. According to the bureau of the census, cotton-growing states to November 30 this season consumed 1,728,-372 bales, compared with 1,845,457 for the corresponding period a year ago, and mill stocks November 30 were 1,224,407 bales, compared with 1,131,609 a year ago.

New England Mill Centers—Reports indicated an improvement in the New England basis for extra staple cotton of about 25 to 50 points, with considerable activity in selected shorter cottons. Tire mills were reported buying heavily the last few weeks. Some reports said cotton for prompt delivery pushed for sale with demand deferred shipments rather good. According to the bureau of the census, New England mill consumption for four months to November 30 this season was 437,579 bales, compared with 545,287 the same period last season.

Dry Goods Centers—According to Association of Cotton Textile Merchants and the Cotton Textile Institute, November production amounted to 341,841,000 yards and sales 375,-163,000 yards; stocks on hand November 1, 392,742,000 yards against 388,634,000 November 30; unfilled orders on November 30 showed an increase of 5.5 per cent compared to those November 1.

Foreign Markets—Liverpool reported less active demand for cotton on spot but good demand for forward delivery with basis stronger. Trade calling with short interests covering supported markets. Stocks American cotton, December 7, 448,000 bales, compared with 603,000 a year ago. Manchester said demand for American cotton declining with limited buying for forward shipments. Norfolk and Texas cottons of grades strict middling and good middling reported in demand. The supply is mostly of premium staple cotton. Yarn prices and demand were reported steady with larger cloth sales, especially to China. Stocks American cotton December 7, 49,000 bales, compared with 55,000 a year ago. Bremen reported limited demand with some inquiry for lower grades with basis hardening. Spinners reported buying slowly with demand principally for prompt delivery. Stocks of American cotton at Bremen, December 7, 531,000 bales, compared with 597,000 a year ago. Havre reported practically no demand for Americans with cheap offers coming on market. No demand finished goods, but mills seemed to be sold very well ahead. Stocks American cotton at Havre, December 7, 188,000 bales, against 274,000 a year ago. Milan, Italy, market well supplied with American offers with some good sales forward shipments with easier basis principally lower grades. Yarn and goods markets fairly active.

General—World's visible supply of American cotton, December 7, 5,641,-904 bales, compared with 6,109,019 a year ago.

Sugar.

New York, December 15.—Raw sugar was unchanged as far as nearby supplies were concerned with spots quoted at 3.96 duty paid, but new crop sugars were easier. The only sale reported was 14,000 bags of Philippines for January and February shipment to an operator at equal to 3.90 delivered, and it was believed that additional new crop sugars were available at the same basis.

Although not very active raw futures were steady, closing net unchanged to 3 points higher. The steadiness was due to covering for over the week-end and to buying by houses with trade and Cuban conections, particularly of the March and May positions, which showed the maximum gains. Sales approximated 11,350 tons, including about half in the way of exchanges from the near to the more distant positions, December closed 2.09; January 2.05; March 2.13; May 2.00; July 2.25; September 2.30; December 2.35.

Refined was quiet and unchanged at 5.25 for fine granulated.

Flour.

Minneapolis, December 15.—Flour unchanged. Shipments 33,121 barrels; bran $30.00@30.50; wheat: No. 1 northern 1.10@1 11; December 1.09¼; May 1.15¼; July 1 17; corn: No. 3 yellow 78@79c; No. 3 white oats, 43@44¼c; flax: No. 1 2.30@2 ...

CARGOES OF VEGETABLE AND FRUIT CROPS INCREASE

SWEET POTATOES CONTINUE FIRM

BY U. S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

Combined shipments of 23 important fruits and vegetables increased last week to 15,410 cars and were 1,100 cars more than the volume of a year ago. Most of the gain over the preceding week was in movement of oranges, celery, cauliflower, spinach, sweet potatoes, western apples and mixed vegetable.

Output of oranges jumped to 2,850 cars, of which California furnished 1,660, while Florida increased rapidly to 1,150 cars. Florida also made considerable progress in movement of its crop of string beans; 75 cars rolled during the week. Cauliflower shipments totaled 355 cars, nearly all from California. Last season's corresponding movement of cauliflower was only 200 cars.

Because of a falling off in the movement of Florida grapefruit, that state was credited with only 635 cars during the seven-day period, and total shipments of grapefruit were only 770. Texas started 110 cars to market. During early December, 1927, only 480 carloads of this fruit were forwarded. Florida tomato shipments increased to 75 cars, while California and Texas furnished a dozen each. Imports of tomatoes from Mexico were 90 cars, from Cuba 27 and from the Bahamas 18. Florida reports 6,500 acres of celery as against 5,350 last season.

Onion Movement Moderate.

Onion shipments continued at the moderate volume of 460 per week, with more stock coming from Indiana and Colorado than from any other individual states. Imports were increasing; about 135 carloads arrived from Holland and 165 from Spain during the week. The 110-pound sacks of Holland yellow onions ruled $3.95 to $5.00 in terminal market, and imported Spanish stock brought $1.50-$2 per crate. Yellow varieties from western New York ranged $3.75-$5.00 per 100-pound sack in consuming centers, while medium to large-sized stock returned $4.25 to shippers. Both the western New York and western Michigan f. o. b. markets were sluggish; Michigan shippers got $4.40 for best stock. The price at western Colorado points was $3.50-$3.60 per sack. Midwestern yellows and Red Globes ruled generally $4.00-$5.00 in the leading cities, with midwestern and California whites higher at $4.25-$6.00. Western Valencia type onions brought $4.00-$5.50 in important markets.

Plantings of Bermuda onions in the Laredo district of Texas probably will exceed earlier estimates, because of the encouraging market outlook. Growing conditions so far have been favorable. Early plantings in some parts of the winter garden district also may exceed those of last season, partly because of the earlier start in transplanting. Final estimates were not yet available, but it was believed locally that the onion acreage around Raymondville may be double that of a year ago.

Arizona Lettuce Higher.

Lettuce was in good demand at Arizona shipping points, and prices advanced. Cars loaded with at least 85 per cent U. S. No. 1 stock were bringing $2.35-$2.50 per crate of four to five-dozen heads, on a cash-track basis. Arizona shipments increased to 410 cars, but were still only half as heavy as last December. California started 290 cars to market and Florida 145 cars. Most arrivals from California were jobbing at $3.50-$5 per crate, with poorer stock somewhat lower. Best Iceberg type lettuce from Arizona sold in city markets at $3-$4.50. The 1 1-2-bushel hampers of Florida Big Boston stock ranged $1-$2 in consuming centers.

Three early lettuce states together may have a crop of 6,700,000 crates, or 1,200,000 more than last season. The winter crop in Arizona is estimated at 1,650,000 crates, or nearly the same as in 1927. Plantings were greatly increased, but average yield per acre is indicated as only 100 crates, compared with 131 last year. Acreage in Imperial Valley of California is one-fourth greater than a year ago and the crop is forecast at the high total of 4,905,000 crates. The 1927-28 crop in Imperial Valley was 3,740,000 crates. Texas expects 154,000, compared with 100,000 last winter.

Sweet potatoes continued in firm position. The jobbing range on Virginia barrels was $2-$3.75. Shipments from Virginia increased temporarily to 100 cars, while Maryland shipped 100 and Delaware 75. Total forwardings increased to 545 cars. Bushel hampers of New Jersey yellow varieties ranged from $1.75 to $2.85 according to distance of the market from shipping point. Maryland and Delaware receipts showed a similar wide range of 75c-$2.50, and Tennessee Nancy Halls were jobbing at $1.65-$1.90. Bushel packages of Oklahoma and Arkansas sweets sold in Minneapolis at $2.25.

Cabbage Selling Lower.

Cabbage seemed unable to hold its recent high levels. Shipments averaged about 100 cars daily, New York being credited with 385 and Wisconsin with 200 cars as their week's total. Prices fluctuated in western New York producing districts, and final f. o. b. quotations on Danish type were $36-$38 a ton. The Wisconsin f. o. b. market was stronger at $34-$36. City dealers got mostly $40-$45 on New York and northern Danish. Western stock was jobbing in Fort Worth at $2.25-$2.50, bulk per 100 pounds. Barrel crates of new cabbage from Texas sold in leading cities at $2.75-$3.50. Imported Holland stock brought $2.25 per 100-pound basket in New York city.

A preliminary estimate of cabbage plantings in four early shipping states gives a total of 36,260 acres, about 2,130 more than last season and the largest acreage in any recent year. Florida may have 5,200 acres, or almost double last year's light plantings. California and Louisiana are reduced slightly to 5,900 and 8,560 acres, respectively, but Texas' plantings may be increased slightly to 16,600 acres. The fall cabbage acreage in South Carolina was only 300, as against 600 in 1927, but the crop amounted to 2,400 tons, the same as in 1927. Early plantings in the Rio Grande valley of Texas were lighter, but the late acreage will be heavier than last season, so that the total plantings in that valley are forecast at 11,600 acres. About 5,725 cars of cabbage moved from Rio Grande valley points during the 1927-28 season. Heaviest movement may come during March, 1929. In the coastal bend district of Texas, there are nearly 4,000 acres of cabbage, or 8 per cent more than last winter. This district shipped 1,036 cars last season.

Many Favorites Recover Part of Ground They Lost

New York, December 15.—(AP)—Stock prices moved irregularly higher this week after the drastic reaction of the week before. Trading slowed up considerably in volume. Many of the speculative favorites regained one-third to one-half of the ground lost last week. Several new weak spots cropped out, however, but, with few exceptions, notably General Motors and Houston Oil, prices did not break through their recent low levels.

There was a marked relaxation in call money rates, funds in the "outside market" being available as low as 5 1-2 per cent in the closing days of the week. This was regarded by bankers as a temporary condition, due to the shifting of funds incidental to government refinancing and December 15 disbursements.

Higher call money rates are looked for next week, with predictions of a flurry to 15 or 20 per cent in the day-to-day rate before the end of the year.

Time Money Advances.

Time money rates displayed a firmer undertone, and there was an advance of 1-8 of 1 per cent in the buying rate on bankers' acceptances, making the unusually wide spread of 1-4 of 1 per cent between the bid and asked quotations. The reduction of nearly $219,000,000 in federal reserve brokers' loans evoked general approval because of the recent criticism against the large volume of credit tied up on securities collateral, but most bankers were agreed that a further substantial reduction was necessary to correct the situation.

Most of the week's business news was favorable. A reduction in gasoline prices in Chicago was offset by higher prices for Pennsylvania crude. Freight car loadings continued to run above the corresponding period last year, and the seasonal recession in the steel industry was less marked than usual.

Progress was reported on several important merger developments during the week. The Gold Dust company reported the purchase of a substantial block of the common stock of the Standard Milling company. Negotiations were reported to be under way for a merger of the American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Manufacturing companies. Negotiations also were practically completed for the formation of a single manufacturing and distributing organization for victrolas and radiolas by the Victor Talking Machine company and the Radio corporation.

Merger Reports Felt.

Merger developments also influenced the buying of the railroad shares, particularly the Chicago Great Western issues. Although some selling came into the copper shares on the announcement that production of the red metal exceeded consumption in October, current reserve stocks of the refined product are reported to be the lowest on record.

Efforts to bring about the usual pre-automotive show demonstration in the automotive issues were not very successful. General Motors was under selling pressure most of the week. A brisk advance in Packard Motors was checked by the sharp break which followed the printing of an erroneous sale of that stock.

Bethlehem Steel ran up to a new high level on talk of dividend resumption at the January meeting, and there was a sharp rise in inland, but the other steels failed to make much headway.

The Day in Finance

By R. L. BARNUM

Loss of 22.42 Points in Two and a Half Days Most Drastic in History of Wall Street for So Brief a Period.

New York, December 15.—A new high level for all time was established for the average price of 50 representative stocks, half rails and half industrials, on Friday, November 30, at 229.53. Then there was a drop of 22.42 points, mostly in the two and a half days of last week, followed this week first by a recovery of 9 points to 216.07, or 40 per cent of the loss, and then by a secondary decline.

The loss of 22.42 points mostly in two and a half days was one of the most drastic in the history of Wall street for so brief a period. It compares with the 24-point decline occuring over a period of three weeks last June and with 30 points during the whole month of March, 1926.

In June of this year and in March, 1926, the first sharp decline was followed by a secondary decline, then a period of marked inactivity, then a resumption of the upward price movement, to a new high average. What many people in and out of Wall street are asking at the close of this week is, what is now ahead stock marketwise?

How Many Were Hurt?

Here in the street this question is being asked in various ways. To some the correct answer to the inquiry as to what is ahead stock marketwise depends on how many big and little traders were hurt and how much in the two and a half day decline of 22 points. Others are asking pretty much the same question by trying to find out what should be done to restore the stock market to a healthy condition and whether or not the needed remedy will be applied. Wall street people whose opinion counts for most are considering the stock market situation and outlook from the viewpoint last named.

What is found regarding the state of health of the stock market on November 30, the day the new high average price for all time was established if examination is made of what might be called a daily chart by a trained nurse? Several days after November 30, the country was told repeatedly from high quarters that the outlook had never before been so promising. Despite these extremely optimistic statements the stock market had a break within two days and a half of 22 points. What does the chart for November 30, the day the new high record price was established, show?

The day out of a clear sky there was sudden collapse in Canadian Marconi shares, with the market so confused that trading in those shares was suspended until the next day. The same day call money advanced to 10 per cent, the highest price touched since the worst of the post-war deflation period eight years ago. The same day the federal reserve made public its weekly brokers' loan statement, showing the fifteenth consecutive weekly increase with the increase for the 15 weeks no less than $1,200,000,000 to a new high record for all time. The same day the federal reserve system published its weekly statement showing the reserve ratio at the lowest figure since 1920.

A daily chart of a trained nurse showing symptoms corresponding to the foregoing would have been enough warning that a bad spell was ahead. As a result of the 22-point break that occurred in the stock market, brokers' loans this week were down $218,000,000. There was also a drop in the call money rate to 6 per cent. But the drop in the call money rate was believed to be due by the best judges of the money market here to temporary conditions. The 1928 year-end money market requirements are estimated at $1,000,000,000. Informed Wall street cannot see where this record-breaking total is coming from without causing further gyrations in the call money rate unless there is further liquidation in brokers' loans. Brokers' loans still stands $1,617,000,000 above this week last year.

Think Anything Can Happen.

Informed Wall street believes that almost anything can happen in the stock market and in the money market for the remainder of this year. It may be stated as a fact that many big as well as little traders in the stock market received a blow in the pit of the stomach in the 22-point decline. It may be that there are more blows of the same sort ahead in the expected gyrations in the call money market the remainder of 1928. However, for the longest look ahead the best opinion here is that big and little traders in the stock market were only knocked temporarily breathless by the 22-point decline in the stock market; that they will not be knocked out by what may happen in the money market between now and the end of 1928; that the bull stock market, in brief, is not over.

One of the most powerful and successful bankers in Wall street expressed the belief in talking with your correspondent this week that what is now being witnessed in the stock market and what has been going on for the past year or more is a conflict between the great army of people in this country who have funds to invest at lower prices on one side and on the other the great army of people, men and women, who steadily refuse to be frightened out of their stockholdings. This banker believes that the big outside public now speculating in the stock market on the long side to the greatest extent ever known in the history of this or any other country is not going to get out of the stock market until it has been hurt stock marketwise worse than so far either by a slowing down in general trade or some other development now not foreseen.

Urges Drastic Liquidation.

Another Wall street banker even more powerful and successful than the one quoted above believes confidently that the country would be far better off with drastic liquidation in the stock market and in brokers' loans, with the attention of the nation diverted from the stock market unless prices are still unreasonably high.

However, while hoping the wild stock market speculation is over, the last-quoted banker is afraid it is not. This banker for the good of the country wants to see the total deposits of the banks of the country again above a total of loans and investments, something that has not been witnesesed now in over a year with the situation steadily growing worse instead of better. This banker knows that there never has been a sustained movement in this country where total loans and investments exceeded total deposits that did not foreshadow serious trouble ahead.

THIRD TRADING FLOOR LISTS 250 SECURITIES

New York, December 15.—(AP)—The New York Produce Exchange, which inaugurates trading in securities on Wednesday next, today made public its original trading list of 250 securities. This includes 133 industrial and miscellaneous stocks, 48 bank stocks, 33 insurance stocks and 36 coupon bonds, most of which are now dealt in "over the counter."

Six trading posts have been established on the floor of the exchange, and tickers provided to carry the quotations to member firms. Approximately 500 members have qualified to engage in the securities business of the exchange.

The list of industrial and miscellaneous securities admitted to trading includes a number of investment trusts, among them American Capital corporation, American Founders corporation, American & General Securities corporation, Financial & Industrial Securities, Industrial Finance corporation, International Securities corporation, Reynolds Investment company and U. S. & British International company. Industrials stocks include Canadian Canners, Canadian General Electric, Clause Neon Lights, Crown Cork & Seal, Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea company non-voting common, Land Drug Stores, Roxy Theaters, Rumidor corporation, E. R. Squibb & Sons, and Splitdorf Bethlehem Electrical company.

Shares of practically all the large New York banks, not now traded in on the other organized security markets, are on the bank stock list. National City Bank common, which recently was dropped from the New York Stock Exchange list at the bank's request, is included. Stocks of several large insurance companies, including Travelers, Franklin Fire, Springfield Fire, and Marine, National Liberty Hanover and Home, also are on the list. Public utility issues comprise the bulk of the bond list.

U. S. EXPORTS IN NOV. SET RECORD FOR FALL

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—American exports for November amounted to 546,000,000, the largest total for any month this year with the exception of October and a record considerably higher than that for any fall month since the close of the European war. Imports were $327,000,000 during November and the country's favorable trade balance for the month was 219,000,000.

Commerce department trade observers today attributed the high export figure for the last two months to the coincidence of the usual heavy fall shipments of agricultural products, with an unusually heavy foreign demand for American manufactured products, notably automobile goods. For the 11 months including November, American exports amounted to $4,355,000,000, or approximately $200,000,000 more than for the same period in 1927. It is considered certain that the year will set a new export record when December figures are tabulated.

Imports, however, are running considerably below last year's total.

For the first time in several months, gold imports into the United States have reached large figures. The commerce department fixed the November inflow of gold at $29,591,000 which was larger than any monthly import of the metal since January. November gold export amounted to $22,915,000, so that the net gain of gold for the month was $6,766,000. Notwithstanding, the heavy loss of gold in previous months of 1928 by the United States has resulted in an excess of gold exports over imports for the 11 months including November, of $415,176.

Silver exports for November were $7,664,000 and imports were $5,447,000.

New York, December 15.—New stock financing in the past week totaled $119,094,000, bringing the amount since the first of the year to the record figure of $1,583,777,000. The offerings in the preceding week totaled $209,297,000 and from January 1, 1927, to December 15, 1927, $717,991,000.

Venezuelan oil production in November totaled 11,291,370 barrels or a daily average of 376,379 barrels, a new high record against former record of 10,519,588 barrels or $339,342 barrels daily in October and output of 6,877,673 barrels on 229,254 barrels daily in November, 1927. Lago Oil & Transport company again was leading producer, with total of 3,722,066 barrels.

A regular membership on the New York Produce Exchange has been sold for $30,750, an average of $750 over the preceding sale

Barnsdall corporation and Rio Grande Oil company report Luton-Bell No. 3 well in Elwood property, Santa Barbara, drilled 150 feet in sand, total depth 3,326 feet, is flowing at rate of 5,000 barrels daily. This is the fourth producing well in this field.

COCA-COLA SUES FOR INFRINGEMENT OF TRADE-MARK

Cincinnati, Ohio, December 15.—(Special.)—Upon the application of the defendants in the test suits of the Coca-Cola company, Atlanta, Ga., against Harry C. Eggers, Jacob Pittner, Fred Schultes, Harry Weinard and Charles J. Scherrer, hotel and cafe owners and soft drink establishments, Cincinnati, Smith Hickenlooper, United States district judge Cincinnati, late today entered orders in definitely postponing hearings on the orders directing the defendants to show cause and peremptorily setting the cases for final hearing February 5.

In these suits the Coca-Cola company charges the defendants have infringed its trade mark by selling other soft drinks as and for Coca-Cola. The suits in question are understood to have been brought as test cases to decide whether certain practices and representations as regard Coca-Cola can be participated in by makers and sellers of substitute drinks alleged to be like the Atlanta company products and of similar origin although bearing similarly sounding names or similar labels and alleged to be marketed in direct competition with the Atlanta products unfairly and in real competition with Coca-Cola. Many more suits of like nature are expected started if the courts rule in favor of Coca-Cola.

Individuality Stamped on New Homes Recently Built by Harold McKenzie

Individuality marks these bungalows, the latest creations of the Harold McKenzie company, fast-growing residential building organization. Above is seen the new dwelling of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Daniels, just completed at 1578 Flagler street. To the right is the beautiful new home of Mr. and Mrs. Carter Barron, recently built on Peachtree way.

NEW MANAGERS GET DRUID APARTMENTS

Rankin-Whitten Company Adds Large Structure to List.

Management of the Druid apartments, beautiful residential structure situated on Ponce de Leon avenue at the corner of Highland avenue, has been assumed by Rankin-Whitten Realty company, one of the outstanding apartment renting agencies of the south.

Recognized as being among the most attractive apartments in the city, the structure contains 15 units of five and six rooms each. The building is well located and adds to the already large list of desirable apartment houses under management of Rankin-Whitten Realty company.

In taking over management of the Druid apartments officials of the realty agency gave out the following statement:

"While the personnel of this building is second to none and the service that has been given by the management in the past has been the best, it will be our policy not only to maintain this standard, but to improve it where possible."

FOUR LOSE LIVES IN HOTEL BLAZE IN KENTUCKY TOWN

Hazard, Ky., December 15.—(AP)—Four persons met death here tonight when the Hotel Combs was destroyed by fire. Bodies of the four have been recovered and six or more other persons are missing, it was reported.

A number of structures on the main street of the city, which is one of the centers of the eastern Kentucky coal fields, were threatened by the flames.

Two of the bodies were identified as those of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Pirtle and the others as of men named Wooster and Taylor. A bellboy said 10 or more persons were in the hotel when the fire started.

BRIDGE CAVES IN, STOPPING TRAFFIC ON JERSEY ROADS

Jersey City, N. J., December 15.—A section of the double-jackknife bridge over the Hackensack river on the Lincoln highway fell into the river tonight, narrowly missing a tugboat which was proceeding along the river.

There was a trolley car and several motor cars on the bridge, but early reports indicated all had escaped. There were no injuries, reports at Jersey City police headquarters said.

The section of the bridge which fell into the river weighed 1,080 tons. The bridge has been built only a few months.

BUST OF CARNEGIE UNVEILED IN HALL OF PAN-AMERICAS

Realtors To Elect Their Officers Wednesday Night At Annual Board Meeting

REALTORS TO DISCUSS MANAGEMENT ETHICS

Property Management Division Plans Session at Annual Meeting.

Provisions which should be considered in making long-term leases so as to safeguard the interests of the community at large will come before the executive committee of the property management division of the National Association of Real Estate boards at its annual business meeting in Birmingham, Ala., January 23, 24 and 25. Standards of practice for the operation of office buildings and apartment buildings and for the general management of real property will be brought up for discussion at a meeting of the property management division.

Legal forms which, if adopted, would insure both landlord and tenant in an office building or an apartment building against slip-ups in leases or other agreements which may be occasioned by the use of inadvisable clauses or by failure to include necessary provisions will be brought before the division. If adopted these forms will become national standard forms for property management and are expected to go into general use in the rental of properties.

ONLY A CAT STAYS ON SHIP WRECKED OFF IRISH COAST

Cobh, Irish Free State, December 15.—(AP)—So far as was known here, the only living feature aboard the liner Celtic tonight was the ship's cat. The animal was sole mistress of the great vessel as heavy seas drove salvage crews and tugs to shelter and battered the liner against the rocks in Cork harbor.

Joeffrey Rogers, purser of the Celtic, said that pussy refused to leave the ship when the crew was ordered ashore. She was born on the Celtic and had led a happy life on the bounding main. She scampered back to her place in the quarters of the firemen and stewards as the last man climbed down the ladder.

When the weather permits salvage workers to return, the cat may be saved. They may find more than one cat as members of the crew said that their mascot had prepared a nest for a coming family. They were convinced that she had determined not to leave the ship for that reason.

Washington Seminary Will Close Monday As "Flu" Preventive

Closing of Washington seminary for the Christmas holidays will take place on Monday of this week instead of on Wednesday as had been planned, it was announced Saturday by L. D. Scott, principal of the school. Mr. Scott explained that this action had been decided upon as a precautionary measure against the spread of influenza among the students. He made it clear that there was nothing alarming in the present situation at the school and the action is taken merely as a safeguard against any possible risk.

KEAT IS ELECTED PRESS CLUB HEAD

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—Russell Kent, Washington correspondent of The Birmingham (Ala.) News and The Chattanooga (Tenn.) Times, was named president of the National Press club at its annual election tonight. He was unopposed for the office and will succeed J. Fred Essary, of The Baltimore Sun. Other officers elected were Edgar Markham, St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press, vice president; W. H. Atkins, Atkins News Service, secretary; Elliott L. Thurston, New York World, treasurer, and William C. Murphy, Jr., United States Daily, Washington, D. C., financial secretary.

Kirke L. Simpson, The Associated Press; Eugene S. Leggett, Detroit Free Press, and Theodore A. Huntley, Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, were named members of the board of governors.

President's Report Will Outline Recommendations for 1929 Activities of Local Organization.

Election of officers of the Atlanta Real Estate board will feature the annual meeting to be held at 6 o'clock Wednesday inght in the Atlanta Athletic club. Frank C. Owens, retiring president, will submit his report and recommendations, while activities of the local realtors' organization for the year will be summed up in annual committee reports.

Among those on the program who will render reports are R. R. Otis, chairman of the rates, rules and customs committee; W. P. Walthall, chairman of the real estate sales committee; M. L. Thrower, chairman of the rental committee, and R. W. Evans, chairman of the membership committee.

President Owens, in discussing the meeting, stated that it is the most important gathering held by the members of the real estate board and that he is anxious a full attendance be had so as to offer the members and opportunity to become acquainted with the work of the organization for the year, putting them in a position to learn of the services the board has rendered its members.

Officers for the year 1920 will be elected at the meeting will consist of president, first vice president, second vice president, treasurer and secretary.

President Owens will submit his annual report covering all phases of work of the real estate board and at the same time will make recommendations as to activities of the board and constructive movements that could be carried on for the benefit of the membership during the coming year.

At the beginning of 1928 an award was offered to the most valuable member of the board for the year. This member was to be judged by the number of new members secured, promptness of attending meetings, turning in of appraisals and interest shown in different board achtivities. A committee has been appointed to check the records of members so as to decide upon the awarding. It is announced that this award will be made Wednesday night.

Newton County Building, Loan Concern Formed

Realizing the need for additional homes as well as some plan by which these homes could be made possible, several business and civic leaders of Newton county have organized the Newton County Builwding and Loan association at Covington, Ga.

Dr. A. S. Hopkins, mayor of Covington; S. H. Adams, president Adams Lumber company and R. P. Lester, of Lester & White Real Estate and Insurance agency, were elected president, vice president and secretary-treasurer reepectively.

The following directors were elected to serve until the next annual stockholders' meeting to be held in January, 1929: T. C. Swann, president Bank of Newton County; O. W. Porter, porterdale Mercantile company; R. E. Everitt, R. A. Norris, Leon Cohen, Dr. J. R. Sams, Dr. A. S. Hopkins, S. H. Adams, C. C. King, W. C. The association began business with considerable pre-organization stock subscriptions as well as applications for loans on hand. The officers and directors are putting forth much effort to build the assets of this home institution and it is destined to become one of the largest financial organiza-

PORTO RICAN RELIEF ASKED BY COOLIDGE

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—President Coolidge believes that it will be necessary to make some provision for the devastated Island of Porto Rico at this session of congress, and estimates that an outlay of at least $7,000,000 will be required.

Of this amount, he understands that $2,500,000 would be expended with no return to the United States, while the remainder would be used as a loan for the restoration of agriculture.

CONSTITUTION'S DEMONSTRATION HOMES ENTER LAST WEEK OF PUBLIC INSPECTION WITH INTEREST KEEN

Late Visitors Are Urged To Pay Homes Visit Today In Morningside Community

Structures Will Be Open From 2 O'Clock in Afternoon Until 10 O'Clock Tonight—Home Demonstration Sets New Standards for Atlanta.

The Constitution's two demonstration homes in the Morningside community, which during the past three weeks have attracted over 65,000 visitors, today enter their last week of public inspection, and all who desire to see and profit by their many splendid features are urged to pay their visits at once.

Sundays have proved to be popular days for visiting, and officials in charge of the home demonstration are confident that today will witness another outpouring of interested homeowners and prospective builders.

The homes will be open from 2 o'clock this afternoon until 10 o'clock tonight, with hostesses stationed at both to receive all visitors and answer questions concerning construction and appointments of the two dwellings.

The homes are the master model home, built to meet the rigid specifications of the Home Owners' Institute of America, and located at 705 Morningside drive; and the model home, a less pretentious structure, but one that offers many interesting advantages, at 1643 Rock Springs road, a block from the master model home.

These two homes were opened formally to the public on Sunday, November 25, and since that time have been the subject of widespread comment among Atlantans. They have brought to The Constitution high praise from leaders of local civic and home improvement movements and have proved beyond all doubt the outstanding home educational movement of Atlanta both in attendance records and in point of elaborateness.

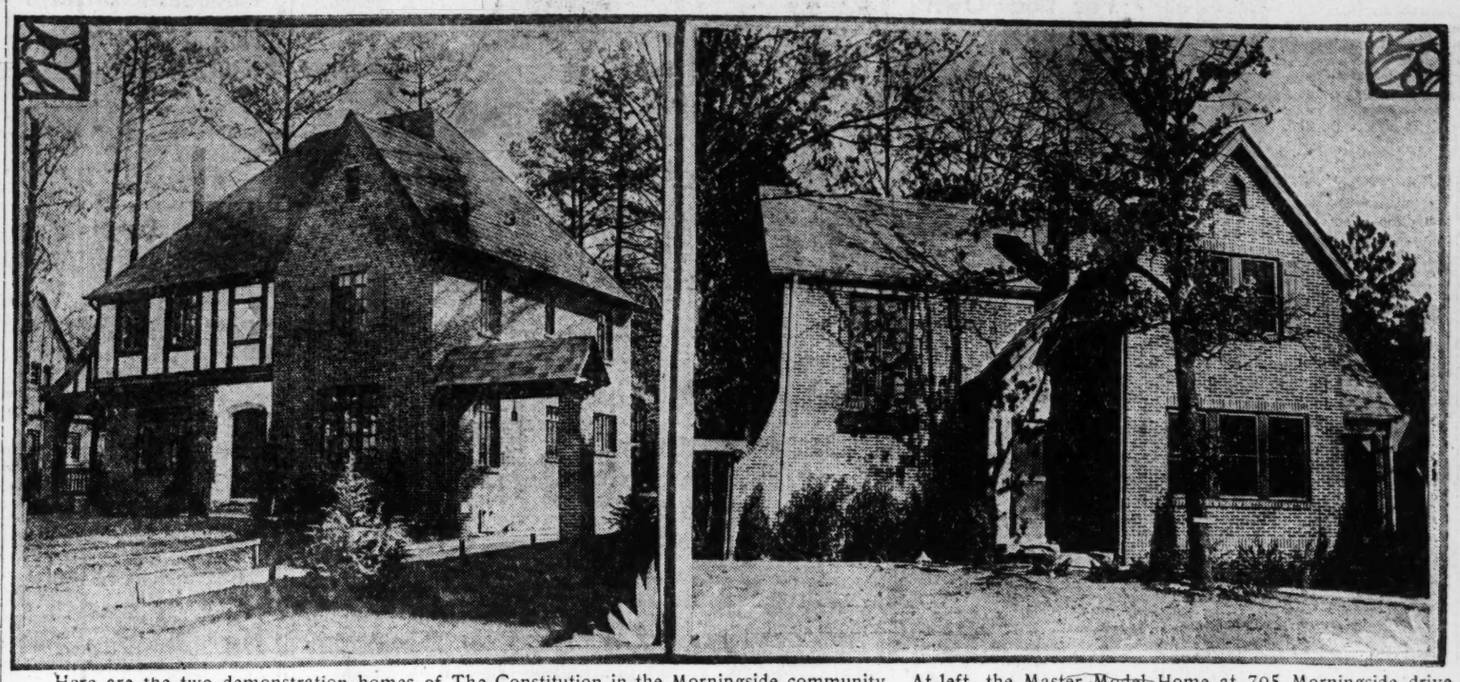

The master model home is universally regarded as one of the best-built homes in this section. Built to comply with the Home Owners' Institute specifications, it is composed entirely of nationally-advertised and standard materials in every detail. It presents highly-advertised building ideas—ideas that look to permanence and repair-free service without any sacrifice of beauty and comfort.

The model home is not built to meet the institute's plans, but it does rank high in its own price class and has much to recommend it to attention of all visitors. Thomas K. Windham, well-known local builder, constructed the homes, and R. Kennon Perry was architect for the master model home.

The nation's most prominent manufacturing concerns cooperated with The Constitution in building the homes, and a long list of Atlanta stores aided in furnishing the homes. Thus the appointments, as well as the construction of the homes, are worthy of attention, for both are up to the moment and in srict accordance with the latest ideas of good taste.

The homes will be open all next week between the house of 2 and 6 o'clock in the afternoon.

Constitution's Demonstration Homes Attract 60,000 Visitors

MOSAIC TILE GIVES WARM BEAUTY TO HOME

Home owners of discriminating tastes have turned to mosaic tiles as a means of introducing the lasting charm and beauty of color in their homes. Here is a material whereby unsurpassable decorative effects may be achieved—nothing else can even approach it for sheer beauty.

But most important of all is the fact that mosaic tiles offer the opportunity to impress personality permanently upon the home. One is not limited to a few stock designs originated by others and duplicated in hundreds of homes. Rather the builder is offered such a wide variety of colors, of types, of shapes, that he may give his own tastes free reign and have original patterns made according to his own designs.

Mosaic tiles are used on floors, walls, wainscotings and ceilings. They are also particularly adaptable for fireplace arches and mantels. A mosaic tile fountain has been evolved which adds new beauty to the sun room, the fernery or the garden wall.

There are types of mosaic tiles for practically every room in the modern home. Their use creates an atmosphere of warmth and charm—an impression of quiet, unobtrusive elegance.

Keramic tile, manufactured by the Associated Tile Manufacturers' association and supplied by the Atlanta Tile and Marble company, is used in The Constitution's demonstration homes.

USE OF COPPER AND BRASS MEANS RUST-PROOFING

From every standpoint, rust-proofing the home is a wise form of economy. Not only is the house free from the ravages of rust, the attendant repair costs and the many annoyances, but it must be remembered that the home is an investment in real estate and some day the owner may wish to sell. In the resale market the use of copper, brass and bronze creates the confidence in a house that a person must have before he buys.

People may not know good building materials, may not be able to tell one kind of wall construction from another, but they do know that copper, brass and bronze are the finest materials for their respective purposes. When people see copper, brass and bronze throughout, they will take it as an indication that the rest of the construction is equally sound. They will say, "Here is a house that is well built!"

And there is perhaps nothing finer than a well-built home. It mellows and becomes more livable every day. It hasn't that conspicuous newness, yet it's never old. The years are kind to the home of which we speak, to the man who builds it, to the people that it shelters.

Copper and brass are used in the Master Model home at 705 Morningside drive.

TRUSCON METAL LATH USED IN MODEL HOME

The trend in modern interior decoration is towards artistic plaster effects. Ordinary plaster bases are not satisfactory because of the danger of cracking of the plaster. Metal lath makes possible the permanence of artistic plaster work in buildings of all kinds, and especially in the modern home, where cracks, streaks and bulging are particularly unsightly and a constant source of expense.

The home builder can eliminate these annoyances by the use of Truscon metal lath as a plaster base. This lath will reinforce plaster with a network of steel, forming an effective stop to the spread of fire and assuring the permanence of the construction. Its use will save many times its original cost in the saving in repairs and redecoration.

Truscon metal lath is furnished in various types to meet every requirement, and applied by good plasterers everywhere. It is sold and stocked by building supply dealers. The Atlanta office of the Truscon Steel company is at 705 Wynne-Claughton building.

Limestone Not Costly.

Carefully checked figures show that for an additional expenditure of from 5 to 6 per cent a home may be built of Indiana limestone.

VAST RESOURCES BACK ELECTRIC REFRIGERATION

The vast resources and electrical experience of the General Electric company, the world's leading electrical manufacturer, are behind the new General Electric refrigerator, according to officials of the Alexander-Seewald company, local distributors. This refrigerator is the direct result of 15 years of research and cooperative work by 64 engineers.

The icing unit consumes a minimum amount of current, keeps a uniform temperature and never requires oiling or attention of any kind, as all moving parts are enclosed in a hermetically sealed casing. This unit is assembled in a dust-proof room, with all the care that usually goes into the making of precise scientific instruments. It is then subjected to rigid tests.

What Price Mistakes.

When a plumber makes a mistake he charges twice for it. When a lawyer makes a mistake, it is just what he wanted, because he has a chance to try the case all over again. When a carpenter makes a mistake, it is just what he expected. When a doctor makes a mistake, he buries it. When a judge makes a mistake, it becomes the law of the land. When a preacher makes a mistake, nobody knows the difference. But when the editor makes a mistake—good night!

NEW METHOD SOLVES REROOFING PROBLEM

When spring comes every home owner feels the urge to beautify his home. To make the old house look a little newer and fresher.

But the home owner is frequently deterred from obeying that impulse to brighten up an old house for the reason that the expense is frequently too great. He muses probably:

"The house needs a new roof; that wooden shingle roof is leaking; some of the shingles are beginning to fall out; and a disreputable looking roof on top of a house makes the house look unattractive."

If the home owner at this stage of the game will inquire he will discover that there is a new method of putting a shingle roof on a house which does not necessitate the ripping off of the old shingles, and all the dirt, dust and annoyance that accompany it. For it has been found as a result of more than 12 years of practice, that asbestos shingles laid on a roof on top of the old shingles gives as good, and better, service than if the old shingles were torn away.

Asbestos shingles are made of asbestos fibre—the silky strands of a rock which geologists say is many millions of years old. It has been seasoned and tempered by all the volcanic fires and changes of the earth; it is waterproof; it is fireproof; it is indestructible. Asbestos fibres combined with Portland cement under a terrific hydraulic pressure are formed into shingles which are literally slabs of stone. Shingles of this sort, once placed upon a roof, preclude the necessity of reroofing again.

A representative of Johns-Manville, Inc., asbestos manufacturers of New York, by whom this method of reroofing was originated, declares that "by the process of reroofing with asbestos shingles one is not only saved trouble, time and expense, but one has, when the job is finished, a better roof all around."

Roof Protection Is Needed for Entry Door

Every home has an entrance door, even though it sometimes takes the owner of the house himself to find it, the designer having so carefully concealed it. Roof protection at the entrance door is highly desirable for the convenience of the visitor who is waiting for an answer to his ring. This may be a shed or a pediment roof supported on brackets, or a more ornamental porch with square posts or sound columns. A typical example is the Colonial entrance porch with its delicate columns, gracefully molded cap and cornice, and the well designed door often with sidelights and, where possible, a transom.

When you are considering the architectural treatment of your future home, bear in mind the importance of the proper design of details such as the entrance porch and doorway. Details of this kind come close to the critical eye of your visitors. Delight that eye with well chosen detail and their praise will gladden your heart.

Special millwork is no longer necessary. All of the larger trim manufacturers carry many stock entrances which are charming and when carefully chosen will improve your home and at the same time save you money.

If Radiators Mar Decorative Plan, Change Their Hue

Variety of Paint Finishes May Be Used; Makes Cleaning Easier.

If the glare of gold or silver leaf radiators intrudes upon an orderly decorative scheme which needs no such ostentation, it can be overcome. Often radiators are inclosed in metal covers. Another plan, one which makes the radiator inconspicuous, is to paint it to match the wall.

If the wall is stippled the radiator can be stippled, or if the wall is finished in a solid color, by painting the radiator the same color it will melt into the background and become part of the wall rather than a conspicuous bulk without decorative merit.

The procedure for painting radiators is much like that of painting furniture. Dust and dirt are first removed from the surface of the metal. If the radiator happens to be a new one it should first be painted with a priming coat. If it has previously been bronzed and is in fair condition, this coat may be omitted.

To enamel radiators, a coat of flat paint should be used first. This is followed with a coat or two of high grade enamel of the desired color.

By using the sponge stipple finish any conceivable color can be produced. The first and second coats should be a flat paint tinted as near to the color of the background of the wall as possible. Next some white paint should be tinted the most prominent color in stippled wall. It is then applied with a sponge cut straight across so as to produce a flat side. The sponge is tamped on all parts of the radiator with this contrasting color, which produces a very pretty mottled effect with the undercoat showing through. When this finish is dry it should blend very nicely with the wall.

For a glazed and blended finish two coats of white paint tinted a light cream color are applied. The second coat should be mixed fairly thick and after it has been applied, while it is still wet, stippled to make the surface rough. This is best accomplished with a clean, stubby brush which is pounded all over the surface. The finish is then allowed to dry. The next step is to thin down the glazing colors with oil. Ordinary colors in oil are used for this purpose and are thinned just a bit more than ordinary paint.

A coat of the cream is applied over the surface and is then wiped off with a dry cloth. The hollows will retain the color while the higher portions will be nearly the original cream. A very pleasing effect can be produced by this finish.

It is wise to apply a coat of good flat varnish when all the coats are dry, in order to protect the finish and make it easier to clean.

In addition, the use of paints and enamels increases the heating capacity of a radiator, thereby making it possible to save money on coal bills.

43.6% Cement Made Here.

The total world production of cement, according to the department of commerce, is 397,000,000 barrels a year, of which amount 173,000,000 barrels or 43.6 per cent are produced in this country. Germany ranks second in volume of production with 42,000,000 barrels, or 10.5 per cent of the total, while France is third with 30,060,000 barrels, or 7.6 per cent. England produces 29,000,000 barrels, or 7.3 per cent; Japan 15,000,000 barrels, or 3.8 per cent.

All the other countries of the world produce 108,000,000 barrels, or 27.2 per cent; of which Canada produces 9,000,000 barrels; Asia, exclusive of Japan, 8,000,000 barrels; Australia and New Zealand 5,000,000; South America 3,000,000 and Africa 3,000,000.

Women Are Home Buyers

There can be no question about the influence of women in the buying of homes. They are the ones who put over the home idea with the titular head of the family; and after that is done they go house hunting until they find something that suits them.

Let Us Estimate Your Job

Do you want your bathroom to be different and beautiful?

Come here to acquaint yourself with the new styled "Standard" Plumbing Fixtures—styled in the sense that they have been designed for distinctive beauty as well as utility. Not until you have seen them will you realize the new possibilities in bathroom furnishing and decoration and appreciate how they will enable you to individualize your bathroom.

The new "Standard" lavatories, made of Genuine Vitreous China, have a distinction of design quite unlike the lavatories you usually see. And they have all the advantages of the "Standard" one-piece construction. Fittings have been designed especially for these lavatories. Much hand-work is required in their making and they have a rare beauty. In color, too, you may express your individual ideas, for all "Standard" Plumbing Fixtures are made in black and several colors as well as white.

The Atlanta Constitution Model Home is equipped throughout with "Standard" Plumbing Fixtures.

There are new designs in "Standard" Baths; scientific advances in water closet construction; an improved enamel that is actually acid-resisting; Chromard, a metal finish that cannot tarnish or corrode; the "Three 8's" sink design acclaimed by home economics authorities; an electric sink and dishwasher that is a revelation of simplicity and efficiency; a stationary electric clothes washer—all these you can see and learn about on your visit to a "Standard" Showroom.

Brick House of English Design Built as Model Home

Sponsored by "The Atlanta Constitution," Today's Plan Has Excellent Plumbing, Incinerator Installations; Eight Rooms, Two Baths

BY L. PORTER MOORE,
President Home Owners' Institute, Inc.

We are offering today, as our featured small home design, another plan of a house that has been built. Construction tested plans are always especially interesting to those who contemplate home building, and in line with the effort this newspaper is making to constructively serve such families we reproduce whenever possible designs that have been built. Because this newspaper, in cooperation with other leading newspapers and Home Owners' Institute, is taking part in a national effort to improve small house construction, we are able to show homes of all architectural types actually built as model homes in all sections of the country.

Today's design, plan No. 340-S, was built this fall and is now fully furnished and open to public demonstration in Atlanta, Ga. It is a master model home sponsored by "The Atlanta Constitution" that was designed by R. Kennon Perry, A. I. A., well known registered Atlanta architect, and built at 705 Morningside drive, in the Morningside community off Piedmont road, by Thomas K. Windham, incorporated. The house, standing on a plot measuring 70x200 feet, contains approximately 45,000 cubic feet.

Fire-Safe Construction Used.

Built of brick, with a limited but effective use of stucco and half timbering, this model home is of English type, with cast stone entrance and typical heavy batten door trimmed with forged iron hardware of suitable pattern. Rigid asbestos shingles have been used; steel casements have been fitted into the window openings; flashings and the exterior drainage system are of heavy sheet copper. Thus, pleasing architecture has been rendered highly resistive to fire, durable and maintenance free by the use of nationally known quality materials.

Construction started late in August. I. N. Ragsdale, mayor of Atlanta, presided at the cornerstone laying on October 23, which was followed by a barbecue; the home was completed in mid-November; it is the second "Atlanta Constitution" master model home, the first having been built a year ago.

Containing eight main rooms, two baths, basement and first-floor lavatories, double garage, porch, entry hall and breakfast room, the interior is marked by livable space in the model basement, large size of living and master bedrooms, and completeness of plumbing and incinerator installations. Hopper doors of the built-in, chimney-fed incinerator are located on first and second floors, making the disposal of all garbage and trash very simple.

All plumbing fixtures in baths and lavatories are styled to harmonize, and some, particularly those in kitchen and laundry, are finished with acid-resisting enamel; all fittings are of brass, chromium-plated. First quality construction, typified by brass piping, metal lath and three coats of lime plaster, sectional, insulated boiler and thin tube radiators, decorative lighting fixtures and asbestos pipe covering, have been used throughout the master model home.

With space in the basement for a billiard table, and den or library off the living room, this plan offers all that is needed in design and construction for pleasant living. Outline of the specifications to which this home was built is as follows:

Masonry—Concrete footings under all walls, as shown on drawings. All foundation walls to be of poured concrete or concrete block made with Portland cement. Concrete to be mixed with water-proofing compound. Foundation walls may be of common brick, laid in one-to-three Portland cement mortar, at owner's option. Chimney of common brick; all flues lined. Fireplace selected brick; provide ash dump with clean-out door in celar. Exterior walls of common brick as shown on drawings. Steel basement windows of standard sizes with cam acting latch and double contact weathering shall be used.

Incinerator—Built-in incinerator to be installed in chimney, with receiving hopper doors located in or near the kitchen and in second floor halls for disposal of garbage and trash.

Carpentary—All framing lumber shall be well seasoned and free from large knots, either Douglas fir or yellow pine. California white pine for exterior millwork and interior trim; oak floors; steel bridging for floor joists. Interior doors and built-in kitchen cabinet as required.

Stucco Work—Exterior walls finished with three coats of Portland cement stucco on metal lath, where shown on plans. Finish coat colored and textured as directed.

Roofing—Roof of rigid asbestos shingles; styles, thickness, colors, sizes and shapes as specified; to be laid in accordance with manufacturer's instructions.

Metal Work—Gutters, rain-pipe, valleys and flashings to be 16-ounce copper.

Electrical Work—Complete system of electric wiring from meter to all outlets, including all panel boards, junction boxes and other fittings. The installation must be in accordance with the rules and regulations of the National Board of Underwriters.

Casement Windows—To insure maximum light and air, steel casement windows in single or multiple units with transom as shown on drawings are recommended. All corners to be electrically welded; all muntins to be flush on both interior and exterior faces. Malleable iron or solid bronze hardware to be used. Frames to be anchored with continuous angles. Bronze screens recommended.

Plastering and Lathing—Three-coat work over metal lath is recommended. A less expensive job may be obtained through the use of one-half inch of plaster over flat rib expanded metal lath or wood lath. Insulating lumber or plaster-board may be used if desired by owner. Lime plaster for base coats, with finishing hydrate for smooth white finish coat or texture finish, is recommended for all plastering.

Hardware—Owner shall furnish all hardware. Exterior hardware shall be rustproof. Hinges for entrance doors shall be of the ballbearing or anti-friction type, equipped with roller pins. Designed hardware to be of forged iron in English Tulip or Warwick design unless otherwise specified. Garage hardware shall be sliding and folding type, depending on type of opening, delivered complete in original box.

Lighting Fixtures—Lighting fixtures shall be correctly designed to harmonize with architectural details; rustproof metals recommended and quality of finish to be considered.

Plumbing—Brass piping for hot and cold water lines. Gas or coal fired hot coil water heater. Reinforced concrete septic tank where sewer connections are not available. Acid resisting enamel fixtures, with chromium-plated brass fittings, recommended for laundry, kitchen, bathroom and lavatory. System must be as shown on plans and conform with local regulations.

Tile Work—The floor and wainscot in bathrooms and lavatory, with built-in china accessories.

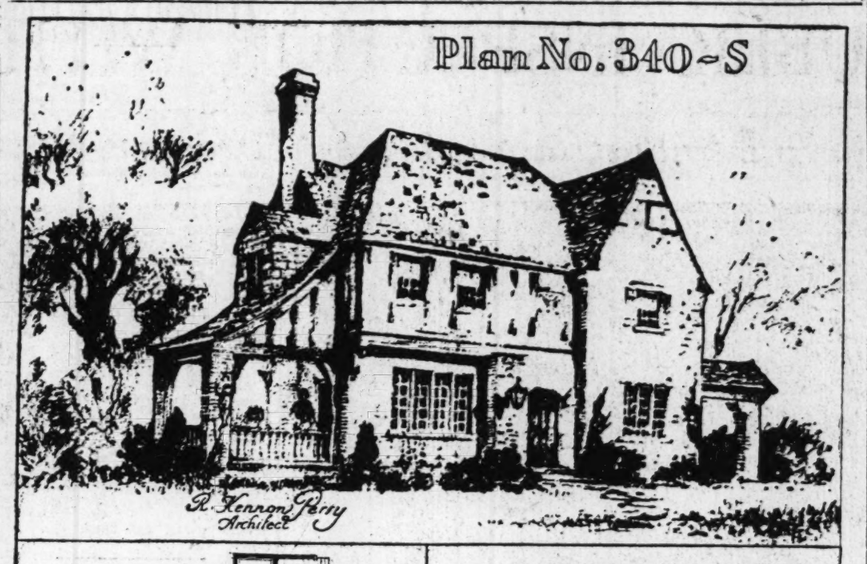

Heating—Steam, hot air or hot water red-jacketed sectional boiler thoroughly and indestructibly insulated—for hard or soft coal, coke, oil or gas. All steam mains and returns, and all hot water lines to be insulated with three-ply, cross-corrugated asbestos pipe covering; fittings to be insulated with a 3-4-inch asbestos cement; all applied in accordance with manufacturer's instructions. Thin tubular radiators recommended; air valves where necessary.

Painting—Strictly pure white lead and linseed oil in proper proportion, with zinc oxide where desired, or a good grade of ready-mixed paint shall be used. Interior trim to receive two good coats of flat paint and one coat of flat enamel. Finished floors to be varnished or waxed throughout as directed.

Temperature Control—Heat regulator with eight-day or one-day clock thermostat, limit control on boiler or furnace, and electric or spring motor.

Insulation—Throughout with insulating building board (or insulating quilting if preferred) used as plaster base on second floor ceiling operates as roof insulation.

Broken Roof Lines Lend Distinction to This Plan

Built in Atlanta, Ga., as a Master Model Home, Plan No. 340-S, shown above, was designed by R. Kennon Perry, A. I. A., of Atlanta, and sponsored by The Atlanta Constitution. Complete blueprints and specifications of our house plans, ready to build from, are available to our readers at low cost. Plans from Home Owners' Institute, Inc., copyright, 1928.

Atlanta's Master Model Home Plans Receive Publicity in Cities All Over United States

The above home plans and the story that accompanies them today is published in leading newspapers of 30 American cities where the Home Owners' Institute of America is sponsoring master model homes similar to that presented by The Constitution at 705 Morningside drive. This fact illustrates the widespread campaign being conducted by the institute to raise the standards of homebuilding everywhere and gives favorable publicity to Atlanta's part in the drive. Incidentally, it is an added source of gratification to The Constitution to recall that officials of the Home Owners institute have pronounced the Atlanta master model home the most successful of all those presented throughout the country.

Motion Picture Projection Rooms In Basement Area

Dancing Rooms Being Created Also; Should Consider Use When Planning.

As familiarity with the compact camera which makes "home-made" motion pictures increases, motion picture film libraries will develop in our homes. As films are both costly and fragile and as space for storage and projection is required, a new use for the model basement is developing.

Such use was made of space in the basement of a master model home recently opened in Rochester. It proved a popular feature with homeseekers. Undoubtedly many owners will use cellar area in this manner

Another use to which basement space will be put in growing degree is for dancing. With insulated boilers and asbestos covering on heating mains, the temperature factor is controlled. With a fan installed in a portion of a window, ventilation is easily and inexpensively arranged. Smooth-surfaced, felt-base rugs provide a light floor for dancing Dance music is made available either by radio or wax record, one instrument supplying both.

No matter what purpose the basement is put to, it will usually be found that an upholstered seat running around the wall will be appreciated, providing the padding is sufficient for comfort. Billard tables, card tables, athletic equipment, tool cabinet and bench may find place in this portion of the house.

Considering the uses to which this space may be put, it is wise to plan the basement for one of them when the ouse is designed, arranging for ceiling height, electric wiring, placement of piping, location of lally columns or other supports for partitions on upper floors and, of course, adequate waterproofing.

The tendency toward smaller houses of better quality and the growing number of facilities for pleasure and comfort within the home make the use of basement space highly desirable. Development of heating equipment that are at once compact, efficient and good looking makes it possible.

CHICAGO PLANS CENTER FOR CANCER RESEARCH

Chicago, December 15.—(AP)—Establishment of a cancer research center in Chicago with a view to perfecting a national organization for study of the disease was decided upon today by Dr. Charles Mayo, of Rochester, Minn.; Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, Cook county coroner, and Anton J. Cermak, president of the county board.

Dr. Mayo will head the board which will take over a section of the county hospital. Other members will include leading professors in medicine from the University of Chicago, Northwestern university, University of Illinois and Loyola university.

Mr. Cermak announced that the same board plans to create a national organization "in order to coordinate the resources of the many surgeons who have made extensive research into the problem of fighting cancer, but who have never had a medium through which to give the benefits of their work to the world."

Other centers, such as Boston, New York and St. Louis, will be invited to join in the work of the national organization, Dr. Mayo said. The county hospital project will be acted upon within the next few weeks and the board plans to form the national body as soon as possible after the Chicago center has been organized.

The need of a concerted war on cancer was pointed out by Dr. Mayo, who said 38,000 persons died of cancer in this country last year. The number of deaths has grown, he said, from 83 in every 100,000 several years ago to 127 in every 100,000 in recent years.

Miss Rockefeller, Brooks Emeny Wed in New York

New York, December 15.—(AP)—Miss Winifred Rockefeller, grandniece of John D. Rockefeller, Sr., was married late today to Brooks Emeny, instructor in government at Yale university, in the chapel of St. Bartholomew's Episcopal church. The ceremony was performed by the rector, the Rev. Dr. Robert Norwood.

Only members of the immediate families and a few friends were present. There was none of the ostentation and display sometimes characteristic of weddings of New York's social elect. Nor was there the usual extended honeymoon. It was said that Mr. Emeny expected to return to his classes at Yale on Monday.

Mrs. Emeny, who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Avery Rockefeller, is a graduate of Westover school at Waterbury, Conn. She made her social debut in New York several years ago. The groom was graduated at Princeton university in 1924, and did graduate work at universities in London, Vienna and Paris.

Mr. Emeny is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Emeny, of Salem, Ohio. The bride's father is a son of William Rockefeller, who was a brother of John D. Rockefeller, Sr., and was associated with him in his establishment of the Standard Oil company in Cleveland.

Jesse Mann Rites.

Cedartown, Ga., December 15.—(Special.)—Funeral services for Jesse Mann, 65 years old, who died Friday afternoon, will be conducted from the residence at 1:30 Sunday afternoon, Rev. J. H. Barton, of the First Methodist church, officiating.

Mr. Mann is survived by his widow who was Miss Etta Whorton, of Cave Spring; two daughters, Mrs. Malline Trentham and Miss Jessie Mann; one granddaughter, Marion Trentham; two brothers, Ed and Felton Mann, of Birmingham; two sisters, Mrs. L. A. Estes, of Birmingham, and Mrs. G. W. Morlan, of Hawarden, Iowa.

Mr. Mann, who was a prominent contractor, was born in Cartersville, Ga., and had resided in Cedartown for 25 years.

MACHINE GUN SEIZURE STIRS VIENNESE PRESS

Vienna, December 15.—(AP)—The Vienna Press displays prominently news of the seizure of seven cases of machine guns and munitions found on a Danube river steamer in Vienna harbor yesterday.

While no new facts were announced by the police who have stated that the craft was en route to Hungary it is known that their investigations are being continued and that at least five men who are alleged to have been the shippers or forwarding agents of the consignment will be charged with infringements of the arms license law.

The Vienk Abend stated it had learned that Premier Bethlen, of Hungary, was expected to arrive this afternoon at Vienna from Lugano. The paper said it was believed his visit was in connection with the arms smuggling incident and that he had urgently asked Chancellor Seipel, of Autria, for an interview.

"Bethlen wishes to prevent the scandal assuming the proportions of the St. Gotthard affair," says the newspaper.

The newspapers in general declare that the shipment seized yesterday was only one of a succession of clandestine consignments which have been shipped to Hungary from various points. They say that Vienna was being used as the headquarters of a central bureau for arms smuggling.

The Arbeiter Zeitung, under the heading: "The road to the Hungarian throne," suggests that the machine guns may have been intended for a coup d'etat by Prince Albrecht, and a similar thought was expressed in social-democratic parliamentary circles.

It was believed in political circles in Vienna that the affair probably will be brought before the League of Nations as the St. Gotthard smuggling incident was brought a year ago.

RECALLS INCIDENT AT ST. GOTTHARD.

Lugano, Switzerland, December 15. (AP)—While no complaint has been received from any source, League of Nations officials today remarked upon the similarity between the machine gun seizure reported in Vienna and the seizure a year ago of a shipment of arms at St. Gotthard on the Austro-Hungarian frontier.

The St. Gotthard incident caused a considerable international commotion because the little entente countries protested to the league, contending that it meant infraction of the peace treaties limiting armaments and asking for an investigation.

The league council at that time sent experts to investigate and later, without passing judgment as to the guilt of any country, practically said: "Don't let anybody do it again."

At the same time the council decided to tighten up its procedure of quick investigation in such cases and ruled that in the future countries affected should have the evidence concerning gun-running carefully preserved so that responsibility might be established.

Movie Actresses Believed Chiefs Of Liquor Ring

Los Angeles, December 15.—(AP)—A Pasadena millionaire, an attorney and two movie actresses, whose names were not revealed, were sought by federal authorities today as principals in an alleged rum ring catering to wealthy persons in Pasadena, San Marino and Hollywood. The hunt resulted from the discovery of 300 cases of expensive liquor yesterday on a fashionable San Marino estate.

When dry agents under Federal Prohibition Administrator Frank R. McReynolds swept down upon the place they arrested the caretaker who gave his name as Bert Smith but later changed it to Jack Desmond. He said he did not know the name of his employer

The liquor which was found in the cellar of the house, which had been watched for several months, was said to have been imported, some of it smuggled over the Mexican border and some landed from ships off the southern California coast.

McReynolds said the estate had been used for eighteen months as a central point for the distribution of the liquor to wealthy persons in the country club and to film colonies. He said the residence had been leased and sub-leased several times and that its owner probably did not know the use to which it was being put.

Officers said evidence found in "cost sheets" indicated that 10,000 cases of liquor had been distributed from the place during the past six months. Other records indicated, they said, that a millionaire backed the ring, the lawyer gave legal protection and the movie actresses aided in merchandising and delivery of the liquor.

MINE WORKERS FAVOR MECHANICAL DEVICES

Indianapolis, December 15.—(AP)—Ellis Searles, editor of the United Mine Workers Journal, today made public a statement setting forth the attitude of the United Mine Workers of America on the introduction of machinery and other modern mining methods into the mines of the country. The statement declared that the union does not oppose the introduction of mechanical devices in coal mining and that "when mechanization of mines comes as a matter of progress we are for it."

The statement in part said:

"The United Mine Workers of America favors anything and everything that is of benefit to the coal mining industry, whether this benefit comes through the introduction of mechanical methods or otherwise. We believe in the constant development of new ideas along that line. Any new thing that is worth anything to the industry will be a benefit to the mine worker. If it does not help to improve the condition of the mine worker it is worthless to the industry and should not be adopted. We are not opposed to the introduction of machinery in the mines but we do contend that when a machine is installed that effects a saving in costs a fair and just portion of that saving should go to the mine workers themselves. There is no good reason why all of the saving should go into the pocket of the operator."

MINES TO REOPEN

Montana Coal Pits Shut Down 10 Days in Strike.

Billings, Mont., December 15.—(AP) Coal mines in Montana, shut down for the last ten days as a result of the refusal of union miners to accept a wage reduction of $1.20 a day, will be reopened Monday, the Coal Operators' association announced today.

The statement followed one by the officials of the United Mine Workers of America that the new contract involving the wage cut had been accepted by the miners in a referendum yesterday. Two weeks ago the workers voted not to accept a wage reduction.

The basic daily wage scale under the new contract which becomes effective Monday will be $7.19. The agreement will run until June, 1933.

Escaped Convict, Declared Dead In 1920, Found

Stettin, Germany, December 15.—(AP)—A counterpart of Tolstoy's "living corpse" was found in real life today in the person of a fisherman known as Funke, in the little village of Goerke. He was identified by the Stettin police as Otto Bornemann, who had escaped from prison in 1920, and been pronounced dead when a body taken from the Spree river, near Berlin, was identified as his a few days later.

The records showed that the body had been identified by members of Bornemann's family. There was the further circumstance that some of his papers were found on it.

The alias was not discovered until a stepdaughter chanced to visit Goerke a few days ago. She at first thought that the fisherman was a double of her stepfather, but seeing him a second time she became sure of his identity. He was married in the village about six years ago and is the father of five children. His first wife lives in Berlin.

Carolina's Timber, Uncut, Estimated 13 Billion Feet

Raleigh, N. C., December 15.—(AP)—North Carolina's total stand of available saw timber is estimated at approximately thirteen and one-half billion board feet in figures made public today by the state department of conservation and development, which has just completed a survey of the state's timber resources.

About two-thirds of the state is forest land. The survey places the timber acreage at 21,200,821 acres of a grand total of 31,193,600 acres in the state.

The annual production of lumber in the state is placed at 1,342,000,000 board feet by 2,140 sawmills. Returns to timber land owners from the annual cut of stumpage is estimated at $7,270,000, exclusive of timber cut for fuel use only.

Millionaires' Yachts In Jacksonville Being Prepared for Cruising

Jacksonville, Fla., December 15.—(AP)—Yachts of a dozen or so millionaires were to be found in Jacksonville's harbor today. Most of them were being prepared for the winter's cruising in Florida waters.

The largest of the fleet, the Warrior, said to be the largest diesel engine-propelled pleasure craft in the world, was anchored in midstream. The Warrior is reported to be carrying its owner, Charles A. Whalen, president of the United Cigar Stores, on the first leg of a scientific voyage through Florida waters this year.

Other craft in the harbor are owned by Atwater Kent, radio manufacturer; W. J. Matheson, Miami; P. O. Richmond, New York; Alfred I. Dupont; K. L. Ames and Leon Cheek, Jacksonville; Horace Dillman, Palm Beach, and others.

17-Year-Old Boy Makes Successful Continental Flight

Curtiss Field, N. Y., December 14. (AP)—Richard James, 17-year-old pilot, today completed a transcontinental flight begun October 30 in San Francisco.

James made the flight to win a $1,000 prize offered for the first pilot under 18 years of age to fly a plane alone across the country.

Several forced landings were made on the journey.

Carroll, Neptune of Bath Tub, Is Again in Boiling Water As Tabs Loose Publicity Tide

Former Unwilling Resident of Atlanta Charged With Subjecting Girls to Inspection in Altogether

BY MORRIS DE HAVEN TRACY.

New York, December 15.—(United News.)—Earl Carroll, New York revue producer, most of whose fortune and all of whose troubles seem traceable to the eternal feminine, tonight stood ready to collect either in dollars or in worries, from his latest brush with pretty girls.

Carroll still denies that chorus ladies seeking employment from him have been required to throw open their pretty little artists' smocks, like the girl did years ago with the bear skin robe when "The Common Law" was the current scandal of the stage and take three steps forward and three backward with nothing to protect them from his appraising gaze. But Miss Ann Moss Gaynor, who unquestionably is a very beautiful brunette, and Miss Louise Blakeley, whose blonde prettiness is a decoration to any place she may be, are equally insistent that that is just what Carroll requires.

And it has made them pretty mad.

No Charges Lodged.

So mad, in fact, that they were to lay their cases before the Chorus Girls' Equity association, an organization designed to protect the rights of girls who dance and sing for the entertainment of New York. The Equity told them to see District Attorney Joab B. Banton.

But today a canvass of all involved indicated nothing had been done. Banton's office thought that some sort of a complaint might have been lodged in a magistrate's court, but nothing had reached there. No magistrate's court could be found harboring in its files any dark charges against Carroll—who first came into court some three years ago when Joyce Hawley went bathing in his bath tub full of champagne.

Brother producers became duly incensed. Such people as Arthur Hammerstein, Flo Zeigfeld, who knows something about girls of the chorus himself, George White, whose "Scandals" are pretty good for sore eyes, and Sam Harris, who also knows a thing or two himself, all gave out statements saying that if what the girls said about Carroll's methods were true, it was pretty shabby business. They all had picked a lot of choruses in their time and they never did anything like that.

Carroll Denies Practice.

So Carroll himself got into the statement business and said:

"As to the facts of the matter, there are fifty girls in the 'Vanities' and twice as many more still rehearsing in 'Fioretta' who will, under oath, bear out my claim that no one in my companies has ever been humiliated or embarrassed in the slightest degree in rehearsals or throughout the performance."

Miss Blakeley, however, was ready to stand by her original stories, which she says is a facsimile of what poor working girls waiting jobs with Carroll are expected to do.

She said she was doing pretty well working in the chorus of another show, but she was attracted by Carroll's broadcast appeal for more and prettier chorus ladies. She was told to come over to Carroll's office for an interview, she said.

Wear Only Smocks.

It looked to her like everything was all fixed up except for signing the contract, when she was informed she must pass Carroll's inspection.

"This little lady will take care of you," she said she was told and she was escorted away by a smiling young thing, herself a member of the chorus. The "little lady" carried a smock under her arm and Miss Blakeley said she was asked to disrobe and don the smock.

"The lady opened her smock and showed me that it was all she had on," said Miss Blakeley.

"'Do this,' she said, throwing open the smock, 'and then walk in front of Mr. Carroll, taking three paces forward and three paces backward. That's all. It's just to show him you're not padded. Don't be afraid.'"

Miss Blakeley said she never had done that for anyone else and she told the "little lady" she would not do it for Carroll. So that ended the interview and Miss Blakeley and Miss Gaynor, who told the same story, went right over to the Equity and now the tabloid newspapers are full of the story.

If the whole thing is really going to be taken seriously, then maybe Carroll will have some more unpleasantness attributable to the eternal feminine.

In the meantime his shows are doing a fine business and he seems to have no trouble retaining chorus girls. But of course, on the stage they are not asked to throw open their smocks. They don't wear any.

WORLD AIR MEET ENDS AFTER SHOW AT BOLLING FIELD

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—The International Civil Aeronautics conference, called by President Coolidge to provide opportunity for an exchange of ideas among aviation leaders of the world 25 years after the first flight by the Wright brothers, was concluded today with an air show at Bolling field.

Army aircraft from Bolling field and others from the naval air station entertained members of the conference for an hour with stunts and a display of combat formations.

Charles A. Lindbergh, a delegate to the conference, hopped off alone for an unannounced destination shortly before the start of the show. Many conference delegates will go by steamer to Kitty Hawk, N. C., where they will participate Monday in ceremonies commemorating the first airplane flight by Orville Wright in 1903. Wright, honored guest of the conference, is expected to join the Kitty Hawk pilgrimage.

KELLOGG TREATY "FUTILE GESTURE," IS BRUCE OPINION

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—The Kellogg peace treaty was assailed in the senate today by Senator Bruce, of Maryland, a democrat, as "a stab in the air" and "a futile gesture," but the senator declared in the end that he would vote to ratify the pact. He declared that it seemed to him a step toward entrance of the United States into the world court and the League of Nations and added that he would therefore "under the determining influence of this thought, vote in favor of ratifying the mighty, multilateral Kellogg peace pact."

"May the prayers of the pious" said the senator, "induce heaven to prosper us far beyond my present expectations."

NO BARS ON PLANES UNTIL AMERICANS CAN HANDLE LIQUOR

Miami, Fla., December 15.—(AP)—Not until the American traveling public gets so it "can handle its liquor" will bars, such as those in use on international air liners in Europe, be installed on Pan-American Airways planes between ports south of Havana, V. E. Chenea, assistant general traffic agent, said today. Smoking aboard passenger planes leaving Miami for Caribbean ports is allowed by law but discouraged, not because of danger, but out of consideration for non-smoking passengers.

Haverty Company Fairyland of Greenery And Blazing Lights as Christmas Nears

Above, a general view of the spacious ground floor of the Haverty Furniture company, banked in greenery and blazing with colored lights.

At right, an effective feature of the store's Christmas decorations—Santa Claus on his throne at the entrance to the store's toy department.

Transformed into a veritable bower of winter greenery that sparkles with miriads of tiny colored lights, the Haverty Furniture company's big building at Edgewood avenue and Pryor street is one of the most beautiful Christmas stores in Atlanta.

Every column on the spacious first floor bears a blazing Christmas tree, and the Yuletide scheme of decorations is carried out throughout the store and even in its big display windows.

One of the chief attractions of the store is its toyland, where on Mondays and Saturdays Santa Claus pays visits and chats with all the visiting kiddies concerning the items they wish for their Christmas stockings this year.

L. A. Witherspoon, general manager of the Haverty company, estimated Saturday that more than 1,000 electric lights of every hue wink and shine among the many Christmas trees of the spacious main floor. In addition to providing a gorgeous setting for Christmas shopping, the store's decorations are doing much to promote the beautiful spirit of Christmas, when all the world should be at peace and charity should reign supreme.

Buried Treasure Of $6,000 Dug Up On Court's Order

Nashville, Tenn., December 15.—(AP)—A search for buried treasure climaxed a contested will case in Davidson county probate court today.

Jean Hager, Sr., who buried the treasure of $6,000 beneath his house at 1024 Seymour avenue, was compelled to unearth it by order of County Judge Litton Hickman.

Accompanied by two deputy sheriffs and two attorneys, Hager led the way to the treasure trove, in the basement of his home. He vigorously applied a spade to a pile of loose dirt at the rear of the furnace.

Less than six inches from the surface, his spade struck a cigar box. He carried it out to a light, saying, "Here it is!" and it was. There were three $1,000 bills and thirty "century" marks. Hager counted the money carefully, and turned it over to officers. Judge Albert Williams and J. J. Hooker, opposing attorneys, looked on with an amazed silence.

In less than three minutes after entering the basement, the five men left with the treasure and collection of cobwebs.

Jean Hager and Carl Hager, Sr., were left the estate of their stepfather, J. L. Mosley. A paper was filed ten days after Mosley's death, purporting to be a codicil to the will, leaving Carl Hager as sole heir.

Jean Hager said he believed the money rightfully his, and that caused him to remove it from the vault and bury it.

Judge Hickman named the American Trust company as administrator of the estate, until the contest is decided. The sheriff is holding the money until the bank qualifies as administrator.

FASCISTS' ROTARY REBUKE SURPRISE TO BODY OFFICIALS

Chicago, December 15.—(AP)—Officials of Rotary International, whose headquarters are here, were surprised today to hear that the secretary of the fascist party in Italy had issued a circular which, they said, was derogatory to Rotary.

Dispatches from Rome declared Augusto Turati, secretary of the fascist party, had informed provincial secretaries that all fascists who wore the Rotary emblem instead of the fascist seal should be admonished or disciplined.

"Evidently Turati is laboring under a misapprehension," Chesley Perry, executive secretary of the international organization, declared.

"There is absolutely nothing in the Rotary code or makeup inimical to fascism, or in fact, to any other government. We have about 25 clubs with a total of 2,000 members in Italy. The king of Italy, Victor Emmanuel, is our honorary district governor there and Prince Ginori Conti, of Florence, is our active district governor."

15-CRUISER BILL NEXT ON CALENDAR FOR SENATE ACTION

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—The senate steering committee recommended today that the bill for construction of 15 cruisers and an airplane carrier be taken up after the prison labor measure, now pending, is disposed of.

Next in order, as recommended by the committee, would be the Caraway bill to prevent the sale of cotton and grain in future markets, followed by a measure by Senator Jones, republican, Washington, providing for certain amendments to the prohibition act.

The committee recommended that appropriation bills should have the right of way at any time over pending business.

Simplicity Proves Problem :: HOOVER IDEA HITS WASHINGTON SNAG :: For Inaugural Committee

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—Conforming a hospitable, congenial city's idea of a three-day presidential inauguration celebration with President-elect Herbert Hoover's cabled request that the performance be one of "simplicity" is the task that confronts the special inaugural committee which is working hard on its March 4 party.

Hoover expressed his desire that the ceremony be no more elaborate than that of President Coolidge's in 1925. So the committee, under the leadership of Colonel U. S. Grant, has started making plans that are just a little more elaborate than the functions arranged four years ago, in the hope that Hoover will permit some deviation from his informal statement on the matter.

Washington is all set to show the thousands of visitors who are expected a good time—to the extent of a $100,000 guarantee by business men to defray the deficits if any.

For three days the national capital will be decorated, entertainment will be almost continuous, and guests need never have a dull moment if the plans now under consideration are carried out with Hoover's sanction.

The Saturday and Sunday preceding Monday the fourth will be given over to sight-seeing trips, aviation contests, pageants, field meets and general good-will gatherings, all arranged by Colonel Grant's committee.

On Monday the formal inaugural parade will be the chief attraction after the formality of swearing in the new president at the capitol. Major General Anton Stephen, who is chairman of the parade committee, hopes that students from the two service schools, Annapolis and West Point, will be in the line of march, as well as boys from several other military schools, troops from near-by army camps and representatives of patriotic organization, such as the G. A. R., Spanish war veterans, American Legion and the D. A. R.

Members of the committee are frank in expressing their hopes that Mr. Hoover will consent to an inaugural ball, though the place for such an event is one of the problems that has not been solved. All previous balls have been held in the pension building, the only place in Washington large enough to accommodate the average 25,000 that have attended the balls in earlier years. But the expansion of government activity in the pension building and the necessity of securing congressional permission to use it for the dance makes the business of clearing it out very formidable.

However, if the inaugural ball is found to be out of the question, there will be a charity ball at one of the hotels for the benefit of the children's hospital.

Both the senate and the house of representatives will have members named to cooperate with the general committee in making arrangements. Representatives Snell, New York, and Dyer, Missouri, republicans, and Representative Pou, democrat, North Carolina, have been named by Speaker Longworth to serve on the house committee.

REICHSTAG CLOSES BAR TO PREVENT SOLONS NODDING

Berlin, December 16 (Sunday)—(AP) For the first time since 1902 the reichstag convened early this morning in a midnight deliberation which was dubbed the "seltzer water session." This was caused by the order of President Paul Loeb to prevent the members from becoming drowsy from consumption of alcoholic beverages, for the reichstag lunchroom to dispense no beer or wines after the meeting convened.

The early morning session became necessary because the economic party, following upon failure to obtain additional representation on certain committees, voted against a third reading of the supplementary budget bill immediately after the second reading on Friday. The reichstag rules specify that if there is objection to an immediate third reading the bill cannot be taken up again until the third day. Since the reichstag wished to adjourn for Christmas holidays, it decided to hold its final meeting of the year five minutes after midnight this morning.

The body presented an unusual picture, many members having first attended social functions and appearing in full dress or tuxedos.

GLIDDEN PAINTS USED IN MASTER DWELLING

Paints and varnishes manufactured by the Glidden Company were used exclusively in The Constitution's Master Model Home at 705 Morningside drive.

There are eleven Glidden factories: one in Cleveland, two in St. Paul, three in Chicago, and one each in San Francisco, Reading, New Orleans, St. Louis, and Toronto, Canada. The company has 38 warehouses conveniently located throughout the country. Each of the factories is equipped with the most modern and efficient type of power machines for the measuring, mixing and grinding of raw materials. This, together with paint mills of the latest design, complete piping and conveying equipment, and modern buildings, aid in the company's ability to produce both in quantity and quality.

The Glidden company also controls its own oil refineries, lithopone plant, lead corroding unit, and operates its own zinc mines and smelters.

Through its control of raw materials, its numerous warehouses and factories, its modern buildings and equipment, it is possible for the Glidden company to produce the best paints and varnishes that finest raw materials and equipment can produce.

Double Story Portico Marks Southern Colonial

Mount Vernon, so beautifully situated with its widespreading lawns, is a nationally known example of southern colonial architecture. Although these southern mansions were invariably built on ample plots of ground, because plenty of land was available, a large estate is not essential. Modern adaptations of this style can be found in many of our suburbs, nestled pleasingly in the green shrubbery.

The distinctive two-storied portico is the feature of this style of house. The tall slender columns may be either round or square. The column caps may be gracefully carved or molded according to the taste of the owner and skill of the craftsman. The cornice surmounting the columns will offer opportunities for architectural detail of more than average merit with graceful moulding, delicate modillions and a balustrade with interesting pattern. The roof may be flat or the portico may be covered by the main roof. The floors of porticoes of this nature are invariably placed at grade level, allowing people to step directly onto the lawn. Because of the exposed location open to elements, floor material should be durable; stone, tile, brick or cement offering a wide range of texture and color.

The house plan does not vary from the colonial precedent. The central hall opens into living rooms on either side. An attractive stairway leads to the sleeping quarters above. The second floor rooms on the front are shaded by the portico roof and should not depend exclusively for light upon the windows in this wall. The wall and ceiling of the portico should be finished in light color and the portico itself kept shallow.

Improved Designs Mark New Models Of Lavatories

Dressing Table Combination With Gold-Plated Fittings and Glass Legs Offered.

Beyond the element of color, three departures mark the newer models of lavatories. One of these has to do with design. The style factor has entered the bathroom and one can now obtain lavatories which harmonize in form with both bathtubs and closets. An agreeable unity is given to the bath when these three fixtures show a harmony of line.

Fittings also distinguish the newer lavatories. Most of the exposed area of the fittings on top is covered with china. This eliminates need for keeping metal cleaned or polished. A chromium plating is also used; this retains a permanent luster. Design has been improved and fittings are available in hammered brass, bronze, gold plate and copper finishes, including panels.

The sphere of usefulness of the lavatory has been extended through the combination with it of a dressing table. These models have roomy tops, 36 inches long and 20 inches wide. Oval bowls are 19 by 12 inches. Support is given by strong wall hangers and legs of clearest crystal with metal tops. They are equipped with special fittings that harmonize with the lavatory design.

Enameled iron lavatories range in price from $15 to $150. Those of vitreous china run up to $1,000; they are made by the same process that is used for making the finest table ware. Acid resistance is given to them by a finish of potters' glaze. This quality is also given to those of enameled iron by the use of a special acid resisting enamel.

IL DUCE GETS JOBS BACK FOR 30 GIRLS FIRED FOR WEDDING

Milan, Italy, December 15.—(AP)—The newspaper Il Secolo said today that intervention by Premier Mussolini had saved 30 telephone operators their jobs. The girls were discharged when they disobeyed the rules of the company by getting married. The premier heard of the discharges and asked officials to reinstate the operators. The rules have now been modified to permit any employee to marry.

Graduated Blend Good For Dignified Rooms

Among the several varieties of glazing and mottling there is no finish more attractive than the graduated blend. A single color may be used over a plain background, or harmonizing colors such as red and yellow.

The color is always deeper and more intense near the bottom of the wall, fading out gradually toward the ceiling. Where dignity and distinction are required, the Tiffany blend is especially appropriate.

ALLEGED DOPE AGENT ON TRIAL WEDNESDAY

Unger, Charged as Rothstein Confederate, Returned to New York.

New York, December 15.—(AP)—Joseph Unger, alias Meyers, alias Klein, will go on trial Wednesday as one of the leading figures in an international narcotics syndicate believed to have been financed by Arnold Rothstein, slain gambler.

By that time investigation may have disclosed who the man really is behind those shielding aliases.

Government officials believe that establishment of Unger's true identity will be a sensational revelation of a double existence lived on widely separated levels of society.

United States Attorney Tuttle questioned the man today after he was brought back from Buffalo, where he was arrested a week ago while trying to take two trunks containing $2,000,000 worth of narcotics from New York to Chicago.

"I do not believe his name is Unger any more than it is Meyers or Klein," Tuttle said after this interview. "In fact, I am startled with the thought of the type of man that I believe this miscreant to be."

Unger protested against being photographed by news cameramen and Tuttle said he thought this was because he feared that the pictures would reveal the secret of his double life to associates and acquaintances who knew him only as a man of high education, unimpeachable honesty and lofty morals.

At Unger's arraignment trial was set for Wednesday and bail of $100,000 was continued.

In his interview with Tuttle the prisoner said that he never knew Rothstein, though it was notations in the gambler's business files that led to the arrest of Unger and seizure of the narcotics. He also denied knowing Mrs. June Boyd, of Chicago, held as a material witness against him and mentioned in his indictment as a conspirator with him to violate the narcotics laws.

While prosecutor and defense counsel are marshalling witnesses and preparing their cases for the Unger trial, hearing will begin Monday in the contest of Rothstein's will by his relatives. The first to testify will be two hospital nurses whose names appear on the will, signed only with a cross, as witnesses.

There appeared to be a possibility today that the will contest might prove to be a battle for a non-existent prize. There have been unconfirmed reports that the temporary administrators will announce the value of the gross estate as $3,200,000 and the net $1,800,000. To this was added another rumor today that the gross estate, as so estimated, consists almost entirely of unpaid gambling debts with no collateral and no legal means of collection.

FARMER KILLS DEPUTY AND SHOOTS OWN WIFE

Kentucky Man Surrenders; Says He Apprehended Pair in Auto.

Frankfort, Ky., December 15.—(AP) Orie Dennis, 42, Franklin county deputy sheriff, is dead; Mrs. Campbell Marshall is in a Frankfort hospital with three bullet wounds, and her husband, a retired farmer, is in jail as result of a shooting affray near here last night.

Marshall surrendered to police, telling them that he had wounded his wife and Dennis, who were in an automobile. He is being held by city police under a charge of "shooting another with intent to kill," pending a preliminary hearing.

Mrs. Marshall by means of a street car and taxicab was able to make her way to the hospital.

Motorists found Dennis lying by the side of the road and rushed him to the hospital. He died early this morning. Mrs. Marshall is expected to recover.

Dennis is survived by the widow and four children. He was a candidate for county sheriff at the next election. The Marshalls have two young children.

Marshall has refused to make a statement.

BERMUDA AIRLINE VIA BIG SEADROME SEEN BY NEXT YEAR

Washington, December 15.—(AP)—An airline, operating between Washington and Bermuda via a huge seadrome to be constructed at a cost of $1,500,000 may become a reality by late next year.

E. R. Armstrong, of Wilmington, Del., designer of a seadrome, announced today that financial support for the undertaking had been obtained but he did not reveal from what source.

Under present plans the seadrome, a floating landing field, will be anchored halfway between the terminals and it is eventually contemplated to build others to be stationed at 500-mile intervals for trans-Atlantic use.

The announcement was made after Mr. Armstrong had shown to members of the international civil aeronautic conference a motion picture displaying a model of the seadrome. The seadrome will be 1,200 feet long and 200 feet wide, with additional space at the center for buildings.

'Atlanta From the Ashes'

:: IVAN ALLEN'S BOOK PAINTS VIVID PICTURE ::

Graphic Tale of City's Rise

Revealing a story so marvelous that it reads like fiction, Ivan Allen, prominent Atlanta business man and official of the chamber of commerce, has prepared a book entitled, "Atlanta From the Ashes," which tells in graphic detail the story of Atlanta's progress since the city was burned by federal troops during the War Between the States.

"In 1864 the city of Atlanta lay a smoking ruin," is the first sentence in the book and from that introductory down to a description of Atlanta advantages as an aviation center is the scope of the volume which was published by the Ruralist Press, of Atlanta, in a limited edition for private circulation by the author.

Presented to Executives.

In his introduction, Mr. Allen declares that it is his intention to present the city of Atlanta to the executives of American business and how well he has succeeded in this task is shown by the first cursory examination of the book. It is a complete exposition of the business progress of Atlanta from the days of ashes to the present day of greatness. It is a revealing story of a city's amazing progress against many almost insurmountable obstacles and contains a mass of information which evidently required tireless energy and a marvelous comprehension of the city resources to compile.

The volume is copiously illustrated. By drawing, by maps, by reproduced photographs and by numerous charts Mr. Allen tells a convincing story of the achievements of this city.

Advantages Pointed Out.

Detailed information is given concerning Atlanta's advantages as a transportaiton center; of Atlanta's industrial resources, of the mineral districts surrounding the city, of water power resources, pure water, resources in schools and other institutions, invaluable information to industrial men concerning the industries of the city and surrounding territory. Full chapters are devoted to Stone mountain, the printing and publishing business; the resources of the state in ceramics, the furniture manufacturing business, banking and financial facilities, public parks and playgrounds, hotels and theaters, various civic and industrial organizations; postal and express facilities, labor conditions, chemicals and minerals, the textile industry, the lumber industry, hydro-electric developments, the city's traction systems, highways and highway developments and numerous other important city assets.

Atlanta's strategic location as a distributing point is stressed and a chart is printed which shows that 18,000,000 people can be reached overnight from Atlanta and 70,000,000 can be reached in 24 hours. Charts also show the vast growth of general manufactures, of agricultural progress, telephone and telegraph resources, and of resources in raw materials. There also is a chapter discussing taxation as it affects industrial development.

The book is bound in durable black cloth and embossed in gold letters.

$9,500,000 Mailed To Rocky Mountain Growers of Beets

Denver, December 15.—(AP)—Rocky mountain beet growers today began reaping a "golden" harvest. Checks totaling more than $9,500,000 were in the mails for producers in Colorado, Nebraska, Montana and Wyoming. The Great Western Sugar company was the heaviest purchaser of the beets, having sent out checks totaling $9,305,000 yesterday. This company has paid out approximately $24,000,000 to the growers this year, of which $14,500,000 went to Colorado farmers.

BIRMINGHAM AX MAN BELIEVED APPREHENDED

Negro, Armed With Hatchet, Caught as He Flees Woman's Room.

Birmingham, Ala., December 15.—(AP)—Police here are investigating in an effort to determine whether Lonnie Taylor, negro, caught as he was leaving the home of Mrs. Mattie Souder early this morning is connected with other attacks reported in various parts of the city recently.

Mrs. Souder told police that a negro, whom she later identified as Taylor, climbed through a window into her bedroom and threatened her with instant death if she cried out. He was armed with an ax, she said.

The woman told officers the negro fled when the lights of an automobile shone through the window. He was run down and captured by Harry Smith, a salesman, who saw him leave the house. The ax was found outside the window. Taylor has refused to make a statement, police said. He is held on a charge of felony.

Saturday morning's intruder was the second "ax man" case reported this week. Mrs. J. L. Williams reported to police that a negro carrying an ax entered her home in the East Lake vicinity Wednesday afternoon and threatened her with death if she summoned help. He left she said, after taking $25.

A score of deaths have occurred at the hands of alleged "ax men" here in several years, many of the cases still remaining unsolved.

JURY PUZZLED OVER DEATH OF MOTORIST

Henderson, Ky., December 15.—(AP) After investigating the mysterious death of Ben T. White, Jr., found lying beside his car near the city limits today, a coroner's jury returned a verdict that White "came to his death from a broken neck, the cause unknown to the jury."

White, an automobile dealer, was lying in the roadway beside his car, with a jack under his body. A tire on the car was partly deflated, but was not punctured. One theory is that he was lifting the car when the jack slipped and the car struck him, killing him.

Friends of White, however, point out that the jack was not raised, and expressed the belief that White had been killed and his body placed so as to allay suspicion. This theory was strengthened by the fact that White's revolver was found lying on the seat of the car. Blood on the dead man's shoes also seemed to indicate he had been dragged to the position in which he was found.

Testimony at the inquest was that White's neck and jaw had been broken. In one pocket he had a $2.50 gold piece and two dimes, but his wallet, in which friends say he usually carried a large sum of money, was empty.

Friends believe White proffered a ride to a stranger, who killed and robbed him.

Dye Suits Dismissed.

Wilmington, Del., December 15.—(AP)—In the United States district court here today Judge Hugh M. Morris handed down decrees dismissing the suits in equity of German dye companies against the E. I. du Pont de Nemours and company and Frank White, as treasurer of the United States, and also an interlocutory decree in the suit of the Chemical Foundation, Inc., against the same defendants.

COAST SCHOONER REPORTED OVERDUE

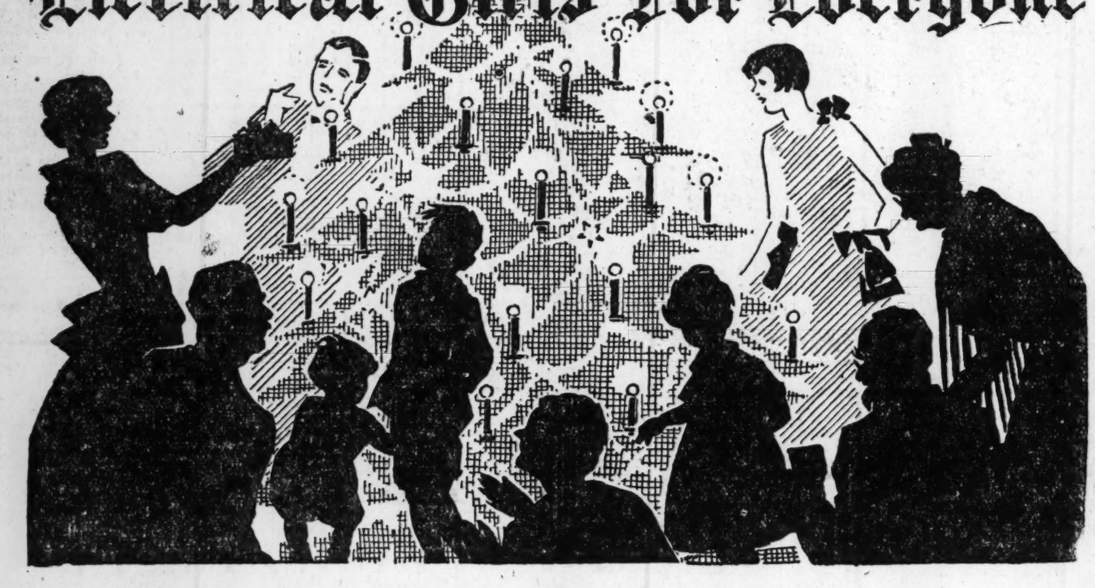

Norfolk, Va., December 15.—(AP)—The coast guard today was asked to keep a lookout along the Atlantic coast for the schooner Albert F. Paul, which left New York on November 23 with a cargo for Charleston, S. C., and has not been heard from since. She is several days overdue.

The schooner, a 175-foot craft, carries a crew of eight men and is owned by C. C. Paul, of Baltimore.

Scientific Farming Proves Profitable Under System Obtaining in Big Business

Experience on 7,500-Acre Plantation Shows Corporations Can Succeed With Modern Methods.

Champaign, Ill., December 15.—(AP) After four years of managing 32 farms in central Illinois under a practical business system, Joseph J. Johnson, director of the farm management department of a Champaign bank, today expressed the view that agriculture would eventually come under control of corporations or expert managers.

His outlook is similar to the new idea expounded at the convention of the American farm bureau federation this week where cooperative production played a prominent part in discussions of farm relief.

Mr. Johnson, as farm manager of the Champaign bank, controls the operations of 7,500 acres on the 32 farms of this model "corporation." All are operated by tenants of the land owners in cooperation with Mr. Johnson.

When a farm takes over the Johnson system, a map of the property is made, soil tests conducted and a building and equipment survey taken. Then a five-year program of crops rotation is laid out, built chiefly around a big profit crop which in this region is corn, and including complete refertilization of the soil during the five-year period.

Under the system, the tenant-operator receives one-half of all crops produced, the remainder going to the owner.

As an example of how the Johnson system functions, the 320-acre farm owned by W. R. Chambers in Champaign county was cited. This farm during the last five years showed a net return of $19,620.14, amounting to 6.13 per cent on the investment, and the figures, complete in every detail of modern big business cost-finding, include interest, depreciation and labor.

This farm was on a five-year rotation of oats, wheat, corn and soy beans. During this time, the oats averaged $7.73 per acre; beans $14.16; wheat $16.33 and corn $19.31. All grain was marketed at regular market prices, but the yield was about 25 per cent higher than the average Champaign county farm.

Johnson said it cost on the average farm $26 to produce 40 bushels of corn per acre which sold for $28 while the Chambers farm spent $29 per acre to produce 70 bushels which sold for $49.

ATLANTA SHOPPERS WARNED TO WATCH FOR PICKPOCKETS

The Christmas holidays provide an open search for shiplifters as well as shoppers, Chief of Detectives A. Lamar Poole said Saturday in issuing instructions to his men to be on the lookout for thieves in department stores and other crowded downtown shops.

"There are a certain number of artful persons who hope to get their Christmas goods each year without paying the price," Chief Poole said. "Though most of the larger stores have employed extra detectives for the rush season, many stores are too small and their income too low to employ detectives at all and we want to give them all the protection possible."

Chief Poole also announced that all available detectives and plainclothesmen would be kept in the business district until after Christmas.

"Pickpockets hope to thrive during the holiday season as well as shoplifters," the chief said. "We usually keep Atlanta pretty well cleaned of these gentry but the lure of the crowd at this time often is too great for them so I plan to have a reception committee of bronze badged men waiting for all of them we can find."

EXTRA AIL MAIL SERVICE OFFERED DURING CHRISTMAS

Additional air mail service on three of the four routes centering at Atlanta has been authorized for the two days preceding Christmas, according to information received Saturday by Postmaster E. K. Large.

A round trip service on the New York-Atlanta line for Sunday, December 23, has been authorized, planes not usually making this trip on Sundays. Southbound trips between Atlanta and Miami and Atlanta and New Orleans will be made Monday, December 24, and northbound trips from these cities will be made on December 23. No change will be made in the usual daily trips on the Chicago route.

MATE OF WOMAN KILLER, SUICIDE IS HELD IN JAIL

Canton, Ohio, December 15.—(AP)—At the request of Coroner T. C. McQuat, Wilbur O. Heldman, who said his young wife killed a Canton coal dealer and a week later ended her own life, today was committed to the county jail for further questioning.

Both the coroner, however, and Sheriff Ed Gibson said they had no reason to doubt Heldman's story that his wife, Margaret, 21, put a bullet through her heart on the outskirts of the city Thursday night while he was bringing her here from Lorain to answer for the slaying of Vernard F. Fearn, 35, on December 6.

TWO CAIRO LODGES ELECT NEW OFFICERS

Cairo, Ga., December 15.—(Special.)—Two Cairo lodges have elected officers for the ensuing term.

The Dixie lodge No. 150, Knights of Pythias, chose E. C. White as the new chancellor commander, with the following other officials:

Vice chancellor, N. E. Pipkin; prelate, Joe T. Davis; master of works, Neel Edwards; master of arts, J. W. Thomas; inner guard, N. W. Maxwell; outer guard, W. L. Connell; keeper of records and seals, L. G. Merritt, reelected; master of exchequer, C. E. Mauldin, reelected; three-year trustee, C. L. Browne, reelected.

The Cairo chapter, No. 163, Royal Arch Masons, has reelected C. L. Browne as high priest, with the following officials:

King, I. A. Baggett; scribe, C. H. Stewart, Pine Park; principal sojourner, P. W. Bussey; captain of hosts, H. H. Wind; royal arch captain, J. C. Thames; master, first veil, Dr. J. V. Rogers; master, second veil, W. M. Crew, Whigham; master, third veil, J. Q. Smith; sentinel, J. H. Miller; and secretary and treasurer, P. — Blackman.

ATLANTA MAN ELECTED TO STATE ROAD GROUP

Macon, Ga., December 15.—(AP)—Men from all parts of Georgia who met here Saturday as the state roads financing committee elected Judge Harry B. Reed, of Waycross, as chairman, and after recognizing the necessity of obtaining paved highways with the least possible delay, adjourned to reconvene at the call of the chairman.

After the election of Judge Reed as chairman, Walter B. Stewart, Atlanta, vice chairman, and T. H. Halliburton, Macon, secretary, a presentation of the survey recently made by the Macon Chamber of Commerce was presented and the meeting was thrown open for discussion.

The sense of the meeting which was expressed in resolutions before adjournment was that "some road building plan" ought to be presented. A definite plan, however, was felt to be prerogative of the legislature.

Sub-committees will be appointed to study the plans at present suggested for financing the building of roads. One of these, appointed Saturday, will confer with the January meeting of the committee from the county commissioners to have the benefit of the findings of that committee. This sub-committee is composed of the following: E. B. Dykes, Vienna; Cecil Neill, Columbus; Shelby Myrick, Savannah; Hamilton McWhorter, Oglethorpe county, and W. H. Key, of Jasper county.

Although a date for the general meeting was not set, approval was given to the plan of holding such meeting to give expression to a program.

Regrets were received from several members who were unable to attend on account of sickness in their families or from other unavoidable cause. Judge Reed could not be present. In his absence, Mr. Stewart, vice chairman, presided. T. J. Hamilton, editor of the Augusta Chronicle, and R. B. Russell were also prevented from attending.

Those present were E. B. Dykes, president of the senate; Cecil Neill, former speaker of the house and senator-elect from Muscogee county; Shelby Myrick, state senator, from Chatham county; Walter Stewart, Atlanta, chairman of the Fulton county commissioners and president of the Georgia Association of County Commissioners; W. R. Bowen, state senator, Fitzgerald; R. F. Burch, legislator, Eastman; W. H. Key, Monticello, senator from the twenty-eighth district; J. W. Culpepper, representative, Fayetteville; Hamilton McWhorter, Lexington, state representative. Frank Turner, of Blythe, was added to the committee and others will probably be added by the chairman before the next meeting, it was said.

Ancient Copies Grier's Almanac Are Being Sought

Few anniversaries take one back further into the mists of colonial times than that of Grier's almanac, which with 1929 celebrates its 120th year. Grier's almanac is the second oldest almanac on the American continent.

The esteem with which all class of people in the south regard Grier's almanac is largely accounted for in the fact that the almanac since its inception has striven to be of genuine service to every class—the farmer, doctor, lawyer, merchant and housewife of the southern states. For more than 100 years it has annually carried the port calendars of the southeastern states, together with a wealth of useful knowledge. Its calculations have been accurately made by men of scientific training.

Otis Ashmore, who has compiled Grier's almanac since 1882 and who still makes its calculations, is one of the most distinguished educators in the south. For more than 20 years he was superintendent of public schools of Savannah, and no man is more widely known or loved in the south than he.

The publishers are for the first time offering prizes in gold for the oldest copies of Grier's almanac still extant. It is definitely known that several copies of the edition of 1837 are treasured by southern families. Yellow with years, these old copies have been put in secret hiding places, in old trunks, among family heirlooms, or are taken from cornerstones of public buildings that have served their day and time.

The publishers want to ascertain if copies dated prior to 1837 are still preserved intact, and if so to have the oldest forwarded to them to be photographed. $50 in gold is offered for the oldest copy prior to 1840, and $40 for the next oldest.

Only three men in all its long history of 120 years have made astronomical calculations for Grier's almanac. Robert Grier, the founder, undertook this work until approximately 1840. Thomas P. Ashmore followed from that date until 1882, when Otis Ashmore, of Savannah, took up the work. Copies of the almanac are now being distributed in cities and through the rural districts.

EMORY FRESHMAN TALKS OVER AIR WITH BYRD PARTY

Through 10,000 miles of air and over a dozen countries J. M. Eubanks, Emory freshman and amateur operator of the station W-4SI, early Saturday morning "talked" with the operator aboard the City of New York, Byrd antarctic expedition ship in the storm-tossed, icy waters of the Ross sea.

After giving a personal message to be relayed to Mrs. Ralph Hoff, at Mobile, Ala., the expedition operator, who signed the initials G. L., held a few minutes of informal "conversation," during which he said, "One of your fellow citizens of Atlanta just left our ice-bound cabin. He is Sidney Gleason, former steward at the Atlanta Athletic club, and now steward with our party. He wishes all of his Atlanta friends a very merry Christmas."

Eubanks also "conversed" with the Eleanor Bolling, another Byrd expedition ship, and received from her operator the same story of icebergs, wind and waves aplenty.

Following Eubanks' communication with the ships Fred Holliday, another amateur, operating his own station, W-4RN, at 75 Twelfth street, established a connection with the boats and in the course of his "work" took more than 35 personal messages from members of the expedition and will forward these messages.

Intimate Gifts of Infinite Charm

Silk Pajamas, $9.95

—Pajamas with mind intent on a holly box and ribbons red and someone's sheer Christmas stocking. Of soft crepe de chine, Vionnet neckline edged with Duchesse-patterned lace. Trousers edged with lace. Pastel shades.

Others priced $5.95 to $25.

Negligees, $15.95

—It matters not her age or station . . . if she's feminine . . . and loves loveliness . . . she can't resist this bit of wild violet silk with ostrich floating gently as clouds from sleeves and neck. Other shades of flesh, orchid, turquoise, coral.

—Other negligees priced $9.95 to $39.75.

Teddies, $4.95

—Very much the sort of teddies that Yvonne, from Paris, would choose. The sort, too, that American Jane (whose name is plain but whose heart is spangled with frivolity) will want for Christmas! Of crepe de chine with Alencon lace and pleated skirt in the French manner.

—Other Teddies $2.95 to $19.95.

Silk Gowns, $5.95

—Perhaps she wouldn't mind sleeping a hundred years (like the Sleeping Beauty) if she wore a gown like this! Of crepe de chine with Breton lace yoke, silk girdle, hemstitched hem. Pastel shades.
—Others priced $3.95 to $39.50.
—Dance Sets of Crepe de Chine. French panties or step-ins with matching bandeaux, $1.98 to $5.95.

Negligees, $25

—Frankly, this negligee looks like the rosebud pinkness and billowy laciness of a bride's trousseau! Of pink satin crepe with wide winged sleeves of chiffon veiling, with creamy lace trailing down the front. Others priced $29.95 to $39.95.

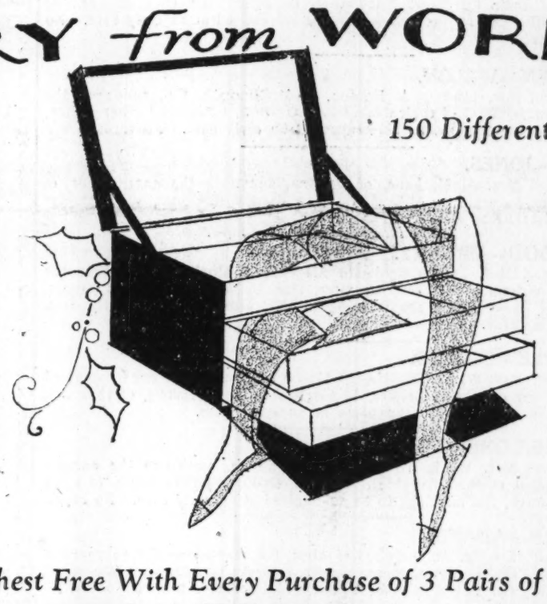

Ensembles, $15.95

—For a young someone who reads "India's Love Lyrics" and who lives in imagination with "lotus buds that float." Bizarre pajama ensemble—Rayon jacket and trousers of electric blue. Coat of exotic Oriental pattern.

Miss Stephenson and Mr. Cassidy Wed at Lovely Home Ceremony

Quiet dignity characterized the marriage of Miss Gulie Stephenson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Stephenson to Harry A. Cassidy, which was solemnized at 5:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the home of the bride, 742 Boulevard, N. E. The Rev. R. Z. Tyler, pastor of the Grace Methodist church, performed the impressive ring ceremony in the presence of a representative gathering of relatives and friends.

Artistic Decorations.

The home was artistically decorated for the occasion with red poinsettas and garlands of southern smilax which was used effectively to encircle mantels and chandeliers. The improvised altar in the living room, where the service was performed, was banked with palms and ferns against which tall floor baskets of white chrysanthemums, interspersed with cathedral candles stood in bold relief. A program of nuptial music was rendered preceding the ceremony, "At Dawning" and "To a Wild Rose," forming a dulcet-toned accompaniment to the marriage vows. Lohengrin's wedding chorus was used as the processional and Mendelssohn's march as the recessional.

Little Miss Jennie Ragan, acted as flower girl, scattering from a dainty French basket, rose petals in the path of the bride. She wore a charmingly youthful model of yellow georgette. The radiantly beautiful bride, who entered with her only attendant, Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick, was met at the altar by the groom and his brother, Edward Cassidy, who acted as best man. Miss Kilpatrick wore a French model of King's blue chiffon, fashioned along graceful lines and offset at the shoulder and waist line with effective pearl buckles. Her hat was a becoming model of blue and silver. She wore a corsage of pink radiance roses.

The Lovely Bride.

The bride, who was never more lovelier, wore a model of brown transparent velvet fashioned along graceful lines. A feature of the dress was the smart diagonal neck line which was softened by a standing collar of real lace. She wore a shoulder bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home. After the wedding trip, upon which the young couple left afterward, they will make their home at 536 Clifton road.

Mrs. Cassidy, who is a graduate of Girls' High school, having later attended Agnes Scott college, is a popular member of the young set of Atlanta. Mr. Cassidy is a promising young business man, holding a responsible position here with the Southern Bell Telephone company.

Clarke - Fisch Wedding Plans Are of Interest

Cordial interest centers in the announcement of the wedding plans of Miss Katherine May Clarke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Harvey Clarke, to Howard William Fisch. The marriage will be solemnized at 6 o'clock Thursday evening, December 20, at the home of the bride-elect's parents on Shadow Lawn avenue. The Rev. R. W. Oakey, pastor of the Peachtree Road Presbyterian church, will perform the impressive ring ceremony in the presence of a representative gathering of relatives and friends.

Miss Clarke has chosen as her maid of honor Miss Elizabeth Murphy. The sister of the bride-elect, Mrs. W. T. Russell, of Salisbury, N. C., will act as the matron of honor. Frasier Law, of Birmingham, Ala., will be the best man.

Following the ceremony the young couple will leave for a wedding tour to Cuba, Bermuda and New York, after which they will make their home on Wesley avenue, Atlanta.

Miss Clarke, who is a popular member of the younger set of Atlanta, has been entertained at a round of prenuptial parties. Her marriage is of interest to a wide circle of friends.

Miss Montgomery Honors Bride-Elect.

Miss Eleanor Montgomery entertained Saturday afternoon at a lingerie shower in honor of Miss Lucile Roper, a charming bride-elect of January.

Miss Montgomery was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. H. C. Montgomery, and her sister, Mrs. W. H. Skeels, Jr.

The guests invited were Misses Lucile Roper, Martha Spivey, Thelma Ewing, Katherine King, Mary Felton, Mable Perkins, Clara Bell Lemke, Bertha Green, Margaret Matthews, Rebecca Hargrove, and Mesdames W. D. Roper, Hubert Roper, W. C. Horne, J. Radford Higgins, William Hargrove, Neil Cheek, E. E. Ewing and Jimmy Bush.

Miss Sarah Turner Entertains at Home.

Miss Sarah Allen Turner entertained Saturday evening at a bridge party at her home on Piedmont avenue, assembling a congenial group of friends. Christmas decorations were artistically arranged throughout the home. Miss Turner wore a becoming model of brown satin offset with touches of silver.

The guests included Misses Frances Gorman, Suzanne Memminger, Mary Blackwell, Virginia Combs, Hilda Mitchell, Marcia Baker, Lamar Dryman and Phoebe Rogers.

Camp Fire Girls Hold Open House For Xmas Dolls

The Atlanta District Camp Fire Girls will hold open house for the Christmas dolls which have been dressed for the poor, at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, December 18. All Camp Fire Girls, parents and friends are invited to visit headquarters during the afternoon. The top shop is being sponsored by the Atlanta Georgian-Sunday American, and hundreds of toys have been distributed through agencies operating in the Chest to needy families.

The Owakica group of Girls' High school will have an all-day meeting Saturday, December 22, at which time they will assist in filling stockings for the Labor Temple Christmas tree. They will also take part in the program by singing Christmas carols.

The Owakica group will give a candy pulling Thursday afternoon, December 20, at 2:15 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Carl Karston, 650 Killian street. Tickets may be obtained from Camp Fire headquarters and from members of the Owakica Camp Fire group. Many beautiful articles have been made by the girls registered in the handicraft class, conducted by Mrs. H. D. Oliver. Each Saturday morning Mrs. Oliver has met with the girls and given instruction in oil painting, gesso, opaque water color, and novelty gifts.

Miss Thompson Weds Charles A. Patterson.

Mrs. Ora F. Thompson announces the marriage of her daughter, Annie Ray, to Charles A. Patterson December 8. Mr. and Mrs. Patterson are at home at 722 Ponce de Leon circle, N. E.

Mr. and Mrs. Askew Entertain at Home.

Eighty guests assembled Saturday evening at the bridge party at which Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Askew entertained at their home, "Asquelon," on Peachtree road. The lovely home, which was thrown en-suite for the occasion, was effectively decorated in holly wreathes and Christmas greenery.

Mrs. Askew was assisted in receiving by her daughters, Misses Gertrude and Mary Askew, and her sons, Walter and Wilburn Askew. Mrs. Askew wore a becoming model of black velvet heavily beaded and offset with a shoulder bouquet of orchids. Misses Mary and Gertrude Askew wore dresses of blue and pink tulle, respectively, fashioned over satin of the same shades.

Committee Will Consider Work Of League of Women Voters

A special committee to meet, study and recommend plans for the program of work and the budget for the coming year for the Atlanta League of Women Voters has been called by Mrs. Alfred Bailey, president. This committee will hold its first meeting Tuesday, December 18, at 10:30 at league headquarters, where it will formulate recommendations to be presented to the newly elected board of directors at its January meeting. At Tuesday's meeting appointment of a chairman of general arrangements for the annual convention of the Atlanta league, to be held in January, will be discussed. The choice of a committee to serve with this chairman will also be a subject for discussion.

Christmas Party.

In accordance with a custom inaugurated some years ago, the Atlanta league will give a Christmas party Monday afternoon, December 31, at its headquarters in the Candler annex. This party is in the nature of an office supply shower, and the guests are asked to bring Christmas gifts which will make the office more comfortable and well equipped. A Christmas tree will be an attraction of the affair, and Mrs. R. E. Rollins, chairman of hospitality, will be in charge of refreshments.

Mrs. Bailey calls to the attention of league members the short time left in which they may pay poll tax. December 19 is the final date for payment of this tax at the Fulton county courthouse, and after that time, an additional amount must be added to the regular tax as a penalty for delay.

Information Bureau.

The Atlanta league has secured from the national league kits of information on the following subjects: The multilateral treaty, the lame duck amendment, Muscle Shoals legislation and maternity and infancy legislation. These measures will command the major attention of league members during the current short session of congress, as selection of the measures was made by the board of directors for the national league meeting in Washington for its semi-annual sessions. Any member of the Atlanta league who wishes to do so may buy for a small sum any one or all of these kits of information, which should prove invaluable as a means of gaining a knowledge of proposed legislation along the lines mentioned.

Mrs. Harvey Payne, chairman of membership, urges all members whose dues are payable in December to send their checks to league headquarters without delay, in order that last year's membership record may be equaled. Mrs. Payne points out that many persons are not informed on the qualifications for league membership, and states that any woman interested in the non-partisan phase of politics, who wishes information on local and national issues, candidates or legislation, may become a member of the Atlanta league by payment of $1 annual dues. All members receive the league's official publications, Facts and the Georgia Voter.

Social Notes From Avondale Estates.

Mrs. J. C. Richardson entertained with a luncheon Friday at her home on Kensington road. Covers were placed for Mrs. J. E. Dozier and Mrs. R. C. French, of Avondale; Mrs. Samuel Senter, Mrs. John M. Daniel, Mrs. Edgar Dunlap and Mrs. Addison Maupin, of Atlanta.

Mrs. R. H. Robinson, of Dartmouth road, entertained Tuesday with a bridge-luncheon at the Community club. The Christmas colors of red and green were used effectively in the decorations. Mrs. Robinson's invited guests were Miss Lottie Smith, Mesdames G. H. Rover, William Rogers, E. W. McKenzie, S. W. Florence, W. C. Wilson, S. G. Gilbreath, H. C. Antrim, E. H. Henshaw, T. W. Oastler, J. E. Okell, R. M. Niel, C. W. Baker, P. C. Hearle, B. H. Biggers, Norman Browne, W. O. Parker, J. E. Pounds, H. B. Hogan, P. B. Hicks, G. H. Myshrall, Edwin A. Smith, C. L. Henry, I. T. Catron and J. L. Bond, of Avondale; Mesdames Harry Boon, W. F. Kimberly, Thomas Newberne, W. Durden, J. C. Kell, E. D. Kitchen, L. J. Halderman, George Stinsman, C. A. Adair, R. S. Mell and J. W. DuBose, of Atlanta. On Friday Mrs. Robinson was hostess to her two-table bridge club at her home when she entertained with a bridge-luncheon. Covers were placed for Mrs. Harold Hogan, Mrs. S. W. Florence, Mrs. C. L. Henry, Mrs. E. W. McKenzie and Mrs. W. H. Goulder, of Avondale; Mrs. J. Taylor and Mrs. L. J. Halderman, of Atlanta.

Mrs. Robert Coleman and father, Frank Stewart, have returned to their home in Savannah after visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Richardson, of Kensington road.

Miss Hilda Wilson, of Laurel, Miss., and Miss Jane Broadhurst, of Americus, who are attending Shorter college, were guests for a brief visit of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Beall, of Fairfield drive. Mr. Stokes, Rufus Godwin and Mr. Drohomer, of Atlanta, entertained them Saturday evening with a dinner party. Miss Mary Elroy, of Palisades road, was their hostess Sunday evening, and Mrs. Beall will entertain them Monday with a luncheon before they leave for college.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Wilson, of Kensington road, had as their dinner guest Tuesday evening Mrs. Wilson's brother, Russell Deupree, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Mrs. Helbig Issues Article On Needlework Guild

Mrs. Edwin M. Helbig, chairman of publicity for the Atlanta branch of the Needlework Guild of America, sends the following article in recognition of the splendid cooperation of the Atlanta public, the merchants, and the press in helping to make this a banner year:

"The officers of the Atlanta branch of the Needlework guild desire to take this means of publicly thanking the Atlanta friends who so generously responded with garments and money in the recent collection and distribution of new garments for over forty social agencies in our city. A total of 9,411 garments was gathered and distributed. One outstanding feature this year was the excellent quality of all garments. In addition to the regular institutions benefitted by this collection the Henrietta Eggleston Memorial hospital, Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children, and St. Vincent De Paul were added to the list.

"Two new sections were formed this year, the members displaying much enthusiasm and promising to increase their number of garments next year. The Auxiliary to Railway Mail association, Mrs. G. W. Harlan, president, gave for the first time this year, and Mrs. Alonzo Richardson's Sunday school class developed from a directorship into a full section. Section No. 20, Mrs. W. H. Moor, president, led in the number of garments, there being over 1,600 in all. An invalid wishing to help this worthy cause made 79 little dresses for girls while propped up in her bed. Section No. 35, the Buckeye Woman's club, led federated clubs in the city by giving 550 garments. The Kentucky club came second. In the Woman's Benefit association, also in the Kentucky club, there was marked increase of garments over last year.

"The annual collection and distribution took place at the home of Mrs. S. B. Mitchell, 1140 Springdale road, N. E., in a systematic and business-like manner. Mrs. George S. Bell has worked with the Needlework guild for many years and is known as 'The Stocking Lady,' since her especial duty is to sort the hose. Mrs. Bell felt she could not stay away this year, so made a special trip to Atlanta from Cincinnati in order to answer 'Here am I.' The Needlework guild affords a real opportunity for community service and is one of the most worthwhile activities in the country on account of its far-reaching charities. Let us begin now to think of the collection for 1929 and let us bend every effort to help clothe those less fortunate in our midst."

League of Voters, Board Holds Interesting Meet.

The recent meeting of the executive board of the Georgia League of Women Voters, at which were present women prominent in civic activities throughout the entire state, reflected the excellent service which the league is doing the citizens of Georgia. Among those attending the meeting were Mesdames Wellington Stevenson, W. A. Ozmer and A. J. Woodruff, of Decatur; Emmett Quinn, Alfred Bailey and R. L. Turman, of Atlanta; John Morris, L. L. Hendren, of Athens; Lamar Rutherford Lipscomb, of Lakemont, and Frank Dennis, of Eatonton.

Mrs. Lamar Lipscomb made a report which showed excellent plans for organization in the ninth congressional district, of which she is state chairman. She plans to appoint a chairman for each county in the district, and to conduct through them study groups and citizenship classes.

Mrs. Frank Dennis, of Eatonton, was introduced to the members of the eighth congressional district.

Mrs. L. L. Hendren, of Athens, made a report to the executive board.

At its recent state convention, the Georgia league adopted, as part of its program of work for the coming year, the simplification of state government. In order to make information on this subject available to every member of the league, as well as to others interested in the subject, Mrs. Hendren is making up a kit, containing information pertaining to simplification of government which will serve students of the question as a complete text. It is expected that the kits will be completed at an early date.

Among the most interesting affairs of the Christmas holiday season will be a dance given in honor of the newly-elected officers and directors of the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce by this organization Thursday evening, December 20, from 9:30 to 1 o'clock at the new Brookhaven Capitol City Country club. Baxter Maddox is president of this organization. A number of special added features and acts have been secured and the committee in charge promise a most entertaining event as well as a dance.

The present officers and directors extend a cordial invitation to all members and their friends to attend this annual Christmas dance of the organization and bid the old officers a happy farewell and welcome the incoming officers. Others invited include Mayor and Mrs. I. N. Ragsdale, Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Clarke Howell, Major and Mrs. John Cohen, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Daragan, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin S. Barker, Mr. and Mrs. William Candler, Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Alston, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Russell, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Beall, Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Bowdon, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Cator Woolford, Henderson Hallman and members of the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce.

The committee in charge includes Joe W. Ray, chairman; Luther S. Turner, vice president; Chatty Sullivan, M. W. Middleton, Roy Freeman, Henry Turner, George B. Yancey, Jesse Webb, Jim Goldwin, E. M. Strubinger, Frank Hill and Harry McDonald.

Miss Oliver and Mr. York Wed At Beautiful Home Ceremony

Mrs. Rodolph Silas Oliver, of Plains, announces the marriage of her daughter, Frances, to Waldo Cornell York, of New Bedford, Mass., the ceremony having been beautifully solemnized at 6:30 o'clock Saturday evening at the home of the bride's brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Hunter Jeter, on Sycamore street, in Decatur. The marriage service, which was witnessed by a group of relatives and close friends was read by the Rev. Dr. Plato Durham.

Floral Decorations.

A charming arrangement of palms and flowers adorned the lower floor of the handsome home, the ceremony taking place before an altar formed of palms and cathedral candelabra holding tall white tapers, floor standards filled with stately calla lillies standing in relief against the background of green. Floor baskets holding the same lovely lilies, combined with trailing ferns, flanked either side of the mantel and the stairway down which the bridal party descended.

In the dining room, the exquisite floral decorations were of small yellow rosebuds and valley lilies, the lace-covered table being centered with a plateau of these blossoms. Silver candlesticks held pale yellow tapers and the mints and ices were embossed with valley lilies and yellow rosebuds. A two-tiered wedding cake adorned with tiny love-birds and butterflies and resting in a circle of roses and valley lilies graced one end of the table, while coffee was poured from a handsome silver service at the other end.

The nuptial music was rendered by Miss Leila Hardaman, pianist, and little Miss Frances Collins, violinist. Mrs. E. L. Spann, of Plains, and Mrs. P. H. Graves, of Neosho, Mo., twin sisters of the bride, rendered a vocal program, including "At Dawning" and "All For You."

The bride's sister, Mrs. P. H. Jeter, was her matron of honor and only attendant. She was a charming figure wearing a gown of transparent velvet in tones of rose and silver, fashionably draped and caught with a rhinestone buckle at the left side of the waistline. An arm bouquet of Radiance roses in a deep shade of rose completed her costume.

Beautiful Bride.

The lovely young bride entered with her brother, R. S. Oliver, Jr., of Jacksonville, Fla., by whom she was given in marriage. Sidney Whittier, brother-in-law of the groom, acted as his best man.

Softest ivory-tinted satin combined with delicate rose point lace fashioned the bride's lovely costume which was modeled along straight lines, especially becoming to her slender, graceful beauty. A bertha of rose point lace outlined the batteau neckline, the skirt introducing a cascade of rose point down the left side. A court train of satin fell from the shoulders and the bridal veil of tulle was worn confined by a becoming, close-fitting cap of rose point lace, caught at either side with tiny clusters of orange blossoms. A gorgeous bouquet of white orchids and valley lilies completed the bridal ensemble, the bride's only ornament being a necklace of beautifully-cut crystal, a gift from the groom.

Receiving the guests with the bride and groom and Mr. and Mrs. Jeter were the bride's mother, Mrs. R. S. Oliver, of Plains, and Mrs. George York, of New Bedford, Mass., mother of the groom.

Mrs. Oliver was handsomely gowned in black chiffon velvet with a trimming of duchess lace. Her flowers were a shoulder spray of white orchids.

Mrs. York wore for the occasion a gown of gray transparent velvet and a shoulder bouquet of lavender orchids.

Mrs. P. H. Graves, sister of the bride, wore a bouffant gown, combining a close-fitting bodice of cerulean blue satin with a skirt fashioned entirely of blue tulle ruffles. Her flowers were pink rosebuds.

Mrs. E. L. Spann was an attractive figure wearing rose chiffon and a shoulder bouquet of pink roses and valley lilies.

Following the ceremony, supper was served. Mrs. Sidney Whittier, sister of the groom, poured coffee.

Wedding Journey.

Later in the evening Mr. York and his bride left for an extensive wedding journey, after which they will be at home in Squantum, Mass., where the groom is prominently connected with the New England Power Construction company. Mrs. York traveled in a smart ensemble costume of gray tweed, fashioned with a satin blouse of the same shade and worn with a becoming black felt hat.

Among the guests from a distance who attended the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Ross Dean, of Plains, uncle and aunt of the bride; Edward Oliver, of Birmingham, Ala., and R. S. Oliver, Jr., of Jacksonville, Fla., brothers of the bride; Mrs. E. L. Spann, of Plains, and Mrs. P. H. Graves, of Neosho, Mo., sisters of the bride; Mrs. R. S. Oliver, of Plains, mother of the bride; Mrs. George York, of New Bedford, Mass., mother of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Whittier, of Chattahoochee, Ga.; Miss Margaret Hudson, Mrs. Maryl Campbell, Mrs. B. J. Wise and Mrs. Sam Burgin, all of Plains.

Mrs. York is well-known in Atlanta, having graduated from Agnes Scott college, and having spent much time as the guest of her sister, Mrs. Jeter. She is the youngest daughter of Mrs. R. S. Oliver, and possesses unusual personal charm in addition to a keenness of intellect and broad culture attained through study and travel. A wide circle of friends in the city and throughout the state will be interested in her marriage to Mr. York, representative of a prominent New England family and widely known in the power construction field.

Mrs. Slaton To Present Pupils in Recital.

Mrs. Ruby James Slaton will present her pupils in recital Tuesday evening, December 18, at the auditorium of the School Administration building. The program includes selections for one and two pianos, duets, 8-hand numbers with violin obligato and violin solo.

Pupils from Anne Bowie School of Expression, who will add variety to the occasion, are Miss Elizabeth Haines and Dan Scarborough. Two of Mrs. Slaton's pupils, Misses Rosebud Leide and Susie Johnson will act as ushers and distribute programs. Little Misses Lela Landers and Margaret Nall will assist.

Pupils to be presented are: Misses Verdery Rosenbusch, Barbara Baker, Lois Sachs, Jewel McNair, Helene and Dorothy Saunders, Louise Stieglitz, Laura Lee Langley, Mildren Lester, Frances Lyle, Lucile Eberhart, Louise and Jessie Carroll, Catherine Weaver, Mary Burnette, Mesdames Walter Withers, Reppard Landers and C. O. Lyle.

Winthrop Alumnae Give Xmas Baskets.

The Winthrop alumnae met Friday, December 14, at the home of Mrs. Aubrey Motz, 30 Avery drive, with Mrs. R. L. Russell, joint hostess.

The chapter is studying wild flowers under the able leadership of Mrs. H. H. Hirsch, who gave a talk on general types of flowers and how to identify them. As a part of the regular study of the chapter, Mrs. E. C. Palmer, read a paper on the ancient civilizations, taking up their influence on the history of women. In accordance with the practice of the chapter since its organization, plans were made for distribution of Christmas baskets. Food, clothing and toys will be donated by the different members.

The next meeting will be held January 11 with Mrs. H. C. Savage and Miss Mary Fletcher hostesses.

Miss Raine Weds Mr. Wardlaw At All Saints Church Ceremony

The marriage of Miss Ednabelle Miller Raine and William Clark Wardlaw III, was solemnized with impressive dignity yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in All Saints' Episcopal church on West Peachtree street, with Dr. W. W. Memminger, rector of the church, officiating, the ceremony being witnessed by a fashionable assemblage of relatives and friends. Palms and ferns decorated the chancel and vases filled with gorgeous white chrysanthemums adorned either side and the center of the altar, alternating with seven-branched candelabra holding white tapers. A program of appropriate musical selections was played by the organist, and the bridal chorus from "Lohengrin" was played as the processional, while Mendelssohn's was used for the recessional.

Briday Party.

The ushers included Joseph B. Cumming and Henry W. North, Jr., of Augusta; J. Field Wardlaw, of West Palm Beach, Fla.; Charles A. Shepard, of Winterville, Ga.; Joseph S. Raine, Jr., Marion N. Watson, of Montgomery, Ala.; George B. Raine and Cleveland R. Wilcoxson.

Misses Hortense Adams, Perkins, Angel Allen, Mamie Raine, sister of the bride; Clara Cole, of Newnan, and Mary Hall Tupper, of New Orleans, the bride's cousin, were the charming group of bridesmaids. They wore gowns of chartreuse green chiffon, the bodice being extremely plain, introducing a deep V-neckline, and long sleeves, while the skirts were made of three-tiered circular ruffles, introducing the uneven hemline at one side, while the belt was caught on the shorter side with a rhinestone buckle. Completing the costumes were chartreuse green felt hats, the brims wider in the back than in front, trimmed with a matching velvet ribbon bow, and the green satin pumps matched the gowns. They carried shower bouquets of Claudia Pernet roses.

Miss Dorothy Raine acted as her sister's maid of honor, and she was gowned in maize-colored chiffon made with a plain bodice, deep V neckline and long, tight-fitting sleeves. The skirt was fashioned with three circular ruffles made very much longer on one side, while on the shorter side the belt was fastened with a rhinestone buckle. The brim of her maize felt hat was wider in the back and a matching velvet bow trimmed the hat at the left side. She wore maize satin pumps, and carried a shower bouquet of Claudia Pernet roses. Jack Donovan acted as best man for Mr. Wardlaw, and the groomsmen included Stephen Barnett, Jr., Charles T. Nunnally, Jr., Albert Davis, John Young, Henry Watkins, of New York city, and Charles Harris and Wylie Arnold, of Charlotte, N. C.

Lovely Bride.

The radiantly lovely bride was given in marriage by her father, Joseph Shelton Raine, Sr., with whom she entered the church, gowned in her bridal robes of antique satin, the long, tight-fitting bodice introducing a yoke of rose point lace, and long sleeves. The full circular skirt touched her ankles, and the four-yard length train began at the waistline in the back of the gown, introducing an exceedingly graceful effect. A misty tulle veil was arranged over the face of the fair young bride, and was confined to her hair with clusters of orange blossoms, while a veil of princess lace covered the long train, and was caught underneath the orange blossom bandeau at the back of her head. White satin pumps completed the costume and she carried a bouquet of pink orchids and valley lilies, showered in fragrant valley lies. Her white satin pumps were embroidered in pearl design, and her only ornament was a diamond and platinum brooch, the gift of the groom.

Mrs. Joseph Shelton Raine, Sr., mother of the bride, was gowned in black and gold metal cloth, and her black soleil felt hat was faced with cream lace, and she wore a shower bouquet of orchids and valley lilies.

Mrs. William Clark Wardlaw, the the groom's mother, was handsomely gowned in burgundy red transparent velvet, trimmed with ecru lace, worn with a black felt hat, and her shoulder bouquet was of valley lilies and orchids.

Mrs. John H. Raine, aunt of the bride, wore black velvet trimmed with rose point lace, and her hat was of black velvet. Mrs. Joseph Shelton Raine, Jr., was gowned in black chiffon velvet, and her black velvet hat was ornamented with a rhinestone pin. Mrs. Marion Watson, sister of the bride, wore green chiffon and her hat was of black velvet.

Wedding Journey.

Mr. and Mrs. Wardlaw left immediately after the ceremony for California, from whence they sail Thursday, December 29, on the steamer Matsonia, for Honolulu, where they will spend a month. On their return to the United States they will proceed directly to Baltimore, Md., where they will reside at Wyman Park apartments. Mrs. Wardlaw traveled in a sports costume of brown jersey and her hat was of brown felt. Her brown broadcloth coat was lined with brown fur, and finished with fur collar and cuffs.

Out-of-Town Guests.

The out-of-town guests included Mrs. Albert May, Mrs. Lewis Butt, Mrs. L. P. Goodrich, Mrs. John Moore, Miss Katherine Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Martin, Miss Louisa Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Cumming, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cumming and Henry North, all of Augusta, Ga.; Charles Harris and Wylie Arnold, of Charlotte, N. C.; John Young, of New Orleans; Henry Watkins, Jr., and Mrs. Henry Watkins, of New York; Mrs. Bessie Shepard, Miss Gertrude Shepard and Charles Shepard, of Winterville, Ga.; Mrs. W. H. P. Shepard, of Charleston, S. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Field Wardlaw, of West Palm Beach, Fla.; Miss Harriet Wardlaw, of Washington, D. C.; George Bardwell, of Newport, Tenn.; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cole, of Newnan; Mr. and Mrs. John Boston, of Marietta, Ga.; W. L. Platt, of Havana, Cuba; Miss Clara Cole, of Newnan, and Miss Mary Tupper, of New Orleans.

Judaean Council Gives Chanukah Program

The Young Judaean council will sponsor a Chanukah program Sunday, December 16, at 3 o'clock at the Jewish Educational alliance. An entertaining program has been arranged, including a Chanukah play, "Sorority," to be presented by the members of the F. O. J. Young Judaean club.

There will be an oratorical tryout to choose an Atlanta representative for the southern interstate oratorical to be held in Savannah December 30. Miss Ozna Tontack will be presented with a medal which she won as the southern representative to the national oratorical contest. Chanukah gifts will be presented to the children.

Miss Turner Entertains At Bridge Party.

Miss Sarah Allen Turner was hostess at a small bridge tea yesterday afternoon from 4 until 6 o'clock at her home on Piedmont avenue. The guests included Misses Mary Blackwell, Marcia Baker, Hilda Mitchell, Phoebe Rodgers, Suzanne Memminger, Virginia Combs, Frances Gorman and Lamar Dryman. Mrs. Allen Turner assisted her daughter in entertaining.

"THE STYLE CENTER OF THE SOUTH"

AS FOUR WOMEN HEAR IT

WHEN THE former Miss Venice Mayson sailed away last April, as the bride of Captain Philip Frye, U. S. A., such a charmed life awaited her in the far-away Philippines that a recent letter to her life-long friend, Mrs. Fleming Law, reads like a page from "Aladdin's Lamp." Though well within the tropical zone, Mrs. Frye has not found the weather at Fort McKinley, which is only six miles from Manila, as warm as it is in Atlanta in mid-summer. Occupying a charming bungalow consisting of four rooms and a bath, she finds one room always cool, she says, and the others bearable as long as she stays motionless. "One room would make two of a room in the states, and they are all very much open to the public gaze as well as the breeze. The windows are all made of small squares of shell," she writes, "about a hundred squares to a window and are more ornamental than transparent; but are never closed except when a typhoon is blowing up. A porch all around my house is my great joy."

"My kitchen force is composed of three Filipinos of varying ages and styles," continues Mrs. Frye. "I must draw you pictures! Filemon, my pride and joy, is about as big as a good-sized dwarf with an overgrown head. But oh, that head! He plans orders, cooks, and makes delicious rolls and cakes. Alfonso, the house boy, corresponds to a maid, and is most collegiate with his skull cap and bare feet. He dresses up to serve meals, however, putting on heelless shoes and a shirt with the tail on the outside, then he's ready for the best." She makes Atlantans envious by stating that chickens are from 25 to 40 cents apiece, and small turkeys are quite obtainable, for $1.50 each. She thinks longingly of home shops for lettuce is all brought from the states and she pays from 50 to 75 cents a head. Behold Domingo, the lavendero or washwoman! She is the queerest combination I've ever seen, arriving every morning with her Spanish shawl draped around her, only to put it aside and tie a crazy looking skirt around her waist, step out of her shoes and start smoking her after breakfast, handmade cigar. The whole force affords lots of amusement but they all work hard and get results.

"I can stand most anything but the house pets, little white lizards which cling gaily to the walls and ceilings and enjoy mosquitoes and gnats. I had one to lose his balance and fall on my back—I'm still a nervous wreck. Another time a baby one landed on the table during dinner. I haven't enjoyed a meal since, but I am told this always happens when one first arrives, never to the old-timers.

"I wish that we comfort-loving Americans could build houses as easily and as cheaply as these natives do. All their houses, not in the city limits of Manila, are built of nipa grass, high up on poles and, of course, with thatched roofs. The life of one is about three years, so one gets a new house before he tires of the old. I was driving back from Manila last week and had to stop to let a house go across the road. Twenty natives had picked it up bodily and were carrying it to another spot."

In conclusion, Mrs. Frye says that Manila is quite lovely in spots and in others quite overpowering with an everpresent odor of garlic which is beginning to deaden her sixth sense. Captain and Mrs. Fyre are in quarters very near Captain and Mrs. Fielder. Mrs. Fielder having been May Crichton, of Atlanta, and with her little daughter, May Crichton, the third, makes up a part of the Georgia contingent in the island possession.

OFF TO THAT sun-bathed island of enchantment, Hawaii, Mr. and Mrs. William Clarke Wardlaw, the third, will sail on the steamer Malolo, on Christmas day, to enjoy the season of springlike beauty where moonbeams are warm and generous, and just exactly the right spot upon which to spend a honeymoon. After taking their marriage vows in All Saints Episcopal church yesterday afternoon, the lovely little bride changed from her gorgeous wedding gown of antique satin entirely enveloped in a misty tulle and real lace veil, to don her stylish traveling gown, a two-piece sports model of brown and biege jersey, worn beneath a brown broadcloth coat, lined throughout with kangaroo fur to match the deep collar and cuffs. Idiosyncrosies of the mode demand that brown suede shoes, hose, pocketbook, gloves and the most becoming brown soleil felt hat matched the outfit. When the piquant bride promenades the deck she will find delight in the green jersey sports costume, topped with a warm cloth coat, checked in two tones of green worn with a decidedly smart green felt hat with a turned-down brim, and ornamented with a gold arrow, while green suede pumps will encase her Cinderella-like feet. So carefully did she select her trousseau, that these same shoes and hat will blend harmoniously with the modish green gown of flat crepe, with insouciant pleats introduced in the skirt, in which she will appear well-groomed upon a thousand and one occasions while visiting tropical climes.

A well-chosen evening gown in which Mrs. Wardlaw appeared to wonderful advantage the evening of the church rehearsal for her wedding the following day, was developed in apple-green moire taffetas. Its tight-fitting bodice fitted to perfection her slender figure, and the full skirt was looped up at one side with a large pink taffeta bow shirred in the middle with long tapering points cascading into graceful drapery. Night robe ensembles and pajama ensembles lending charm to leisure hours, prove essential to every wardrobe, and two very handsome sets were noted in this special trousseau. One had a Pullman car coat of dark blue brocade, to be worn over coral-colored satin pajamas, while the other coat was of black panne velvet brocaded on chiffon and lined with pink chiffon, to be worn over pink satin pajamas edged with black lace to form an attractive color combination. This last named ensemble was the handiwork of Mrs. Joseph Shelton Raine, Sr., the bride's mother, whose exquisite needlework was again found in the bridal lingerie of white satin and rose point lace, and the lovely fluttering rose-colored crepe de chine, elaborately trimmed with Alencon lace. A gown of liberty blue flat crepe, one of black flat crepe, were accompanied by close-fitting hats to match, and there were other costumes suitable to this marvelous wedding journey to the isle of infinite charm.

ARRIVING DURING the forthcoming week will be a pair of charming sisters, Misses Sarah and Ethel Kunzig, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., to visit their maternal aunt, Mrs. Inman Sanders, out on Peachtree road. Atlanta-born though she be, their lovely young mother, the former Miss Ethel Gay, left her native heath to reside in the east, following her romantic marriage to her schoolgirl sweetheart, Philip Kunzig. Their return to this city will be the reason d'etre of a whirl of social functions planned after next Friday, as they arrive at Brookwood station on December 21, and enter upon the holiday festivities the day afterward, when Mrs. Sanders gives a luncheon for her attractive nieces.

The elder of these divinely fair and most divinely tall sisters, Miss Sarah Kunzig, attended Mount Holyoke in North Hadley, Mass., and is a schoolmate of Miss Florence Trumbull, fiance of John Coolidge, who was graduated from this particular college last June. Her name and gracious presence will be added to the debutante coterie, as she is to be presented to Atlanta society while visiting Mrs. Sanders. The younger Miss Kunzig is enrolled at Wellesley as a member of the junior class, with one more year added to her education before she returns to her ancestral home in the south to meet her mother's friends, those of her own youthful set, and those of her grandmother, beloved Mrs. Edward S. Gay, Sr., around whose fireside on Currier street her children, her children's children, and their children, will foregather this year to wish her "Merry Christmas."

ONE OF THE most distinguished hostesses ever to give tone and standard to society here is Mrs. William Simpson Elkin, who entertained at an elegant reception last Thursday at the Piedmont Driving club in honor of her niece, Mrs. Edward Chester Barnard, of Washington, D. C. The ballroom, with its profusion of exquisite red roses, the fragrance of which permeated through every corner of the clubhouse, garlands and wreaths of smilax, and clustered palms and evergreens, was transformed into a veritable fairyland. The alabaster-like walls and white columns were offset by the crimson brocade draperies hung at the window, while Christmas wreaths, tied with red ribbons, adorning the walls on either side of the broad fireplace, heralded the approaching Yuletide.

It was a perfect stage setting for the handsome women in their smart and colorful gowns of velvet, chiffon and flat crepe. Mrs. Elkin, one of the most popular and fascinating women in Atlanta, who is extremely handsome, always dresses in the most perfect taste, and possesses delightful poise and cordial graciousness. She wore a stunning gown of much distinction, fashioned from gold-colored lace, the design threaded in gold, and exuding Parisian chic. A close-fitting black velvet hat framed her lovely face, and she stood in the center of the ballroom before a background of palms, beside her attractive, vivacious niece, Mrs. Barnard, who was handsomely costumed in brown velvet worn with matching hat of velvet.

Crimson roses and gleaming silver in charming array over the patchwork lace cloth rendered the tea table a scene of beauty and elegance, the tempting display of good things to eat recalling former days and other parties before it became vogueish to starve oneself into a sylphlike figure and menus for afternoon teas, included hors d'oeuvres with pate de foie gras, steaming hot creamed oysters in pastry shells, sliced turkey, cheese-stuffed celery, crisp salads and the richest of pastries and ices. Just such delectable viands were served to Mrs. Elkin's guests and so alluring were the huge platters and trays that more than one Atlanta matron forgot her rigid diet with complete disregard for an added measure in avoirdupois. Other tables banked in fragrant crimson roses and flanking either side of the ballroom, held immense silver punch bowls and silver coffee urns, these also redolent of the days when punch was more than fruit juices sparkling with charged waters and a dash of cognac added just the right flavor to a cup of coffee.

A WEDDING to be solemnized out in Calcutta, India, commands the attention of Atlanta society in the alliance of Miss Betty Sharp, daughter of Mrs. W. Willoughby Sharp, of New York and a former Atlantan, to Neil Lewin MacDonald, a dashing young Scotsman, on Friday, December 21. Miss Sharp and her mother, who resides at Natural Bridge, Va., sailed for India last week, much to the sorrow of her New York friends, who are legion, and who had hoped to attend her marriage in the metropolis. But the bride-elect seems pleased at being married so differently from the hordes of brides who find themselves walking down St. Thomas' or St. Patrick's church aisles, with same crowd looking on, and later gushing over the bride's real lace veil.

Miss Sharp's engagement to Mr. MacDonald was announced in London last year, and plans were made that the wedding take place either in London or New York, but circumstances intervened and the marriage rites take place over on the other side of the world this month. She will find Calcutta a delightful spot, perhaps one of the most cosmopolitan places in the world, and there will meet the members of a very exclusive English society, and also some very prominent Americans. She will find the social life very formal and very correct, and the social lines are very tightly drawn. But, being a daughter of Mrs. Sharp and the late W. Willoughby Sharp, who even after a crash in Wall street, when his firm lost many millions of dollars, came back most successfully, and settled not only his losses, but had a sufficient amount left to provide after death for his widow and four children, Miss Sharp has a decided place in society whether it be America, Europe, Asia or Africa. She is a sister of the beautiful Mrs. Russell G. D'Oench, one of the most charming members of the younger married set in New York, who, as Dorothy Sharp, was a belle in the junior coterie, and is a dignified, gracious young matron. The mother of this lovely bride-elect was Miss Dora Adams, of Athens, Ga., and her first marriage to Alex Hopkins brought her to Atlanta for residence, and here she moved in the most exclusive social circles. After Mr. Hopkins' death she was wedded to W. Willoughby Sharp, of New York city, who was a member of New York's "400." Mrs. Sharp visited Mrs. Charles T. Hopkins out on Ponce de Leon avenue several months ago, and the latter returned but a short time ago from Natural Bridge, Va., where she visited Mrs. Sharp, who, by the way, on the occasion of these Atlanta visits checks up on her real estate holdings, as she owns quite a valuable tract of land on Chatham road right where it joins Pace's Ferry road. Located on Mrs. Sharp's property is the quaint little burial ground at the intersection of these fashionable residential roads, which is enclosed by a wire fence, and where the earthly bodies of many of the earliest settlers of this growing metropolis rest in peace, undisturbed by the noise of high-powered motors flashing past the cemetery, which only a few years ago was reached by horse-drawn vehicles, moving very slowly over unpaved red clay roads, and seemingly a hundred miles away to the travelers. Mrs. Sharp's eldest daughter, formerly Miss Flournoy Hopkins, married Gilbert Elliott, whose father was the late Sir Arthur Elliott, and upon the death of the latter a year or so ago, the former Miss Hopkins became Lady Elliott and her husband is Sir Gilbert Elliott.

SNAPSHOTS of Atlantans collected at random: Mrs. Charles A. Sisson and Mrs. W. S. Elkin shopping for Christmas in the five and ten. That distinguished lawyer, Cam Dorsey, meeting the special train at the Terminal station to bid Governor-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt farewell, having been a member of the latter's law class when attending Columbia law school. Miss Edythe Coleman wearing the smartest of red outfits, lunching at Rich's tea room with her cousin, Mrs. Homer C. Wheeler, of Cordele. Mrs. Howard H. McCall assembling a group of women in her apartment at the Georgian Terrace to tie up the pretty gifts intended for the children's Christmas tree at Tallulah Falls school, the annual contribution made by Lewis H. Beck, that benevolent citizen who has done so much for the mountain school owned and maintained by Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. John Weckerling, the former Miss Mary Houston, of Decatur, riding in a rickshaw in far-away Tokio, Japan, where Lieutenant Weckerling is detailed as a student of the Japanese language. Chaplin John Hall assisting in planting a living Christmas tree on the parade ground at Fort McPherson. Mrs. Walter O. Boswell and Mrs. I. H. Joffe returning from Atlanta to the garrison at Fort McPherson with the tonneau of their car filled with packages to adorn the Christmas tree planned for Christmas eve at the fort. Jimmie Calhoun making a wedge through the crowd to watch the antics of Santa Claus in Davison & Paxon's show window on Peachtree street. Mrs. Katharine Murphy costumed in modernistic blue hat and gown, a color most becoming to her blonde beauty. That's all today. More next Sunday.

Chamber of Commerce Announces Dinner.

The woman's division of the chamber of commerce will have a dinner at 6 o'clock in Hall No. 1, at which Mrs. Mildred Seydell will be the principal speaker. A Christmas bazar will feature the evening. Bridge tables will be set for those who wish to play.

Lovely N. Y. Visitors To Spend Holidays Here

Misses Ethel and Sarah Kunzig, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., beautiful daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Kunzig, who arrive Friday, December 21, to visit their aunt, Mrs. Inman Sanders, at her home on Peachtree road, who entertains at luncheon in their honor Saturday, December 22, inviting the debutantes to meet these charming visitors. Miss Sarah Kunzig comes to Atlanta to make her debut during the holidays, and they will be entertained at a series of social affairs. Miss Ethel Kunzig, named for her mother, the former Miss Ethel Gay, of Atlanta, is a student at Wellesley college, while her sister attended Mount Holyoke. Among those planning parties for these charming New York visitors are Mrs. William Royer, Mr. and Mrs. Ryburn G. Clay, Mrs. Joseph S. Raine, Sr., Miss Marion Hull Smith and Austell Thornton. Zera Littlejohn Hair Wins Prize in D.A.R. Essay Contest

In an essay contest recently conducted by the George Walton chapter, D. R. A., Columbus, Mrs. Ralph W. Edge, regent, Master Zera Littlejohn Hair was declared the winner. Zera is the son of Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Hair, of Columbus, and a bright student of the seventh grade of the Sixteenth Street school; the teacher of the English classes of this grade is Miss Mattie George McGehee. This is the third time that a student of this grade has won the prize offered annually by George Walton chapter, to the pupils of the seventh grades of the city schools for the best essay on some given historical subject. Former winners were Sarah Allen and Joe Hair, a brother of this year's successful contestant. Honorable mention for the second best essay was given to Miss Elizabeth Archer, also of the seventh grade of Sixteenth Street school.

The subject for this year's study was "Valley Forge; Past and Present." This afforded a valuable study of the history of Valley Forge, and of the national shrine now in this sacred spot. The committee on patriotic education in this chapter that had charge of the contest was composed of Wheeler Tolbert, Mrs. John B. Peacock and Mrs. James R. Lockhart. The winner read his essay at the December meeting of the chapter, at which time the prize of $5 in gold was awarded to him. The essay follows:

"Valley Forge, a village in Chester county, Pennsylvania, is about twenty miles northwest of Philadelphia. In the month of December, in 1777, George Washington with about 11,000 troops went into winter quarters at Valley Forge. During the winter, the army suffered very greatly. They were poorly clothed and fed and suffered from the cold. There were about 1,000 huts with twelve men in each. These things rendered about half the men unfit for active duty. The winter was very severe and the snow covered everything. When the men marched, they left bloody footprints in the snow. Many were the nights that they sat around the campfire to keep warm rather than go to bed and freeze. As Washington would make his rounds of inspection, the men would stagger to their feet to salute him. Although no actual fighting occurred at Valley Forge, it is one of the most sacred spots in America. Washington and his men left the encampment in June, 1778.

"It was at Valley Forge that Baron Steuben became inspector general of the army, and the treaty of alliance with France was announced May 6, 1778. In the meantime the British lived in peace and plenty at Philadelphia.

"About 760 acres at Valley Forge have been made into Valley Forge park. The house which was occupied by Washington is still standing. This house was built in 1758 and owned by Isaac Potts. The Washington Memorial chapel has been recently built. One monument is surrounded by four cannons. There are many buildings of which one is a museum. There are modern highways running from one place of interest to another. Not many of the log cabins remain now, but others have been built which look almost like those of 1777. They are now building three homes and are going to name them after three great generals. Some of the breastworks put up in 1777 are still standing, and trees are growing on some of it. The Daughters of the American Revolution have furnished several houses at Valley Forge. About a quarter of a million visitors go there each year. At the eastward entrance is an arch which cost about $100,000. The government has put about $365,000 at Valley Forge."

D.A.R. Chapter Meeting Reports Are of Interest To Readers

The following reports of D. A. R. chapter meetings will be of interest to readers of the page.

The Thronateeska chapter, D. A. R., had an interesting meeting in the clubhouse Thursday afternoon, specially celebrating Woodrow Wilson day. The regent, Mrs. J. W. Gillespie, called attention to the value of retaining records, the chief purpose of the D. A. R. Mrs. Walters spoke of that beautiful spot in Atlanta, the Memorial Grove, established by the Joseph Habersham chapter, in one of the city parks, suggesting that a beautiful gesture for the chapter to create a grove of remembrance, provided the city commission would assign a plot, possibly in Highland Avenue park, for the purpose. In all the southland no more beautiful nor more enduring trees are to be found than the holly and magnolia, which Mrs. Walters suggested using.

A piano solo was rendered by little Miss Marguerite Inman, followed by the reading of an interesting sketch of Woodrow Wilson, great war president, by Mrs. Leo Leader. Miss Sarah Murray gave two humorous readings and Mrs. J. A. Redfearn read a historical sketch of a Revolutionary heroine, Mollie Pitcher. Miss Susie Spence's unit were hostesses.

Sylvania Chapter.

Tuesday afternoon, December 4, the Briar Creek chapter met with Mrs. Waple Perkins and Mrs. Spencer Powell. A splendid program on Woodrow Wilson day was presented by Mrs. Black and Mrs. Powell. Plans were made at this meeting for the marking of the grave of Moses McCall at the old Middleground cemetery in Screven county, this being the third grave of a Revolutionary soldier to be marked this year by the Briar Creek chapter.

March 3 a boulder will be placed on the battleground of the Battle of Briar creek.

Mrs. J. N. Rogers and Mrs. J. W. Reaves were joint hostesses at a meeting of the Lamar Lafayette chapter of the D. A. R. Tuesday afternoon, with Mrs. J. C. Collier presiding. The Briand-Kellogg peace treaty was interestingly discussed by Miss Josie Collier; armistice and Thanksgiving papers were read by Mrs. L. C. Tyus and Miss Lillie Mitchell. The paper on the peace treaty was prepared from material sent by Senator W. J. Harris and was under the foreign relations committee of the local D. A. R. Mrs. M. W. Smith served as chairman of the program committee.

The sale of Christmas cards is being sponsored by the chapter and a donation was made to help defray the expenses of Book week which was fostered by the Carnegie library and the Lamar county federation. At the meeting of the chapter in December. Christmas and the birthday of Woodrow Wilson will be observed.

The log cabin was festive with Christmas colors, Wednesday afternoon, when Miss Anna Benning, Mrs. George Burrus and Mrs. Jean Peacock entertained the Oglethorpe chapter, D. A. R., at its meeting in December. The committee on the Founders' day benefit card party, to be given by the chapter Tuesday afternoon at the country club, reported all plans completed. The better films committee reported that the state chairman of better films favored the chapter's cooperation with the better films committee of the Three Arts league and the chapter expressed a desire to cooperate in this movement.

Mrs. Dupont Kirven, in observance of Woodrow Wilson's birthday, said that the members of the D. A. R. should be especially interested in Wilson as he had always upheld the ideals of the men of the American Revolution. Mrs. J. B. Key read a paper on "The Defense of Religion." The literary feature of the program was a paper on the life of Patrick Henry by Mrs. Willard Cooper.

Indian Welfare Chairman's Message.

Mrs. Price Charters, of Gainesville, chairman of the Indian welfare and citizenship committee, has issued the following letter to chapter regents:

The commitee on Indian welfare, Georgia division, D. A. R., send greetings. Please include in your program for the year a program on Indian welfare. The Indians are the original Americans, and are wards of the federal government, and are supposed to be adequately cared for.

Keep a report of all work, programs in your chapter, markers to Indians, school programs, Indian collections, or anything pertaining to the American Indian for your annual convention report, and report same to me before the convention in March. Please send me a report from your chapter. Best wishes to you and your chapter.

La Grange College Campu Notes.

LaGrange, Ga., December 15.—A student's recital was given in the college auditorium Tuesday evening. Taking part on the program were Misses Loula Callaway, LaGrange; Ezra Stanfield, LaGrange; Virginia Moseley, Danielsville; Elizabeth Moss, Waleska; Bettie Ragsdale, LaGrange; Marion Wilson, LaGrange; Nell Cole and Mabel Henslee, East Point; Lucy Margaret Harris, China Grove, N. C.; Lilla Sutton, Ocilla; Mae Ratcliffe, Lakeland.

Library Chairman Urges Contributions.

Mrs. G. Walker Jordan, state chairman of the library at Memorial Continental hall, and the members of her committee, including Mesdames G. Walker Jordan, Hawkinsville; J. H. High, Atlanta; C. R. Cannon, Conyers; R. E. Farish, Columbus; J. D. Standifer, Blakely; John Porter, Danville; B. A. Rogers, Gainesville; C. H. Leavy, Brunswick; Miss Maria Berrien, Washington, D. C., and Miss Virginia Hardin, Atlanta, have issued the following letter to all chapter regents:

"Certain reference books are much needed in the Georgia section of the library in Memorial Continental hall for the verification of application papers. At the executive board meeting held at Dublin November 8, it was decided to ask every chapter to give not less than one dollar ($1.00) for the purchase of these books. Please send your contribution at your earliest convenience to Mrs. B. C. Ward, state treasurer, 952 Peachtree street, Atlanta, and notify the state chairman for the library of your gift so that your chapter may be credited in her report."

Briar Creek Chapter Unveils D.A.R. Markers

On the morning of November 16 the descendants and members of the Briar Creek chapter, Sylvania, journeyed down to the old Dead River cemetery near Mt. Vernon to mark the graves of two Revolutionary soldiers, Richard Cooper and Wilson Conner, who lie buried there. While the old church has long since been moved to Long Pond, the cemetery is in good condition, having been well cared for through the long years.

At 11 o'clock, the ceremonies began with the singing of "America," followed by the invocation led by Rev. J. D. C. Wilson, of LaGrange, the program continuing as follows:

Introduction, Professor T. B. Connor, Felham; address, Dr. John D. Mell, Athens; Revolutionary service, Mrs. J. C. Lane, past regent; placing of American flags, Dr. W. C. Humphries Sylvania, and J. R. Cooper, of Ogeechee; placing of laurel wreathes, Mrs. A. R. Roberts, Ogeechee, and Miss Hallie Humphries, Sylvania; unveiling of markers, Thelma Connor, of Mt. Vernon, and Randolph Cooper, of Savannah; quartet, Professor T. B. Conner, Mrs. Calhoun, Miss McArthur and Carlton Mell; benediction, Rev. Charles H. Kopps, Sylvania.

At the conclusion of the program, the relatives motored to the interesting old home of the Coopers, built in 1803, by Richard Cooper, of handhewed logs. The holes bored in the walls and flour was an evidence of the necessity of protection from the Indians by the use of rifles through these holes. From there, the guests were invited to the church at Long Pond, where a sumptuous feast was spread.

Wilson Connor rendered valuable service in the Revolutionary war, afterwards becoming an eminent Baptist minister, dying in the pulpit after having preached a powerful sermon. Richard Cooper was promoted from the rank of captain to major for an act of bravery in the battle of Briar Creek. The relatives who came from a distance were: Miss Lizzie Cooper, J. H. Cooper, Mrs. Carrie Brewer Cooper, J. B. Cooper, Mrs. Wilson Cooper and Mrs. W. H. Cooper, from Coopersville; Mrs. Clayton Hollingsworth, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Roberts, and Mrs. B. Burnes, from Ogeechee; Dr. W. C. Humphries, Misses Emma Mae and Hallie Humphries, and Rev. Charles H. Kopps, of Sylvania.

Mrs. Bucker Issues Message Relative To D.A.R. Drive

Mrs. J. V. H. Rucker, of Athens, co-state chairman of the campaign committee of Mrs. Julius Y. Talmadge, candidate for president general of the national society, D. A. R., issued the following message relative to the campaign:

"As Mrs. Julius Talmadge is our candidate for the office of president general at the forthcoming congress in April, 1929, there are a few points to be emphasized by our Georgia chapters.

First: To elect your full quota of delegates and to be sure they are women who expect to go to Washington. In addition to the delegates, each chapter is entitled to ten alternates, all of whose names must be on the credential blanks when they are sent to Washington in February. If you have any members living in Washington it is advisable to elect them as alternates in order that they may serve if necessary. Be sure to return credential blanks to Washington by the last of February, otherwise the elected delegates and alternates will not be officially recognized or allowed to vote.

Second: All state and national dues must be paid by the first of January in order that the chapter representatives may have the power to vote.

Third: Reservations must be made immediately. A limited number of rooms have been reserved at the Willard and Raleigh hotels in the name of the 'Georgia delegation,' each room accommodating three or four guests. It is necessary, however, for each one to make her reservation without delay, as these rooms will not be held indefinitely. Rooms may also be had at the Ebbitt hotel, H street at Tenth if engaged at once.

Fourth: Have every member of your chapter who has friends in other states write to those friends asking their support of our Georgia candidate. With such a candidate and our hearts filled with determination we can not help but win."

Jewish Club Divisions To Meet Wednesday.

The matron, senior, junior and blue bird divisions of the Jewish Woman's club will hold a joint meeting in the auditorium of the clubhouse on Washington street at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday evening, December 19th. Report of the nominating committee and election of officers will be the business of the evening. Arrangements have been completed for a musicale during the social hour, when refreshments will be served.

First District Georgia State Nurses' association meets Friday, December 21 at 3 o'clock at the Academy of Medicine, 38 Prescott street. Miss Jane Van de Vrede and Miss Cora Byers will be on the program.

Miss Carolyn McHan, of Newnan, Is Bride of William G. Benton

Newnan, Ga., December 15.—Mrs. Charles McHan announces the marriage of her daughter, Carolyn, to William Gibson Benton, of Atlanta, formerly of Cedartown, the ceremony having been solemnized Monday, November 26, in La Fayette, Ala. The announcement comes as a surprise to the wide circle of friends of the young couple, their marriage having been kept a secret.

The lovely young bride is the only daughter of Mrs. McHan and the late Charles McHan. She is a graduate of the Newnan High school and later attended Brenau college at Gainesville, where she was a popular member of the Delta Zeta sorority.

Her mother, was before her marriage, Miss Maumee Adams, daughter of Mrs. S. R. C. Adams and the late Rev. Adams who for many years was a prominent Baptist minister of south Georgia. Mrs. Benton is the niece of A. C. McHan, of Atlanta, Mrs Warren Boggarly, of Senoia; Mrs. Charles B. Williams, of Jackson Tenn., and Earl Adams, of Newnan.

Mr. Benton is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Benton, of Cedartown. He received his education at Emory university, where he was a member of the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity and of the Emory Glee club, having toured Europe with the club last summer. He holds a position with the Anderson Motor company of Atlanta, and he and his bride will make their home in the city.

Mr. Mrs. Northcutt To Celebrate Their Silver Wedding Anniversary

A social event of unusual interest to College Park, as well as other sections of the state is the reception to be given by Mr. and Mrs. James A. Northcutt at their handsome home, 206 East Princeton avenue, in College Park, Saturday, December 22, celebrating their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. Five hundred invitations have been issued to the reception, which will be from 4 to 10 o'clocks.

Mrs. Northcutt, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Nichols, of Acworth, Ga., where she grew to womanhood, loved and admired by a wide circle of relatives and friends. Mr. Northcutt is the son of J. J. Northcutt, of another well-known family of Acworth. They were married in the Acworth Baptist church by the Rev. H. B. Searight on December 23, 1903.

Mr. Northcutt has, for several years, been an educator of note. He was principal of Battle Hill school for seven years, after which he served four years as assistant state superintendent of schools. He is now and has been for the past four years, Georgia representative of D. C. Heath & Co., publishers of schoo' and text books. Mr. Northcutt is a graduate of Mercer and one of its valued trustees. Both Mr. and Mrs. Northcutt are active in church and civic affairs. He is president of the College Park "Thirty" club, member Masonic lodge, deacon of the College Park Baptist church and superintendent of the Sunday school.

Mr. and Mrs. Northcutt have a host of friends to rejoice with them in celebrating their silver wedding, and desire for them continued happiness.

Brenau College News of Interest.

Gainesville, Ga., December 15.—Franciszek Zachara, famous young Polish pianist, will give the fourth of his monthly public recitals in the Brenau college-conservatory auditorium Monday night. Already famous in the capitals of Europe, he has been highly praised by the New York critics, following a recital at Steinway Hall, and by Ralph Jones, of The Atlanta Constitution, who recently came to Gainesville to hear the youthful virtuoso play, hailed him "a second Paderewski." Beethoven, Schumann, Chopin and Liszt will be interpreted by Mr. Zachara at the forthcoming recital.

"The Romantic Age," a three-act comedy of manners, by A. A. Milne, well known English playwright, was presented in the Brenau college-conservatory auditorium Monday night to a large audience of students and citizens. The performance was one of a series of dramatic entertainments sponsored by the Cushman club, local dramatic society. Coached by Miss Lois Gregg Secor, professor of expressive movement and platform art in the Brenau school of speech, the following students made up the cast: Julia Byrd McDonald, LaFayette, Ala.; Elsie Whitelaw, Birmingham, Ala.; Dorris Howard, Easley, S. C.; Katherine Wooten, Eastman, Ga.; Laura Moffat, Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio; Bleeker Bailes, Eustis, Fla.; Orville Tyler, Barnesville, Ga.; Virginia Felts, Durham, N. C.; Mary Alice Oates, Headland, Ala.

Producing staff of the performance included the following: Director, Lois Gregg Secor; stage manager, Virginia Peters, Roanoke, Va.; property managers, Emma Lee Wahmann, Rocky Mount, N. C., and Dorothy Strickland, Concord, Ga.; prompter, Irma Wynne, Cordele, Ga.; electrician, Derrice Anderson, Washington, D. C.; publicity, Catherine Gilmore, McComb, Miss.; business manager, Elaine Boughner, Confluence, Pa.; costume director, Jean Moses, Great Bend, Kan.; Brenau orchestra, directed by Professor Emil Bruno Michaelis, of the Brenau conservatory faculty.

"Hushed Laughter" was given by the dramatic art class at Brenau college-conservatory Thursday night, the last of the regular weekly performances of the class until after the Christmas holidays.

Christmas holidays for Brenau college-conservatory will begin at noon Wednesday and will continue through January 9, students reporting for all classes January 10, according to an announcement from the administration. This arrangemnet permits a week longer vacation than previously scheduled and was granted by the faculty following a student petition, to conform with the schedule of other colleges.

Sigma Pi Fraternity Plans Party For Biennial National Conference

An event of outstanding interest among the social activities of the Christmas holidays will be the formal reception featuring the eleventh biennial national convocation of the Sigma Pi fraternity at which the members and pledges of Psi chapter of Emory university will act as hosts. This interesting event will take place in the Georgian ballroom of the Atlanta Biltmore on the evening of Friday, December 28. Miss Valeria Logue has returned to her home at Jackson, Miss., after having visited Mrs. Pearl B. Blackburn, on Winona drive.

THE PEOPLE GO ON.

Carl Sandburg, writing in the Chicago News, tells of the Lincoln-Douglas debates. One of those great events was recently reenacted at Knox college at Galesburg, Ill. Says Sandburg, biographer of Lincoln: "Three great actors or human forces took part in the Lincoln-Douglas debates. The orators, Lincoln and Douglas, were two of the actors in the drama. The third was the people. They came in the cold and almost frozen rain of a raw October day to stand and listen three hours to the speakers of the day. That crowd of 20,000 people was an instrument, a factor in history, that the minds and tongues of the orators tried to control and direct. In seven years both of the great orators tried to control and direct. In seven years both of the great orators were dead. But the people go on and on. Perhaps a thousand years from now there will be a millennial celebration of the event of 70 years ago on this spot. The very words of all great orators testify and cry that while the tongues of orators turn to dust the people go on and on."

THE CHICAGO FAIR.

The Chicago World's Fair of 1893 was probably the outstanding event for education, industry and entertainment since the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia in 1876. There have been other world's fairs, but somehow the big Chicago show seems to stand out as foremost in the last 35 years. Now Chicago is planning another exposition on grand lines. But the city has some inside preparation to make before she can invite the world. It is known for its racketeering and organized crime. Perhaps it is no worse in proportion than many other cities. Unfortunately many people think so. What Chicago needs is two campaigns: One to rid the city of racketeers and another to tell the world it is done.

Then come on with the exposition.

Lovely College Belles Return To Spend Christmas Holidays Here

Debutantes And Visitors To Be Feted

The third week in December, in which debutantes and visitors occupy the center of the social stage, chronicles much entertaining featured for these particular groups during the holidays, for holidays are party days, filled with fashionable festivities. Mr. and Mrs. Albert Howell entertain at an informal buffet supper Monday evening at their home on West Pace's Ferry road in compliment to their nieces, Miss Adelaide Howell and Miss Rosalie Gunby, two popular debutantes of this season. The guests will include members of the 1928-29 Debutantes' club and an equal number of young men. State Chairman of Humane Education Issues Timely Article

Mrs. Katherine T. Weathersbee, of College Park, chairman of humane education, Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers:

"As the Christmas season approaches our thoughts turn to gifts for our friends. It is a happy moment in the life of the world. The great opportunity for doing good at this time is frequently overlooked in the desire to provide more enjoyment. We sometimes forget that in our giving we may combine both pleasure and profit by carefully selecting books or toys, especially intended as gifts for children.

"Good books are splendid gifts and are valuable to both young and old. There are better books for children today than ever before published. education of the young people, as they create humane sentiment toward helpless human beings and animals. Why not select our gifts for such; there is a large variety to select from this year.

"Let us avoid books which illustrate cruelty, robbery, wrong doing or glorify war. There are many attractive and interesting books published which tell of noble deeds of men and women, and are an inspiration to the readers. There are also many good books which tends to instill in the youthful minds thoughts of kindness and love for all living creatures.

"As there are many toys which seem to arouse only the desire to hurt or kill, you are urged to avoid giving such toys to young people. Among such objectionable toys are whips, guns, pistols, swords and sling-shots. Not only is the handling of such toys dangerous to eyesight and bodily welfare, but their use often stimulates the baser animal instincts. They encourage the shooting of birds and the wounding and destruction of helpless creatures and often injury to human beings.

"Choose toys that are interesting and instructive, which will be enjoyed by the average child and leave no destructive impression on the mind. A child's mind receives and holds the early impressions, even those transmitted in play. Therefore, we must, in the selection of Christmas gifts, choose only what is likely to foster in the mind of the child the real meaning of the Golden Rule.

"Do unto others as you would, that they should do unto you."

Ella Smillie P.-T. A. Holds Daddies" Meet.

The "Daddies" night meeting held by the Ella W. Smillie P.-T. A. Tuesday evening, was featured by a delightful program.

The kindergarten band, directed by two of the little boys, in full dress suits, showed the marked talent of the beginners. One of the little girls, Sadelle Prosterman, rendered the chorus of "Song of Love" from "Blossom Time" in a surprisingly interpretive manner. A beautiful drum given them by the P.-T. A. was proudly exhibited.

Ermena Bradley, of one of the primary grades, danced the "Doll Dance" beautifully, followed by a tap dance encore. Eugene Adams, a former Smillie pupil, sang "Sonny Boy" in a most appealing way.

A short business session followed. It was voted to send $1 for the P.-T. A. book shelf which is to be placed in the Carnegie library and $2 to the P.-T. A. council milk fund. The attendance prizes were won by high six, Miss Hollingsworth and the kindergarten.

English Avenue P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

The English Avenue P.-T. A. met Tuesday in the school auditorium, Mrs. Braswell, the president, presiding.

At the report of grade chairmen, Mrs. Withers received special mention since she had visited fifty mothers during the past month. Miss Kingsbury asked the members to go out among the patrons of the school and tell what the school is trying to do to bring children up to their normal weight and also to get perfect teeth. She said that by talking the matter, patrons would understand better what the school is trying to do.

The matter of an enclosed walk-way between the main building and Chestnut building was taken up and the association agreed to continue their efforts to have the walk-way enclosed as soon as possible.

The treasurer reported more dues paid in the last month than ever before.

Mrs. Braswell announced that the next meeting would be a "Daddies" meeting, held in the evening on the second Tuesday in January.

A worthwhile program on Arbor day was rendered by members of Low 6-1 grade.

Miss Archer and Miss Sims tied for the prize for the upper grades having the most mothers present. The association voted that each be given a prize since both grades had made such a fine showing.

O'Keefe P.-T. A. Is Addressed By Judge Watkins

Citing many criminal cases of girls and boys from 2 to 16 years of age brought before him and placing the blame for these unfortunate situations on motion pictures, modern dancing and salacious literature, Judge Garland Watkins, of the juvenile court, spoke to a large audience at the O'Keefe P.-T. A. meeting held Thursday evening at Eggleston hall, Mrs. D. C. Shepherd presiding. "Crime cannot be checked by the electric chair nor the prison term, but the real remedy for this evil is the spiritual training and the home," said Judge Watkins.

Mrs. Julia O'Keefe Nelson spoke of the drive for books for the O'Keefe library, announcing the contributions of one book, "America's Beautiful Parks."

Later in the evening, however, when the P.-T. A. cook book was drawn, Mrs. Nelson was the proud winner and in turn gave the book to the O'Keefe library.

A resolution unanimously adopted was that a committee be adopted to make a plea to the Georgia Power company for 5-cent bus fare. Mrs. A. W. Crabbe was appointed chairman for this committee.

Delightful refreshments were served, during which time Miss Long played some records on the new Orthophonic recently sent the school. The next pre-school meeting was announced for the first Thursday in February.

Home Economics, Better Homes Chairman Suggests Program

Miss Clara Lee Cone, chairman of home economics and better homes, fifth district, P.-T. A., submits the following suggested program: "In accordance with the state program for home economics and better homes, the fifth district has two major objections: One of these is the promotion of the education of men and women in the profession of homemaking and the other is the stimulation of the interest of parents in homemaking education for young people. In order to accomplish these objections the program includes a number of suggestions. If a P.-T. A., through its home economics' chairman, actively follows these suggestions, the home economic program can be made effective.

"First, each P.-T. A. should have at least one program devoted to home economics, in form of a talk, a demonstration or an exhibit on one of the following phases: Nutrition, clothing and textiles, home care of the sick, budgeting home management, child development, family relationships.

"Second, an active interest in the problem of the school lunch. The provision of a nourishing easily digested lunch is of utmost importance in promoting the physical, and to some extent, the mental development of the child. In a few schools in the fifth district, hot lunch is provided in a lunch room or cafeteria, but in many, it is necessary to bring lunch from home. Information in regard to suitable lunches can be obtained from the book 'P.-T. A. Interpretations of Food.'

"Third, encourage the use of home management apartments or cottages for home economics departments in high schools, as the teaching is more effective when done in a home-like atmosphere. Several of these apartments are already in use and several under construction in the fifth district.

Fourth, cooperate with the greater use of cotton campaign, sponsored by the Georgia Home Economics association. Realizing Georgia's problem in finding a market for her cotton, this association is attempting to promote the greater use of cotton for clothing and in the home. One of the slogans is 'Every School Dress a Cotton Dress,' also encourage the use of cotton rugs, draperies, cotton shoes in summer and cotton stockings for sports wear. It is only through the cooperation of the P.-T. A. and other organizations that success of this campaign can be secured.

"Fifth, cooperate with the national better homes movement, which should be stressed throughout the year. This program stresses not only the material side of the home, but the social and spiritual aspects of home life as well. The P.-T. A. can cooperate by participating in local exhibits and by planning special better homes programs.

"It is hoped that a home economics and better homes chairman will be appointed throughout the district by many associations."

Mrs. Brown Gives Twenty-Year Service to Georgia W. C. T. U.

BY M. FRANCES MEADORS
BURGHARD, State Editor.

For more than 20 years the Georgia Woman's Christian Temperance union has been a constant call to service to Mrs. Frank T. Brown, of Cairo, who was elected state recording secretary at the convention in Bainbridge recently. She is at work on the year book and will soon have it in the hands of officers. Delayed reports have handicapped her to some extent. Mrs. Brown was born and reared in Cairo, and became a charter member of the W. C. T. U. there a score of years ago. She has held almost every office in this union, always with credit to the office and herself. She was president when the Cairo W. C. T. U. entertained the state convention in 1921—and it has never been better entertained, and has served as county president, and made one of the finest district presidents the state ever had. She has come into helpful contact with W. C. T. U. leaders at state and national W. C. T. U. conventions. In all her efforts she has never been satisfied with anything less than her best. Mrs. Brown has an enjoying manner, is tactful and enjoys the confidence of her fellow workers, numbering her friends by her acquaintances. She is energetic, persistent, practical, a white ribbon enthusiast, a consecrated Christian, an active church worker, having been president of the Woman's Missionary society, taught a Sunday school class, an Epworth league leader, helping wherever needed. She served as treasurer of the Woman's club, chairman of Associated Charities. No task is too hard for her to undertake if it is for the good of her community and the betterment of humanity. Since Mrs. Brown gave up the district presidency, Mrs. Berta G. Scott, of Bainbridge, was chosen, so the second district will still have a splendid president.

Headquarter's Fund.

The most important object holding the consideration of the W. C. T. U. right now, is raising the balance due on the state headquarter's maintenance fund. Mr. and Mrs. N. C. McPherson, of Atlanta, gave the Georgia W. C. T. U. their $30,000 home on Highland avenue for permanent state headquarters with the understanding that the organization would raise a $15,000 endowment fund whose interest should go to the upkeep of the property. This endowment or maintenance fund to be in the bank by March 1, 1929. About $10,000 of this fund is in hand, much of it given as a memorial to some one assiduous in temperance work. Five hundred dollars makes the donor a founder, with the name on the bronze tablet to be placed in the headquarters. The gift of $100 makes the one who gives it, or for whom it is given, a builder, whose name will be so listed in the book of remembrance. In fact the names of all donors will be preserved in the building. Several thousand dollars were raised by members who gave a penny a day last year—"A Penny a Day to Keep Drink Away" was the slogan. Mrs. Mary Harris Armor has been instrumental in collecting most of this fund, and she is receiving cooperation from unions and friends in securing the balance by the first of March. The state W. C. T. U. will then be worth $45,000.

Many state organizations of the W. C. T. U. own their own buildings, even some local unions own their headquarters. The national W. C. T. U. is worth $713,800 in land buildings, furniture and fixtures, literature stock, real estate mortgages, bonds and deposits. The activities of the state and national W. C. T. U. make headquarters a necessity. Georgia's fund is steadily growing, every union, and every member are urged to put forth their best efforts this month to finish up the maintenance fund.

Tallapoosa W. C. T. U.

Last Saturday evening the Tallapoosa W. C. T. U., of which Mrs. E. L. Jaillet is president, celebrated its fortieth anniversary with a public meeting with Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, the speaker. The history of the organization was shown in a series of tableaux, and described in verses written by Mrs. H. L. Pittman and read by Mrs. J. J. Head. The large audience evidenced its approval of both the speech and the demonstration and the W. C. T. U. by making a generous offering to carry on the work of the W. C. T. U., a number of new members were added to the Tallapoosa union.

New Members.

Reports of new members are being constantly reported, 1,246 new members paid dues last year, only paid pledged members are counted. At the first meeting after entertaining the state W. C. T. U. convention 18 ladies joined the Bainbridge W. C. T. U. The fourth district W. C. T. U. met in LaGrange Wednesday, the new president, Mrs. T. P. Power, presided. Mrs. J. M. Murrah is the new president of the Columbus, Theresa Griffin W. C. T. U. Mrs. Fred Riordan has been chosen of the Macon W. C. T. U. with nearly 500 members.

The Lord's Day.

"We observe the Lord's day because we are the Lord's people. "All our life is from Him. Our one business is to glorify and serve Him, and to become like Him by the loving and living help of the spirit.

"One day is none too much to give from all our common activities, to think specially, and undisturbed by daily tasks, of His goodness and graces and to spend in service of others in special ways, impossible in round of duties of other days.

"The true observance of this one day as the Lord's day will make all our days' days of the Lord."

Mrs. Lewis, Mrs. Westmoreland Are Named in Anniversary Gift

BY MRS. J. W. MILLS.
State Editor of the Federated Church Page.

Mrs. T. L. Lewis and Mrs. George Westmoreland, two outstanding members of the Woman's Missionary society of the Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church, have been signally recognized by their coworkers in a gift made by the society to a special mission fund of $2,000, naming $1,000 each as a ruby anniversary gift in honor of these two prominent and devoted members. Baptist women throughout the city and state are happy to know of this tribute of esteem worthily bestowed.

In presenting the picture of Mrs. Lewis today, it is fitting to mention something of her background and early environments. Born in Oglethorpe county and reared in Wilkes, near Washington, one of the most aristocratic and cultured sections of the state, Mrs. Lewis has exemplified in her life and activities an ambition for Christian culture and service so characteristic of this section. Her father, Dr. H. M. Stanford, was a well-known and well-beloved physician, practicing his profession both in Oglethorpe and Wilkes counties for many years. Mrs. Lewis, at the age of 11, was baptized into the fellowship of the Rehoboth Baptist church of Metasville, Wilkes county, one of the oldest churches of the state, and after receiving her education from the best schools of the day, she became one of the most efficient teachers in north Georgia. While teaching in Alpharetta she met and married Colonel T. L. Lewis, a prominent lawyer, who represented his district for three terms, first in the lower house of the legislature and then in the state senate. Mrs. Lewis was one of the leaders in the building of the Baptist church at Alpharetta, and was the organizer of Woman's Missionary society of that church.

Changing residence to Atlanta in 1906, Mrs. Lewis made a fine record of usefulness both in West End and Ponce de Leon churches. First, she served for three years as secretary of the fifth district of B. W. M. U., of Atlanta association, and was then promoted to the highest office, that of superintendent of the entire Atlanta union. Although this honor comes to Mrs. Lewis on the Ruby anniversary year from her own church society, the Baptist Woman's Missionary union of Atlanta joins in many expressions of appreciation, and in strong affection for their former leader and colleague in the Master's work.

Lutheran Church Gives Xmas Pageant Tuesday, Dec. 18

The Women's Missionary society, of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer and the children's missionary organization, the light brigade, will give a Christmas missionary pageant, "Christmas Windows," at the business meeting of the women's society Tuesday, December 18, at 3 o'clock. The president of the women's society, Mrs. William Trautwein, assisting Mrs. C. D. Shaefer, light brigade worker, have the program in charge. It promises to be more than usually interesting. A social half hour with refreshments will follow the program.

The circles of the missionary society held interesting meetings last Wednesday at the following homes: Circle No. 1, at the home of Mrs. C. M. Kessler, 726 Amsterdam avenue, N. E.; circle No. 2, at the home of Mrs. C. H. Harp, 848 Virginia avenue, N. E.; circle No. 3, at the home of Mrs. William Trautwein, 1040 Austin avenue, N. E.; circle No. 4, at the home of Mrs. Frank C. Wise, 622 Hardendorf avenue, N. E.; circle No. 5, at the church; circle No. 6, at the home of Mrs. John Hall, at Fort McPherson; circle No. 7, at the home of Mrs. Abe Massar, 332 Fourteenth street, N. W.

North Georgia W. M. S. Meets February 4-7.

The date of the annual meeting of the North Georgia conference, W. M. S., has been set for February 4-7. The meeting will be held at the Sam Jones Memorial church in Cartersville.

Prominent Georgia Federated Church Women Have Been Signally Honored by Co-Workers

The photograph presents two women prominent in church circles. In the name of Mrs. T. L. Lewis, left, the W. M. S. of the Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church, of which she is a member, recently presented a $1,000 "ruby anniversary" gift to a special mission fund of $2,000. Mrs. George Westmoreland, a member of the same society, was similarly honored. At the right is shown Mrs. Ross Bosworth, of Rome, who has been appointed district secretary of the Rome district, to succeed Mrs. L. D. Yeargan, who has resigned because of ill health. Mrs. Bosworth has served as president of the Woman's Missionary society of the First Methodist church of Rome for a number of years and is well informed on all phases of the work.

Baptist W.M.U. Board Report Reveals 15 Perfect Ruby Gifts

Mrs. L. O. Freeman, publicity superintendent of Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of Georgia, makes the following report:

A spirit of optimism was in evidence Tuesday at the meeting of the executive board of the Baptist Woman's Missionary union. As the anniversary year is nearing its close victory along many lines of undertaking is in sight.

The number of newly organized societies is steadily increasing, and it is believed that by the end of the year Georgia's quota of new organizations will be reached. The financial aim was placed high and is more difficult to accomplish yet this, too, may be attained if the Baptist women of the state will rally just a bit stronger with their prayers and with their gifts. Contributions during the present year are approximately $35,000 in excess of last year. The goal for the year is $286,000.

Many forty-dollar memorials are being reported, and the number of perfect rubies, representing gifts of $1,000, has grown to 15. The most recent thousand-dollar contributions to be reported are from the Woman's Missionary society of the Ponce de Leon church. These two rubies are given in honor of Mrs. George Westmoreland and Mrs. T. L. Lewis. Another perfect ruby is the gift of Charles A. Davis, also of the Ponce de Leon church. Mr. Davis' gift is a memorial to his wife, who for many years was an ardent supporter of Kingdom causes, and who went to her reward September, 1927.

Honoring Mrs. W. J. Neel, state president, love gifts by the women of the state have now reached approximately $3,000, the price of three rubies. A ruby is being given by the east central division as a testimony of appreciation to the efficient and untiring efforts of Mrs. Ben Thompson, of Madison, as vice president of this division and state chairman of the anniversary celebration.

Training School Gift.

Possibly the most sacrificial gifts yet reported in the entire southern union are from 83 girls of the training school, Louisville. The goal, for foreign mission love gifts, fixed by these girls is $1,000, and $855 of this amount has already been realized.

The recent bequest of $6,000 by Roy Cole has been turned over to the management of the Mary P. Willingham school as an endowment. This gift will be known as the Jennie Fowler Cole scholarship fund, in memory of the wife of Mr. Cole.

Mrs. F. W. Withoft, of Fort Valley, is the newly elected vice president of the west central division. Mrs. Withoft succeeds Mrs. Idus Robertson, of Manchester, whose recent resignation was regretfully accepted. Both Mrs. Withoft and Mrs. Robertson have given the union years of faithful service in various official capacities, and both are well known and well loved throughout the state.

In the absence of Mrs. Neel, president, Tuesday's board meeting was presided over by Mrs. J. C. Lanier, state vice president. Mrs. Neel is in Rome assisting in a church school of missions.

Many members were absent because of illness. Out-of-town officers present were Mrs. J. C. Lanier, West Point; Mrs. W. W. Stark, Commerce, and Mrs. Ben Thompson, Madison. The date of the next meeting will be January 8.

Second Baptist.

Looking forward to the annual meeting of the Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of Atlanta association, to be held January 24-25, at Second Baptist church, the executive board met Wednesday morning, December 12, in Rich's conference room. Mrs. Wilbur M. Jones, superintendent, presided and announced the following committees to report at the annual meeting: Budget committee, Mesdames George M. Niles, James Kempton and J. W. Awtry; apportionment, Mesdames W. D. Burke, J. L. Jackson and Jesse Manry; nominating, Mesdames John T. Thompson, J. L. Stubbs, W. E. Campbell, Robert R. Johnson, Charles Mitchell, W. P. Anderson, Fred Edwards, G. W. Garner and W. H. Carter; other committees to be announced later.

At the suggestion of the treasurer, Mrs. J. W. Smith, it was decided that the constitution be so changed at the annual meeting that a superintendent of Young People's work be included in the list of officers. It was voted unanimously that the executive board honor the former treasurer, Mrs. George M. Niles, by placing her name in the "Book of Remembrance," and $55 was contributed by the board for this purpose.

Week of Prayer.

A week of prayer for missions was observed by the women of the Second Baptist church recently, services being held in the church from 3 to 4 o'clock each afternoon. Monday circles five, Mrs. B. W. Spinning, chairman, and seven, Mrs. Robert E. Harvey, chairman, were in charge of the program. The subject was "Latin America"; Tuesday circles six, Mrs. William Walker Brookes, chairman, and 11, Mrs. M. E. Greer, chairman, led the service on "Africa;" Wednesday "Japan" was studied by circles three, Mrs. Spann W. Milner, chairman, and eight, Mrs. W. B. DuVall, chairman, in charge; Thursday Mrs. John R. Dickey, mission chairman, led the service, assisted by Mrs. T. H. Jeffries and Mrs. Bernard Wolff. "The Mission Fields of Paul" was the subject chosen.

A solo by Miss Jean Kendrick was a special feature of Monday's service. An address by Mrs. William Walker Brookes Tuesday on "Conditions in Nigeria" was instructive. A geographical survey of Japan by map made Wednesday's service unusually interesting. Incidents in the lives of Southern Baptist missionaries made Thursday's hour a most delightful one.

Dr. Edwin M. Poteat, supply pastor of the Second church, closed the series Friday with an address on "China," which was enjoyed by all present. An offering for the Lottie Moon fund was made each afternoon. Mrs. John R. Dickey, mission chairman, planned the programs and presided at each service.

Federated Board Extends Sympathy.

The executive board of the Federated Church Women of Georgia sympathize deeply with their recording secretary, Mrs. John Kirksis, in the passing of her husband, John Kirksis, December 7. Mr. Kirksis was a deacon in the Peachtree Christian church and was one of the most useful and beloved members.

CHURCH MEETINGS

Baptist.

The Sunbeams of the Second Baptist church meet at 10:30 o'clock Sunday morning in the primary room.

The circles of the Women's Missionary and Benevolent society, Second Baptist church, meet in the church at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon, December 17. Members are requested to bring mite boxes and filled Christmas stockings.

A Christmas pageant, "Self—Service—Substance," will be presented in the main auditorium of the Second Baptist church at the twilight hour Sunday, December 23. Mrs. D. B. Graze is in charge of the program.

Christian.

Woman's council of First Christian church meets at the church Wednesday afternoon, December 19, at 3 o'clock.

Christmas Pageant At Methodist Church.

A touch of sentiment will mark the presentation of the Christmas pageant, "White Gifts for the King," at the Pattillo Memorial Methodist church, Sunday evening, December 23, at 7:30 o'clock.

Two of the late Rev. C. D. Pattillo's grandchildren, Nancy Knight and Alfred Knight, Jr., children of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Knight, of Nelson Ferry road, Decatur, will represent the primary and junior departments, respectively, in the procession of gift bearers who will place white gifts, the offering of their departments—on the altar of the king. Other features of this pageant will be the march of the magi. The Journey of the Shepherds, and the candlelight procession in which 30 young girls will take part. The public is invited to attend the Christmas celebration at the Pattillo Memorial Methodist church.

North Georgia Methodists Send Secretaries to Memphis Meet

All the districts of the North Georgia conference have elected to send their district secretaries to the Memphis conference January 1, 2, 3. This act on the part of the districts will reap large benefits in the increased zeal and efficiency of the secretaries, and the larger results obtained in the work of the district.

The secretaries who will attend this conference are Mrs. Ross Bosworth, of the Rome district; Miss Lilla T[illegible] of the Athens district; Mrs. C. E. Fox, of the North Atlanta district; Mrs. J. C. White, South Atlanta district; Mrs. M. H. Hendee, Augusta district; Mrs. W. B. Richardson, Elberton district; Mrs. W. E. Grubb, Gainesville district; Mrs. W. Y. Daniel, Griffin district; Mrs. R. A. Field, LaGrange district Mrs. J. Glenn Giles, Marietta district; J. F. Fowler, Dalton district. The officers of the different departments will also attend.

The acting president of the conference, the corresponding secretary and the superintendent of mission study are official delegates of the conference. The number delegates will be strictly limited to 5,000. All must be duly registered and hold the official registration card and badge. Each annual conference has been allotted its share of delegates, and all who desire places must register at once.

Delegates are of five classes: Official delegates, appointed delegates, students and teachers, delegates at large, home guards from the city of Memphis. The conference will begin on the evening of January 1. The whole body of 5,000 delegates will meet in the municipal auditorium each morning for worship and a general program. There will be afternoon conferences of 1,500 delegates each.

J. N. McEachern.

The sympathy of the conference is extended to its president, Mrs. J. N. McEachern, in the loss of her husband, Mr. J. N. McEachern, who died suddenly Thursday night, December 6, at his home on Clifton road. Mr. McEachern was stricken with pneumonia early Thursday morning, and failed rapidly, dying before midnight, Thursday night.

Mrs. McEachern has been confined to her home for some time, suffering from an illness that compelled her to relinquish all active participation in the affairs of the conference, and this added blow will no doubt retard her recovery which was so eagerly anticipated by her friends.

The heart of the conference goes out to Mrs. McEachern in this trying hour, and the prayer of every member is that the Holy Comforter may be near her, and speak words of comfort and consolation that no human tongue can utter. May she be borne up by the Everlasting Arms and restored to her usual place of poise and purpose in the work she loves.

Quarterly Meeting.

The officers and district secretaries of the North Georgia conference W. M. S. met at the Hotel Ansley on Thursday and Friday, December 6, 7, in the final executive session of the year. Several changes were noted in the body and new faces were seen in the group. Mrs. W. A. Albright, acting president, presided. Mrs. R. J. Atkinson, who has been on the executive committee for the past 23 years, was absent on account of her recent resignation. Mrs. Ross Bosworth, of Rome, was seated as district secretary of the Rome district to succeed Mrs. L. D. Yeargan, who resigned on account of ill health. Mrs. W. E. Grubb, of Buford, was present as the newly-appointed secretary of the Gainesville district to succeed Mrs. J. G. Logan, whose husband was moved from Gainesville to Atlanta by appointment of the recent North Georgia conference session. Plans were made for the annual meeting to be held at Cartersville early this year.

Rome District.

Mrs. L. D. Yeargan, of the Rome district, who resigned because of illness, has served the district as secretary for three years and is beloved and admired throughout the section in which she has worked so untiringly. She has been ill since early fall, but is improving. The Rome district, under her direction, was the first district to pay its $100 for its missionary, Mozelle Eubanks, for the Scarritt dormitory.

Mrs. Bosworth has served First Methodist church, W. M. S. as first executive a number of times and is well informed on all phases of the work.

A successor to Miss Florrie Harwell has not been appointed, but her work will be ably cared for by the conference until such time as appointment is made.

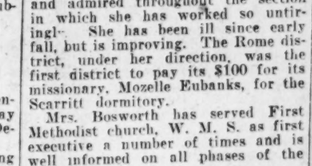

Kenwood Jubilee.

Friendship auxiliary, of Kenwood, Ga., had a jubilee social meeting recently at the home of Mrs. W. P. Carnes. All the ladies of the church and community were invited. Mrs. J. C. White gave an interesting talk on the "jubilee year work." Miss Helen Wilkins, of Cleveland, Ga., who has held the place of county demonstrator in White county for three years, talked on "Work Among the People of the Mountains." She said the mountain people need some one to lead the way, for they are eager to follow. Miss Opal Kelley read a history of the auxiliary which is less than three years old. Mrs. C. R. Dumas gave a sketch of the life of Miss Laura Haygood, a pioneer missionary from Georgia. After the program refreshments were served.

First Methodist.

The Woman's Missionary society, of the First Methodist church, of Covington, met at the church Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, with Mrs. Robert R. Fowler in the chair.

The following officers were installed: President, Mrs. J. A. Wright; vice president, Mrs. C. D. Gibson; corresponding secretary, Mrs. R. R. Fowler, recording secretary, Mrs. W. E. Atkinson; treasurer, Mrs. A. L. Loyd; assistant treasurer, Mrs. A. J. Clayton; superintendent of young people's, Mrs. W. T. Irvine; superintendent of baby division, Mrs. Carl Castleberry; superintendent of study, Mrs. R. R. Fowler; Superintendent of social service, Miss Lizzie Hill; superintendent of supply, Mrs. J. L. Elliott; superintendent of local work, Mrs. A. E. Everett; superintendent of publicity, Miss Mollie Wilson; chairman of circles, Mrs. S. L. Waites; leader of spiritual cultivation, Mrs. W. C. Clark; agent Missionary Voice, Mrs. W. M. Pope. Circles will have the book of Genesis for January study.

Mrs. Green Issues Her Report As Chairman of Publicity

Mrs. L. W. Green, of Sycamore, chairman of publicity for Georgia U. D. C., issued her annual report as follows. She says:

Work of Department.

The work of the department of publicity has been embraced with much enthusiastic appreciation this past year and in our pleasant contact with the many U. D. C. publicity women who have so cleverly carried on the work of their respective chapters we have been given much inspiration for praise of the fine accomplishments resulting from our concerted efforts to project the work in every department by emphasizing its importance through the press. Gratified, indeed, we would be most happy if a few minutes might be legitimately conceded, in which to acquaint you with the splendid worth of your chapter publicity chairmen who illustrate the value of their efforts in the growth of interest in chapter activities. In the light of this disclosure you would be assured that the women who furnish the press reports are particularly provocative of the reward of your gratitude.

"I have received 78 publicity reports, with the following chapters meeting every publicity requirement of the official U. D. C. page in The Constitution, and local and state pages: Laura Rutherford chapter, Athens; Charles D. Anderson chapter, Fort Valley; Agnes Lee chapter, Decatur; Walter A. Clark chapter, Hephzibah; Hartwell chapter, Hartwell; Campbell County chapter, Fairburn; Willie Hunt chapter, Barnesville; Oconee chapter, Dublin; Richland chapter, Richland; Last Cabinet, Washington; Covington chapter, Covington; Camilla chapter, Camilla; Sidney Lanier chapter, Macon; Robert E. Lee chapter, College Park; Phil Cook chapter, Montezuma; Alexander Stephens chapter, Crawfordville; Roberta chapter, Roberta; Fulton chapter, Atlanta; Chapter A chapter, Augusta; Frances L. Barton chapter, Waycross; Mary Brantley chapter, Dawson; Marion County chapter Buena Vista; Lizzie Rutherford chapter, Columbus, and Rebecca Felton chapter, Atlanta.

Reports Published.

"Not only have the chapter reports featured week after we , but we arranged with club editors of six of the state's daily papers to publish our reports of interest. The Associated Press has repeatedly handled our publicity, expressing a courteous desire for any article so interesting to the state at large as that which we submitted from the chairman of commemmorative days. We issued a publicity letter and sent to every chapter in the division early in the year. Cards have been sent to every state chairman soliciting reports, with but few exceptions. We filed, classified and graded C. of C. publicity at request of director of C. of C. There is scarcely a chapter in the division whose president, historian or publicity chairman has not had a personal appeal from the state chairman of publicity for some special type of publicity service, hundreds of letters and cards having been written in the interest of the work. Lizzie Rutherford chapter, Columbus, and Last Cabinet chapter, Washington, furnished historic pages, and the chairman of the Alexander H. Stephens school arranged an imposing school page.

Deeply Grateful.

"To these and others who rendered special service during the month of August while our efficient editor left the official page to our care, we are deeply grateful. From any angle you view the value of publicity, you may extract its golden worth, but with the U. D. C. publicity committee, with the exception of the chairman, made up of brilliant newspaper women, their pens being the surest protection for our ideals and most of whom have given to us of their newspaper space or our work would have been considerably reduced, we are favored. Our obligation to Mrs. Stafford, of The Constitution, and her associates are so pronouncedly many, that we can but dwell on the value of the courtesies extended in a manner most pleasing and with grateful hearts."

"Benjamin Harvey Hill" Is Essay Subject.

Mrs. J. L. Beeson, state chairman, announced at the state convention in Atlanta that "Benjamin Harvey Hill" would be the subject for the historical essay contest of 1928-1929. It is a topic that will prove as fascinating as was that of Alexander Hamilton Stephens. This year many teachers of Georgia desire to begin plans and studies for the essays before Christmas, though the rules and the Bibliography, the literature on the subject, will not be mailed until January.

Last year when, Mrs. Jameson, of Atlanta, offered the two fine campships at the Dixie camps, as first prizes, the contest at once became a High school contest. In order to interest all Georgia school children the Georgia division, U. D. C., offers two beautiful gold medals as first prizes for the pupils in the fifth, sixth and seventh grades. The noble band of teachers in the Georgia schools are the strong right arm of the Georgia division, U. D. C.

Un Mot Ici, Est Bien

Mrs. J. J. Harris, Editor Georgia Division, U. D. C.

BY MRS. J. J. HARRIS,
Editor Georgia Division, U. D. C.

Georgia, which through years gone by, has signally shown great development in historical ways, is continuing the educational program most advantageously. Our brilliant chairman of the historical essay contest, Mrs. J. L. Beeson, Milledgeville, and her efficient committee are most consistantly carrying out policies which make for greater advancement. The choice of the subject for the historical essay this year, is most happy and will bring forth much interest on the part of the contestants and the division. The life of Benjamin Harvey Hill, whose name is given for the subject this year, presents a noble field of endeavor in the chronology of his works. He was born in Jasper county, Georgia, September 14, 1823, and died August 18, 1882. He was graduated from Georgia university with first honor. In 1845 he practiced law in LaGrange, Ga., and soon became famous as a speaker and trial lawyer. He was a member of the Confederate senate in 1861-5, chairman of the judiciary committee and staunch supporter of the administration. By powerful "notes on the situation" he united the white people of his state who chose him as leader with spontaneous unanimity. An outstanding figure in the history of the south there is much to be gained educationally by a comprehensive study of this great and good man. The division is proud to claim as its very own his granddaughter, Mrs. John R. McConnell, of Lithonia, who is a foremost worker in the organization.

It is foreseen that Mrs. Beeson and her committee will make brilliant progress in the historical essay contest, and it is the hope of the division that every child within the age limit will make an effort to compete in the contest so fraught with memories of southern valor and ideals.

Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, first vice president-general, en route home from the general convention at Houston, was entertained most delightfully at the home of Mrs. J. A. Rountree, in Birmingham, Ala. Mrs. McKenzie was one of the distinguished guests of the district No. 1, Alabama division, U. D. C.; Mrs. E. R. Broyles, president. Mrs. Rountree entertained in honor of Mrs. McKenzie most delightfully at dinner on Sunday evening. This function was followed the following day by an official reception to which the state officers of the Alabama division, the presidents and officers of the local organizations were invited. Mrs. McKenzie was most brilliant at the convention and carried the honors of her high office with dignity and grace. Mrs. Broyles and Mrs. Rountree are remembered most delightfully as honor guests at the state convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy held in Atlanta in October, 1928.

Mrs. Giles Outlines Yearly Program for Richmond Chapter

Mrs. Jake Giles, president of Richland chapter, U. D. C., outlines the program for the year with "Loyalty to the Truth of the Truth of the Confederacy," as its motto, "Preparedness" as the keyword, and "The Rose" as its flower.

The program is given as follows:

Mrs. J. J. Harris Indorsed for State President

At the last meeting of the Turner county chapter, U. D. C., of Ashburn, the organization unanimously endorsed Mrs. J. J. Harris, Sandersville, for president Georgia division, U. D. C.

On December 7 the James D. Frederick chapter, U. D. C., Marshallville, unanimously endorsed Mrs. J. J. Harris for head of the Georgia division, U. D. C.

At the December meeting the Morgan county chapter, U. D. C., Madison, endorsed Mrs. J. J. Harris, of Sandersville, for division president United Daughters of the Confederacy. The motion was unanimously and enthusiastically carried.

The O. C. Horne chapter, U. D. C., Hawkinsville, Ga., held its last meeting on December 6 in the chapter rooms with Mrs. L. A. Jordan, first vice president, presiding. Plans were discussed for Christmas remembrance of veterans and others whom the chapter will honor. Committees were appointed to carry out these projects. A motion was made to endorse Mrs. J. J. Harris, of Sandersville, for state president Georgia division, U. D. C., to be elected in 1929. This received many seconds, and was unanimously and most cordially carried. The splendid work given the Georgia division, U. D. C., by Mrs. Harris assures her ability for the work in wider fields.

U. D. C. Meetings

Fulton chapter, U. D. C. met Tuesday in the Pine room of the Ansley hotel, Mrs. L. D. T. Quinby, president, presiding, who made a report on the convention held recently in Houston, Texas. She stressed the fact that she was most desirous for Fulton chapter to remain 100 per cent in payment of dues, and sending credentials, made out properly to all conventions. She stated that some chapters were negligent in this, and Georgia's voting strength at the convention was only 172 votes, when there should have been about 400. Officers made splendid reports especially pleasing to all members was the report of the treasurer, Miss Martha Anderson, which shows the chapter to be in a splendid condition financially. The historian, Mrs. J. L. Jepson, read an instructive paper on the "Origin of Thanksgiving." Mrs. Grady Andrews, soldier's home chairman, said that a party would be given at the soldier's home on Friday, December 21, for the Confederate veterans of Fulton county. Christmas gifts and refreshments will be provided for all and a pillow shower, will be an added feature for the patients in the hospital. The concert given for the benefit of the chapter was a great success, the artists being among the most gifted in the city, under the direction of Miss Ethel Beyer.

The Mary Brantley chapter, Dawson, United Daughters of the Confederacy, met at the club house Friday afternoon. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. J. M. Rauch. A pleasing feature was a talk by Mrs. J. D. Weaver, stressing the importance of parliamentary usage in the meetings, and urging loyalty to the chapter and to the cause represented by the U. D. C. The chapter went on record as unanimously indorsing Mrs. J. J. Harris, of Sandersville, for state president. Mrs. George Riley urged those present to purchase Christmas cards from the Dorothy Walton chapter, D. A. R., the proceeds to be used for the empty stocking fund. A motion was made and carried to contribute to the Norma Randolph relief fund for widows and veterans. The following program, arranged by Mrs. T. K. Cobb, featured: Reading, "Lads of the Golden Star," Miss Louise Durham; "My Operation," Mrs. R. R. Jones; quartet, "The Long, Long Trail," Messrs. George Jennings, Byron Cooper, Jesse Chambless and Ed Hart.

Screven county chapter, U. D. C., of Sylvania, held the November meeting in chapter room, Thursday with the hostesses Mrs. C. L. Mobley, Mrs. George Green and Mrs. E. W. Lane. The meeting called to order by the president, Mrs. E. K. Overstreet. Mrs. John Hollingsworth gave a reading and Mrs. Herman Barr gave "Relief Work in the World War." The chapter realized about sixty dollars clear on oyster supper given at the old "While" house on Tuesday, November 20. The chapter is putting two magazines in the school library, "The Youth's Companion," and "Confederate Veteran;" also at October meeting gave "The South in the Building of a Nation," to school library, the complete set of 13 books.

Dougherty county chapter, U. D. C., of Albany, held its regular meeting Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Alfred Dees. Mrs. Dees, Mrs. E. H. Muse, Mrs. Arthur Hannon, and Mrs. B. L. Cox, were hostesses. It was voted to give a subscription of the Confederate Veterans magazine to the high school library and to the Carnegie library. The education committee announced that extensive plans had been made for the year's work. A committee was appointed to collect jellies, preserves, and canned fruits and pecans for the Confederate Veterans' home in Atlanta. Another committee was appointed to take flowers to the sick. Mrs. Dorothy Riddle Burkholder sang two songs, accompanied by Mrs. Mary Reynolds Hilsman. Mrs. H. S. Harper read an interesting sketch of Joseph Brown, war governor of Georgia. Miss Sara Murray gave a reading and Marguerite Inman rendered a piano solo.

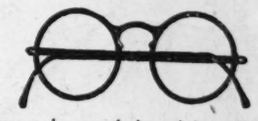

The Louise Heard, C. of C., Elberton, held its last meeting on November 22, at the home of Bettie Lois Power. The meeting was presided over by the president, Miss Katherine Raines. A report given by the leader showed that two dozen handkerchiefs have been given by the members and sent to the soldier's home. A program on Pensacola, Fla., was given, followed by a story hour by the leader, Mrs. A. T. Dennis.

Xmas Tree Party Sponsored By Junior Red Cross

The Christmas Tree party sponsored by the Junior Red Cross and given to the children of ex-service men will be held Friday afternoon, December 21, at 3 o'clock at 280 Peachtree street, in a building the use of which has been donated by Otto Feil. The brilliant lighting will be donated by the Georgia Power company, and the music for the occasion will be made possible through the use of a piano loaned the Cable Piano company. Mrs. Idolene Reed is chairman of the Christmas Tree party and the work of assembling the gifts and sending out invitations for the celebration is going steadily forward. The young guests are the children of the ex-service men whose names are listed with the Red Cross and each invitation sent is accompanied with street car tickets in order that an adult may bring the little ones. Not only have the names of the children been secured but sex and age of each one has also been listed and the gifts will be selected with a personal touch that will make them doubly acceptable. The tree is to be a mammoth one and the juniors of the Boys and Tech High schools will do the actual work of decoration. The purchasing committee, composed of Eunice Wilkins and Sue Butterworth of the Girls' High school, found active cooperation from the merchants of the city. The Milton Bradley company has quoted wholesale prices on all goods bought from them and all who have been approached have been interested and eager to help in this piece of holiday service.

The private schools of the city as well as those in the public city school system are working on this project and the juniors of Washington seminary, headed by Charlotte King of that school are to supply the many beautiful decoration of the tree, while Evelyn Floyd, of North Avenue Presbyterian school, will help prepare the tree for its holiday function and Bettie Valentine, of Woodberry Hall, will serve as chairman of the reception committee and will seat the young guests. An entertainment program prepared by the juniors of Hoke Smith Junior High and Bass Junior High will add much to the pleasure of the occasion and the music will be furnished by the Boys' High orchestra. In every particular, the Christmas Tree party promises to be a great success and to fulfill its purpose of bringing joy to the hearts of about one hundred little ones who would not otherwise be provided for at holiday time.

Patients at Hospital 48 To Be Remembered at Xmas

Mrs. D. M. Robinson, director of the Red Cross at United States Veterans' hospital, No. 48, and chairman of the Christmas activities at the hospital, announces the Yuletide gaieties to feature the holiday program at the hospital.

On Friday evening, December 2, members of organizations who manifest an interest in the hospital throughout the entire year will assemble in the Red Cross but at the hospital with patients who are not confined to their beds for the annual Christmas party. Preceding the entertainment in the hut the bed patients will be visited and presented with appropriate gifts and well-filled stockings.

The first of the Christmas entertainments at which the patients will be honored will be sponsored Monday, December 17, by the I. C. club. On Wednesday evening, December 19 a concert will be given under the auspices of the Junior Music clubs. An interesting program and distribution of gifts will be given by Miss Lovett's pupils Thursday afternoon, December 21. On the morning of December 25 members of the Service Star Legion will visit the hospital and distribute gifts. On Wednesday afternoon, December 26, members of the hospital committee from the Atlanta chapter Red Cross will entertain the patients and distribute gifts. The James L. Mayson Sunday school class will give its annual party at the hospital on the evening of December 26. Friday evening, December 28, the Cable Music Review will entertain the patients with a concert. The Southern Bell Telephone company's orchestra will give a concert at the hospital Saturday evening, December 29.

Mrs. Charles Anderson Issues Her Report.

Mrs. Charles L. Anderson, state chairman of "Women of the South in War Times," issues her report as follows for Georgia division, U. D. C., as follows:

Total number of books sold, 74; paid to publisher for 15; number sold at $1 each, 15; number sold at $1 each, $1; number sold at $1 each, 43; total amount taken in, $70.50.

Expenses: Typing, $2; stationery and stamps, $2; express charges, $3.95; mailing books and cashing checks, $3.40; $11.35; balance on hand, $59.15. Sent to state treasurer.

Since sending in the report before the convention, six more chapters ordered books, including Douglas, Crawfordsville, Thomasville, McDonough, Rouston and Madison.

The Y. W. C. A. held its annual bazar Friday afternoon in the college gymnasium. Christmas gifts were sold to the students and public. The Senior class had an ole curiosity shoppe, the junior a lingerie booth, the sophomores a boudoir, freshmen hand-made novelties, specials sold sandwiches and tea.

Unlike other schools, there are no cases of influenza at LaGrange college, though many of the students have colds which have not prevented them from attending classes.

Georgia Chapter O. E. S. Will Sponsor Bazar.

Georgia chapter, No. 127, O. E. S., is sponsoring a bazar Monday, December 17, at Hightower Hardware store on Whitehall street. Members of the order and friends are invited to make selections from these articles for Christmas gifts.

Miss McCollum To Present Pupils.

A group of talented pupils from the studio of Miss Mae McCollum will give a program at 3 p. m. Tuesday at the Fine Arts building, 1170 Peachtree street. Miss Margaret Phillips and Miss Jeannette Bette, pianoists; Miss Joyce Barr, lyric soprano; Miss Undine Fairbanks, contralto, and Arthur Mangum, violinist, will offer solo and ensemble members from classic composers.

Around the Town with Connie

EVERY other person you meet downtown gift shopping these days makes this remark:

"Oh, I do wish I could find something different."

Well, I've found the gift different, and to "my way of thinking," as Al Smith remarked, it's a splendid gift for any member of the family or for any friend.

What is it?

A Cheer Book—

And it's just what it sounds. A dear little book containing many coupons that you can redeem in real pleasure. For these Cheer Books contain coupons or tickets to the "best show in tow"—our Howard Theater. Not just the evening shows—for the coupons are redeemable at the box window for tickets to the morning and afternoon matinees as well as the night performances.

The Cheer Books come in two sizes, one at $2.50 and one at $5, in pretty Xmas envelopes, and you can get them at the box office at the Howard Theater.

Now, isn't that a gift different? And surely a gift that will mean much in pleasure to whomsoever you give it—a gift you know will be genuinely appreciated.

So—on your gift list write "Cheer Book" opposite several names of those friends you are "delighting to remember" and this week when you visit the Howard to see Corinne Griffith in "Outcast," make it a point to get your Xmas Cheer Books.

Manager Hicks tells me that "Outcast" is a wonderful picture—but then we know that Corinne Griffith, the "orchid of the screen," is a wonderful actress and given a good picture—such as this—promises real entertainment. She plays a dual role in "Outcast," and in the second part wears gorgeous costumes—as only Corinne can wear them.

IF YOU want to express the Christmas sentiment most beautifully this season—

"Say it with flowers" from

C. A. Dahl Floral Co., 72 Broad St., N. W.

This lovely blossom shoppe is truly a bower of beauty for in its Yuletide dress, with vivid scarlet poinsettias, rosy begonias and golden chrysanthemums flaunting gayly against a background of the green and red of Xmas wreaths, Dahl's breathes the Christmas spirit.

All ready for your blossom shopping is Dahl's—right now—and you will find the choicest cut flowers—carnations—roses—chrysanthemums, and beautiful potted plants—the regal poinsettias, dainty begonias, palms and ferns, beautifully displayed for your selection.

If it's flowers for your Christmas party—for a sweet remembrance, or to cheer up a shut-in friend, you will find just the appropriate blossoms for the occasion and "Dahl's" will take personal pleasure in arranging baskets and bouquets in their individual, artistic style.

But—do your flower shopping early. 'Tis a simple matter to call WAlnut 2937 and give your orders early in the week, or if you prefer to make personal selection, call at Dahl's at 72 Broad, or Dahl's Floral Shop in the Biltmore, if that better suits your convenience. And remember Dahl "wires" flowers any time, anywhere, and for your every purpose.

Rather late to do card shopping, but for your convenience some of the shops are featuring selected cards in dozen or two dozen assortments at special low prices. Saves you the trouble of choosing—yet gives you assurance of attractive, fresh cards.

* * * *

Little evening bags of gold or silver sequins or "pailletes" make scintillatingly lovely girly gifts. Not so expensive and can be had in color tones to match the costume.

* * * *

Negligee are gifty things and never have our shops shown lovelier ones. The lingerie ensembles are exquisite and wonderfully gifty.

Fine linens are always nice gifts for "mother." At very attractive pricing are shown madeira, filet, Italian and cluny cloths, tea and dinner napkins and novelty bridge sets.

IN these last busy shopping days when every moment counts, you are apt to neglect the important matter of the midday lunch, thinking it sufficient to snatch a hasty sandwich then hurry back to the more interesting business of gift buying. But, if you would conserve your strength and energy, you'll very wisely take a full hour at noon time for luncheon so that you can rest, relax, enjoy a hearty meal, and then return to your shopping duties full of zest instead of all fagged out and tired. Moreover, at this particular time we are advised to eat plenty of good, wholesome food in order to keep the system strengthened and sustained and able to ward off illness.

Right here I want to suggest that a delightful place to rest and enjoy a delicious meal is in Mrs. Ramsay's Tea Room, 43 1-2 Peachtree. This conveniently located Tea Room has been recently remodeled, is more attractive than ever and the luncheons and dinners served there daily are more tempting than before—if that be possible. Served to you piping hot, on warmed plates, in warm cups, these menus are truly appetizingly delicious. The vegetable dinner is just like your own home-cooked meals, prepared in good old southern style that can't be equalled, and the meats, "done to a turn," are richly nutritious, while the pies, crisp and flaky with meringue an inch deep—ooh, ooh—it makes my mouth water just to think of 'em. Hot rolls, fresh from the oven, muffins and corn sticks and biscuits—the best you ever ate.

I'd been wondering just why so many men frequent Mrs. Ramsay's Tea Room until I followed the crowd and learned the reason. Men love good food, well cooked and deftly served, and they've found that they can get it, and at moderate prices, in Mrs. Ramsay's Tea Room. Go up there tomorrow between 11:30 and 2:30 and find out for yourself what a splendid meal you can really get for fifty to seventy-five cents.

THIS is a special message to you lovely mothers of college girl, debutante and sub-deb daughters from the Leon Frohsin Shoppe, Inc., on Peachtree street.

Mr. Leon Frohsin has just returned from New York where he personally selected, specially for the holiday season, the loveliest evening costumes—darling little frocks in the newer modes—just what your pretty dancing daughters will need for the social affairs of the Yuletide season. Also dainty new chiffon and georgette frocks, in the new blues—wild violet—rose and other spring-like shades, for afternoon teas and bridge affairs. Chic new sport frocks the girls will want for going-back-to-college wear.

These frocks have just now arrived and Leon Frohsin suggests that you do not wait until after Christmas day, but to come right down this week and make your selections while the display is beautifully new and complete. No doubt your daughter will require a chic new evening costume almost the moment of her arrival for wear to some "already invited" function; or a dear little afternoon frock for an early tea or bridge party. You know her size—her type—her preference, and so can easily choose becoming costumes before she arrives and have them ready for a sweet surprise.

And here's a suggestion of my own. No matter what other "gifties you may give her" just know that a gorgeous evening wrap—a lovely frock—or a handsome coat from Leon Frohsin's exclusive shoppe will be the gift your young daughters most desire.

Silk shirts are being featured as favored gifts for men. Evidently these are coming into vogue again for in a leading man's shop I noted silk shirts in pastel shades with or without collar attached. Very good looking they were and not expensive.

Shop early in the day and early in the week if you would have pleasant shopping.

Pastel felts for the holiday season are being featured. To wear with the chic little afternoon frocks of georgette and chiffon.

Grey shoes are making their bid for holiday favor. Shown in sports modes as well as dressy fashions. Quite good looking.

Gifts for Men?

THAT'S the all important question as the last of the shopping days draw near, for it was easy enough to find appropriate gifts for all the feminine friends on the gift list—but every girl and woman sighs when she reaches the masculine names—

"What on earth shall I give these men?"

For some reason or other it always seems hard to choose suitable gifts for men. We know they don't care for gewgaws and gimcracks—we know they'll just say "thank you" and stick them away back in the desk or chifforobe drawer and shudder every time they think of them.

Things to wear, of course, we know they will perchance like—but then every one in the family gives them that—can't we find something different that men will really like?

Well, suggest I—stick to the practical things—for if he's a "he-man" that's what he'll want—what he'll appreciate; no matter whether it's the thing you want to give or not. Try to please the man's taste—and not your own.

Shopping around in Rich's wonderful Christmas store last week I found many, many appropriate, practical, and very attractive—gifts for men! And every woman will prefer to do her gift shopping for men in her favorite woman's store.

Now, on the main floor at Rich's I found some very good-looking mufflers that I know any man would like. There are lovely snowy ones, in fine crepe de chine, with the initial "cut out" in black—and priced $3.50—that "he'll" like for evening wear. And there are mufflers in darker shades—some particularly good-looking ones in gray and black and black and white that are practical as well as "pretty." He'll like a good-looking comfy muffler from Rich's—be sure of that.

Kerchiefs—of fine linen with his initial in one corner; the all-white kerchiefs are always in good taste—or you might choose the colored bordered kerchiefs, if that's his preference. Very good these are and you can get them from 25c up at Rich's in single or in gift box sets of three or six.

Hose are man gifty—and Rich has a complete selection of fine hose in every wanted shade priced from 25c and 50c "up."

In another department on the main floor I found leather novelties that I know were "picked" by a man who knows for men who care. Travel sets, in neat leather cases; brush sets; liquer sets—nest of cups in nice leather case and all the newest styles in billfolds, cigarette cases, keytainers and wallets. These are gifts he can "keep"—that he can use daily and that he will really appreciate.

Then there are robes—dressing gowns—smoking jackets; bedroom slippers; smoking accessories; easy chairs, and personal apparel from hats to novelty pajamas.

Just anything a man can like or want you can find in Rich's with courteous, helpful salespeople to aid you in selection and to give you pleasant service even in these last seven shopping days before Xmas, which bid fair to be the busiest we've yet seen.

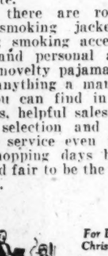

Costume jewelry is very gifty. The matched sets the shops are showing are quite attractive and particularly appealing are the sets with real stones "set in sterling silver."

Be sure to lay in a supply of the dainty novelty 'kerchiefs you will find now in the stores. New, fresh, dainty, inexpensive, these are the logical provision for those unexpected gifts one sometimes must produce on Christmas morning.

Give a Cheer Book for Christmas. Not a new bit of fiction just out but a book of coupons or tickets to some of the best shows of the coming season. A different gift and a pleasing one.

If you're looking for an ideal gift for a home-loving wife or mother go by one of the Georgia Power Company stores and take a look at the snowy electric refrigerator with a scarlet sash making it all Christmas-gifty looking.

A handsome handbag, one of the new spring modes the shops are newly showing, will make an acceptable gift. Some of these are in alligator, crocodile and reptilian leathers, silk lined, and have all the little vanity accessories one could wish. Priced at $5 and up.

JUST seven shopping days until Christmas, if you count in Christmas Eve. Not much time in which to choose the remaining gifts on that list of yours.

However, you can solve your shopping problems quickly, beautifully, practically and satisfactorily if you go gift shopping this last week in the retail stores of the Georgia Power Company. There is no nicer, better way to express your Christmas sentiment than to "say it electrically" for any electrical gift you may choose will surely be appreciated.

You will find it pleasant shopping in the Georgia Power Company's electric stores—for they are beautifully decorated—the gifts are conveniently displayed for your selection and the branch stores, being in the residence sections of the city, will not be so crowded, and you can shop there comfortably and leisurely.

And there are gifts for every member of the family. Electrical toys for the children, boudoir lamps for the college girls, table and floor lamps for the "young lady" daughter, Seth Thomas clocks, waffle irons, coffee and tea sets, percolators, grills for mother, while for a family gift what could give more lasting pleasure than a radio?

Probably the gift of gifts for mother (as I overheard one lovely gray-haired mother say) would be one of those lovely snow white General Electric refrigerators that are prepared so attractively ready for the giving. With a wide scarlet satin ribbon giving life and color to its snowy beauty, and a little pertinent sign that reads "For Mother," these General Electric refrigerators certainly suggest the perfect gift for mother and the house. Not just a pleasant surprise Christmas day, but a wonderful gift that lasts for years and will add comfort, pleasure and convenience every day and will safeguard the health of the entire family.

Ask any mother to write Santa Claus what she would like best of all this Christmas and nine times out of ten she will say "an electric refrigerator." For there's no one modern invention that has added so much to the convenience and comfort of the home than the electric refrigerator.

You can see the new models of the General Electric refrigerator on display in the retail store of the Georgia Power Company, at 84 Walton, or in any of the branch stores any day this week, or evening either, for all these stores will stay open every night this week until 9 o'clock and on Saturday till 6 p. m. for your shopping convenience. You can very easily choose this splendid gift for, by the Georgia Power Company's convenient purchase plan, you need pay only $10 down and the rest in 24 months "with your light bill." All electrical gifts can be bought on this convenient purchase basis which simplifies our gift problems muchly from a finance standpoint.

So—"say it electrically" this Christmas—say it with gifts that keep on living and give joy as long as they live.

WELL, in these busy Christmas shopping days, one can't discuss gifts, shopping or anything else for that matter, without referring occasionally to the prevailing indisposition. Like the poor, we certainly know we have it with us and, while some folks think we ought to treat the subject like the skeleton in the family closet, I think we ought to bring it out in the fresh air and get rid of it.

Now Connie's column is primarily supposed to deal with shopping questions, and I admit that I will shop for my readers for everything from a can opener to a trousseau. You may think at first to talk about cold remedies or preventatives doesn't come quite within my province, but if you were in and out of the shops and business houses every day as I am, and if you should hear as much as I do about colds and such like, you'd agree that it was quite my privilege to shop for you in a medicinal way or advise you in any way I can on the important subject of health.

All last week, as I made my shopping rounds, I was quite actively advising folks to take Aspironal, remarking that it is one preparation I have personally tried and found very efficacious.

Several years ago when I was living in Houston, Texas, there was a bad epidemic of cold or what they called "grip." I acquired a heavy cold—was threatened with grip—and naturally grew a bit worried. My druggist suggested that I take Aspironal for relief, and that was the first time I ever heard of or took Aspironal, the well-known medicine made in my own "old home town"—Atlanta. I got a bottle, took several doses and, to be quite frank, I noted a decided improvement in my feelings after the very first dose. I gave some to the other members of the family, and none of us had the grip. And I never have, till yet. So, last week when I felt a cold actually "coming on" I phoned my neighborhood druggist, ordered my old standby—Aspironal—and so far I haven't had, and I feel quite sure, I will not have the prevailing indisposition.

So, I want to suggest to each of you, that if you're feeling the least trifle indisposed with cold that you follow my plan and order a bottle of Aspironal from your druggist and try it as a preventative or for cold relief. 'Twill cost you just sixty cents, and you'll find it very efficacious.

I trust none of you will think that this true story has no place in my column. Above all things I desire to be helpful, and "just at this writing" I believe that it is perfectly permissible for me to pass on to you a suggestion as to something I have found very helpful.

* * * *

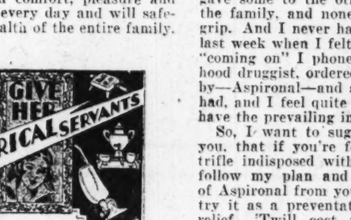

Silken pajama sets with coat to match are girlishly gifty. Similar sets are shown in rayon, quite pretty and not expensive.

* * * *

Saw a man gift shopping the other day in a lingerie shop. And—he did his own selecting, fetching the saleslady out to the show window and pointing out precisely the garment that he wanted. Who says men hesitate to visit a woman's shop and shy at gift shopping?

* * * *

Just Seven Days—

And it will all be over except the "Thank You's."

These last few days must needs be very busy ones and shopping will be a mad scramble, I'm afraid, instead of the pleasant, leisurely affair it could have been had we all shopped early. However, the stores are still filled with wonderful gifts: the stocks are still seemingly as complete as though no gift buying had been done. This is because of wise preparation, however, that foresaw our needs and probable demands and provided adequately for us.

It is rather late for you to write me about your gift problems. Later still for me to shop for you to best advantage—still I'm right here at your service and if you have need of my service even at the eleventh hour, don't hesitate to call upon me. A letter—phone call—or wire will find me ready to serve you.

In ordering this week, however, be specific, and enclose your checks or money orders, if you have no charge accounts here, in order to facilitate matters.

Busily yours,

CONNIE.

Display Dept., Atlanta Constitution.

THE other morning I was in a certain hat shop when an acquaintance came in loaded with bundles and evidently all tired out with shopping worries.

"My, but I'll be glad when Christmas is over," she sighed. "Shopping is certainly a problem and wearing on the nerves. Here I am with all these packages—I've got blocks to go to find my car and I'll probably find a ticket in it from the traffic policeman on the beat when I get there. I wouldn't mind the shopping so much if I didn't have to bother with finding a place to park. By the time I actually get ready to shop, the stores are so crowded you can't get about and it takes three times as long as usual to buy a single item."

"But you don't really need to make such a hardship of your Christmas shopping," I suggested. "You can easily simplify this business so it will be a pleasure instead of a nuisance. For instance, there's no reason why you should load yourself down with bundles. All the stores have frequent deliveries and will send out even your smallest purchase. As for driving your car downtown in Christmas traffic—and hunting a parking space—why bother with it? At this season of the year it is not only to your greater convenience and comfort—but I really think it is your duty to yourself to use the street cars or coaches for shopping. You certainly save time, save worry, and you save money, too, for you avoid all risk of accident in congested traffic; avoid tire trouble, flats, bent fenders and scratched cars, and you have no worries—for the other fellow does the driving. All you have to do is get on and ride to your destination. You don't have to park the street car."

Now, this last week before Christmas, shopping will be at its peak. Stores will be crowded, streets thronged, parking space at a premium. If you attempt to shop by auto, you'll likely be out of luck, that's all. On the contrary, if you start early—board your car or coach about 9 in the morning, you will find the cars uncrowded, the stores at their least congestion, store service fresh and prompt, and you will accomplish your shopping quickly and easily. Then before 4 or 4:30 in the afternoon, start for home, and you will avoid the late afternoon congestion on the cars. Moreover, you'll be doing a good turn, by leaving your seat on the later cars for the tired business people who must use the 5:30 and 6 o'clock cars. Systematize your shopping—use the street cars between 9 and 4:30, and you'll find your gift shopping turned into a pleasure instead of a problem and a nuisance.

Give the kiddie a pair of wee slippers with a darling little bunny curled up on the vamp. Practical but adorably pretty.

* * * *

Give a book for Christmas. There are lovely gift books of poems and prose beautifully illustrated and put up in gift boxes specially designed for the Christmas season. One of the prettiest gift book I've seen is "The House by the Side of the Road." It almost enticed me into giving myself a giftie.

* * * *

Some novel new billfolds and cigarette cases I saw in a certain shop; in tan shades with modernistic trimmings these were—very different—very attractive and priced $10.

* * * *

Mufflers in creamy white, in gray or black and white and colors with the initial monogrammed makes a gifty gift for your "boy friend." Saw good looking ones in a shop priced from $3.50 to $5.00.

* * * *

When in doubt—give stationery. Pretty boxes of fine paper, dainty folders and portfolios inexpensively priced so that if you have but a dollar or less to pay on a certain gift stationery will nicely fill the bill. The gift de luxe, of course, is a handsome box of monogrammed paper. I understand some shops can promise delivery if orders for this are placed tomorrow.

Darling little cedar chests in all sizes I saw in a shoppe—so nice to stow away everything from stationery to "hope chest" pretties. Very gifty.

MOTHER, DEAR—

Of course I know that you are buying all kinds of darling toys and sweets to tuck in the kiddies' stockings or hang on their Christmas trees—but—before you finish your gift shopping I want you to pay a visit to the children's shoe department on the second floor of Byck's Shoe Store—Whitehall street—and see the precious little boudoir or bedroom slippers they are displaying for the "tiny tots" and their next size sisters and brothers. You'll surely want a pair for each one of your kiddies and perchance a pair or two for gifts to other children.

First, be sure to see the adorable little felt "mules" like the one pictured here—with the darling white bunnies saucily perched on the wee vamp. These come in comfy felt with soft soles, in lovely shades of red, blue and rose. Precious they are and any wee girl or boy who wears a size 'tween 6 and 2 will adore these.

Then there are some lovely little boudoirs of quilted satin in rose and also in blue with dainty little pompons for a pretty finish. Felt ones in similar shades with ribbon pompons equally pretty. Also in felt, in the pastel shades, are shown dainty little slippers with novelty embroidery designs in white adorning the vamp.

For the very wee kiddies there are perfectly precious little boudoir slippers in soft felt in baby blue and rose—and these will surely help you beautifully solve the gift problem for the baby of your family or the baby next door.

In sizes from 2 to 6 come the larger slippers, while the baby "boudoirs" are shown in sizes 2 to 6 and the modest price range is from 95c to $2.50, with the "rabbit" or bunny slippers at $1.75.

Practical but pretty are these little slippers and very gifty. The kiddies adore them, and how comfily warm they'll keep the little feet.

At Byck's you'll find these on the second floor in that attractive children's shoe department where the kiddies love to go to "shoe shop."

* * * *

Have you seen the moderalistic tea and breakfast sets? Very new and with quite an appeal to an artistic friend.

New and fresh for the holiday season are the smart little frocks of georgette and chiffon in bright spring shades. Bought specially for the holiday season and typifying the early spring modes. Some of our buyers returned the first of last week and already the new costumes are on display.

MY ANSWER BOX

Am sending the shoes you asked me to get for you tomorrow. Think they are just like the picture enclosed and the right size. Hope they will suit—and fit.

Miss J. M., Blairsville.

You did not specify whether you wanted brown or gun metal hose, so I sent one of the new brown shades. Hope you will like them and that they will give you good service. Will be glad to shop for you at any time.

Mrs. B. R., Dawson, Ga.

I quoted you the prices on the articles you inquired about, but if you want these for Christmas, don't wait until the latter part of the week to order them. As you know, the shops are busy—mails congested, too, and early delivery necessitates early orders.

Miss J. M., Rome, Ga.

Yes, if you wire me even as late as Saturday I will personally attend to the mailing in order to be sure you get these gifts. It would be better, however, if you could make your decision earlier. These last moments are apt to mean delay and sometimes disappointment. I'll give you my best service, however.

Film of Egypt and Palestine To Be Shown at Woman's Club

A special showing of an educational film featuring Egypt, Palestine, the Holy Land and other Mediterranean countries, will be sponsored by the Holland-American Steamship Line, John T. North, general manager, at 8:30 o'clock, Tuesday evening, December 18, in the auditorium of the Atlanta Woman's club. The film shows all of the places visited by the S. S. Rotterdam on its Mediterranean cruise. It has been sent to Atlanta from Philadelphia and after the showing here will be sent to Boston. The film is of educational value and each picture is accompanied by a concise explanation of the historical and modern points of interest in each. Art clubs and public auditoriums throughout the country are showing this film to acquaint people with the history and beauties of the Near East and to promote an interest in travel. Invitations have been issued to all members of the Atlanta Woman's club to view this film. There will be no admission charge. The picture will run one hour and forty minutes.

Child Welfare.

Mrs. T. J. Ripley and the child welfare committee of the Atlanta Woman's club are busily engaged in the role of Santa Claus to about seven hundred little children in Atlanta. The clubhouse has been a scene of activity during the past week as boxes of toys, fruits and candies have been pouring in. The work of filling the seven hundred bags with these delicacies and toys will commence next week and Mrs. Ripley requests that club members who can assist in this service kindly report to her by calling Hemlock 1773-J.

Club Calendar.

Tuesday evening, December 18, a subscription dance will be held in the banquet hall. Wednesday morning, December 19, at 10:30, the Atlanta Music club will give its morning musicale. Friday evening, December 21, the Southern States Life Insurance company will have a supper, a Christmas tree and a dance. Saturday evening, December 22, a subscription dance will be held in the banquet hall.

Athens Social News of Interest.

Athens, Ga., December 15.—Honoring Judge Peter Porohovshikov, formerly of the high court of Russia, who was a visitor to Athens recently, Miss Janet Fortson, a member of the Little Theater Guild cast which recently staged O'Neill's "Beyond the Horizon," gave a tea Sunday afternoon at the home of her parents, Judge and Mrs. Blanton Fortson. Judge Porohovshikov entertained those present with the story of the little theater movement throughout the world.

A Christmas tree program for the benefit of the children of East Athens was held by the students of Lucy Cobb institute Saturday evening. Under the plan, the girls adopted these children for the Christmas season and for each there were toys and boxes on the tree.

Marking the close of Lucy Cobb for the Christmas recess, a candle-lighting program will be held Wednesday evening, December 19. At the supper hour members of the glee club will enter the dining hall, which is to be darkened, and after singing Christmas numbers, the candles on the dining tables will be lighted.

The spring term of Lucy Cobb will open January 7, according to an announcement by President W. F. Hollingsworth.

A recital by members of the piano and voice departments of Lucy Cobb was held in the chapel Friday evening. On account of the influenza epidemic in Athens and the desire of the authorities of Lucy Cobb not to subject the students to the risks involved in a crowd, the public was not invited as had been planned. Only students were on the program.

Medical Scholarship Loan Fund Discussed by Mrs. Maginnis

Mrs. W. D. Maginnis, Rock Hill, S. C., one of the general federation committee on the medical scholarship loan fund, writes Mrs. A. H. Brenner, state president, concerning applications for this fund. The medical loan scholarship was created at the biennial council held in Atlanta in 1923; the scholarship of $1,000 per year from the interest of the war emergency service fund, the loan to be to a woman student who can fulfill all of the requirements which are stated in full in rules given for applicants.

Miss Edythe Hershey, of New York and Pennsylvania, was awarded the first scholarship and studied medicine at the University of Texas four years, graduating one week before the biennial in San Antonio and appeared on the biennial program. Dr. Hershey specialized in pediatrics. Mrs. Maginnis' letter follows: "My dear Mrs. Brenner: Enclosed find rules and regulations governing the medical scholarship loan. Mrs. Charles F. Miller, Fort Scott, Kansas, is chairman of this committee. I am a member of the committee and I am anxious to have the applications of the young women in your state able to qualify. In order to facilitate matters in receiving applications from worthy young women, I suggest that you have published in your state organ rules and regulations 2, 3, 4, 5, 8 and 9. Have applications sent to you and then forwarded to me or have them sent direct to me. Any assistance you render the committee will be deeply appreciated."

The rules and regulations of the medical scholarship loan include:

(1) The General Federation of Women's Clubs through the medical loan scholarship committee, shall award one thousand ($1,000) dollars per annum, from the interest of the war service fund, as a loan for four consecutive years, to a woman student under the requirements hereinafter set forth.

(2) The applicant must give reference, attesting her educational qualifications, integrity, character, serious mindedness, ability and fitness for service, which is deemed especially necessary and vital to a successful career in the medical profession.

(3) The student must have had a full college course and have been graduated from some college of high standing, with the degree of A. B. or B. C., whose curriculum would admit her to the classes of an accredited class A medical school for a four-year course. Same to be selected with the approval of the committee.

(4) She must be willing to serve two years internship in a hospital of recognized standing, in addition to her four years medical course. The hospital to be approved by the committee.

(5) She must be willing to practice medicine, or to serve in public health work, as many years as she has enjoyed the use of the loan fund.

(6) It shall be fully understood that the student, by notifying the chairman of the medical loan scholarship committee, may have the privilege of paying to the treasurer of the General Federation of Woman's Clubs, any note in full, or in part, at any time prior to the due date or maturity of said note, or secure an extension of loan, within the discretion of the committee.

(7) Each of the four notes shall be drawn to fall due seven years from the date of the loan, which would bring to maturity one note each year for four years in succession, or seven, eight, nine and ten years, respectively, from date of first loan. If found to be a more convenient arrangement for the student, the notes may be made for five hundred ($500) dollars each, instead of one thousand ($1,000) dollars.

(8) All students awarded a scholarship by the committee shall be willing, if required, to stand a physical examination acceptable to one of the life insurance companies, of recognized national standing, and be willing to have her life insured by the General Federation of Woman's Clubs, provided that all of the expense of carrying such policy be assumed by the federation.

(9) The student must agree to keep the chairman of the medical loan scholarship committee in touch, at all times, with her whereabouts, and submit, from time to time, an official copy of her standing and grading in the medical school.

(10) Copies of these rules and regulations, together with copies of all notes executed during the four years, shall be given to the student, the general federation treasurer, the finance chairman, and the committee for their files and the original notes shall be held and collected by the committee, and all money shall be turned into the treasury of the general federation as collected.

(11) These rules and regulations shall govern all additional medical scholarships awarded.

The printing of these rules and regulations, and all information from time to time in the "News" of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, shall be considered full and sufficient notice to the several state federations. The committee urges the state federations to assist in securing students of the highest standing for the medical loan scholarship. As the committee deems it advisable to have a waiting list, applications for the scholarship may be sent in accompanied by all information required for consideration.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick Honored By Albany Club

The Albany Woman's club gave a luncheon recently in honor of Tallulah Falls school and places were reserved for 65 guests, the luncheon being sponsored by Mrs. C. E. Fryer, local chairman of Tallulah Falls school, and a sister-in-law of Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, field representative of Tallulah, who was honor guest. Horns of plenty and pyramids of fruits made colorful centerpieces on the tables. A delicious turkey luncheon was served by Mrs. Fryer and her committee, composed of the following ladies: Mrs. Hugh Conley, Mrs. R. H. Waugh, Mrs. E. H. Muse, Mrs. C. N. Barbee, Mrs. W. P. Lifsey and Mrs. E. W. Urbanneck. Miss Louise Bennett, field representative of Shorter college, was a guest of the club and sang one number, "The Star," most delightfully. Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick was presented by the president, Mrs. C. J. Bott, and told interesting facts concerning the origin and development of our Tallulah school and appealing stories of the children and the great work Miss Davis and her staff of teachers are doing. Mrs. Fitzpatrick presented the Albany club with a picture of the first graduating class from Tallulah High school department.

Following this talk Mrs. Katherine Blessed gave two violin solos, accompanied by Mrs. L. H. Averitte, Jr. A large birthday cake crowned with 19 lighted candles was presented to Mrs. Fitzpatrick. After making a wish for Tallulah's progress the candles were blown out and the cake cut and served to the guests. A generous collection was taken for Tallulah.

The new officers of the Albany Woman's club for the year 1928-1929 are: President, Mrs. C. J. Bott; first vice president, Mrs. J. B. Lanier; second vice president, Mrs. J. B. Waddill; recording secretary, Mrs. E. H. Kalmon; assistant recording secretary, Mrs. J. I. Davis; corresponding secretary, Miss Janie Davant; treasurer, Mrs. Omar Sanders; press correspondent, Mrs. E. W. Urbanneck. The next meeting of the club will be a Christmas musical under the direction of the chairman of music and community singing, Mrs. H. H. Perry.

Sixth District Displays Inman Trophy at Annual Convention

State and district officers displaying the Inman trophy just before the meeting of the sixth district convention held at Locust Grove, October 3. This flag was won by the district in a contest in singing "Georgia Land," the federation song. Mrs. Samuel M. Inman, of Atlanta, donates each year a flag similar to this to the district winning in this contest. Left to right: Mrs. E. L. Coleman, Barnesville; Mrs. S. V. Sanford, Athens, first vice president; Mrs. J. A. Corry, Barnesville; Mrs. L. A. Collier, president of the sixth district; Mrs. John Quinn, Barnesville; Mrs. L. C. Tyus, Barnesville; Mrs. A. H. Brenner, state president, Augusta, Ga.; Mrs. E. A. Fish, Barnesville; Mrs. R. P. Cotter, Barnesville. Photo by Brady Studio, of Barnesville.

Winder Woman's Club Observes Arbor Day With Fine Program

Last Friday, the day set by Georgia for the observance of Arbor Day, an appropriate program followed by tree planting was given by the woman's club on the club house lot. The program was given by the division of memorials and highway trees, Mrs. Mildred Pledger, chairman of committee and featured: Invocation, Rev. John Wood; flag salute, Boy Scouts; song, America, the Beautiful; origin of Arbor Day, Mrs. A. D. McCurry; poem, "Planting of the Tree," Mrs. Rubye Eberhardt; remarks on memorial trees to be planted, Mrs. H. A. Caruthers.

Lombardy poplars were planted on the sidewalk in front of lot in honor the N. J. Kelly, one of the most beloved and distinguished citizens, who presented the lot to the club for a club house. Other trees were planted in honor of the past presidents of the club, including Mrs. Nanie Crozier Wood, first president; Mrs. W. H. Quarterman, second president; Mrs. P. A. Flanigan, third president, and organizer of the club, and Mrs. A. D. McCurry, fourth president. Water oaks, presented to the very wonderful work during the past year in impressing on the people the importance of tree planting and preservation, throughout the city and county schools. Book-marks, leaflets and posters were furnished all the schools. Talks were given through the county schools, articles were published in the local papers and many trees were planted.

Winder citizens and passersby are requested to remember the poem, entitled, "The Wayfarer," when passing by these trees.

Winder Young Matrons' Club Holds Meeting

The Winder Young Matron's club met Thursday at the home of Mrs. H. T. Flannigan, and in the absence of the president, Mrs. W. A. Bradley, Mrs. Flannigan, first vice president, presided. The meeting was opened with the singing of "My Georgia Land," and the reading of the litany. The treasurer made an excellent report, the Halloween benefit party given in the lovely home of Mrs. W. R. Brown, October 31, netted $44, and members expressed warmest appreciation to the friends who by their cooperation made this success possible.

Committees in charge reported that work was being done to beautify the park and cemetery, plans are being made for a garden show in the spring. A fine box was packed and sent to the storm sufferers in Florida. Education week was observed by sponsoring a program on education at the school with Mrs. John S. Wood as speaker; book week was also observed.

The business session was made as brief as possible in order to give ample time for the splendid Armistice program prepared by the department of citizenship. The first number was a solo sung by Mrs. C. O. Maddox, Miss Charlotte McCants read "In Flanders Fields" after which Mrs. Sam Williams gave Miss Moena Michael's beautiful response, "We Shall Keep the Faith." Little Billie Summerour played "Keep the Home Fires Burning" on the violin. Little Billie's father was a soldier in the world war.

Mrs. Hugh Crooks, president of the Woman's club at Jefferson, was an honor guest and read an inspiring paper on "Educating for Citizenship." The speaker for the occasion was Colonel Alton Hosch, of the law department of the University of Georgia, who spoke on "Why Observe Armistice Day." He reviewed the basic causes of the world war and made an earnest plea for world peace. Colonel Hosch's charming personality and eloquence thrilled his audience and left a lasting impression. The closing number on the program was a solo "My Own United States," sung by Miss Ora Lee Camp. Refreshments were served by the hostess during the social hour.

Augusta Club Plans $2,000 Scholarship For Tallulah

At the next meeting of the Augusta Woman's club, to be held Tuesday, December 18, the program will be under the auspices of the Tallulah Falls school committee, Mrs. L. F. Moody, chairman, and the speaker will be Mrs. W. B. Smith, of Tennille, state chairman of Tallulah Falls for the State Federation of Women's clubs.

At a recent meeting of the board of the woman's club it was decided to raise a fund of $2,000 to endow a perpetual scholarship at the Tallulah Falls school in the name of the Augusta Woman's club. This will insure a free education for some boy or girl in perpetuity. Mrs. Moody, the Augusta chairman, is urging liberal contributions from Augusta club women for this purpose. She wishes to get $200 in hand by the meeting on the 18th, and any one willing to contribute is asked either to bring a contribution to the meeting, or to send the money to her between now and then.

The industrial school at Tallulah is the pride of the Georgia club women who support it, and it is the only school in this country supported by club women. A wonderful work for the Georgia children from the countain regions where there are no schools is being fostered within this educational institution, and the club women of Augusta are enthusiastic over the idea of having Augusta represented in perpetuity by the proposed scholarship.

Brooks Woman's Club Donates to Sanitarium.

Mrs. William Malone was hostess to the Brooks Woman's club last Friday at her home with Miss Sara Gable assisting, and was called to order with Miss Sara Gable, president, in the chair. Mrs. J. B. Moody, secretary, called the roll and read minutes of the last meeting. Mrs. J. H. Jones, treasurer, gave a report of the finances. The club was asked to make donations to the state sanitarium. Mrs. J. I. Woolsey gave a talk on "Arbor Day" and presented a happy thought to plant a dogwood tree at each of the churches.

Mrs. J. I. Woolsey presided over the program, which was as follows: Song, "Oh, Little Town of Bethlehem," assembly singing. Story of the nativity—Bible reading—Mrs. Charles Lunsford. Vocal solo, "Far Away," by Mrs. William Malone. Paper, "This Is My Son," Mrs. E. N. Crawford. Piano solo, "Star of the East," Mrs. Nannie Henderson. Reading, "Santa's Visit," little Miss Mary Haynes. Piano solo, quartet from opera "Rigoletto" by Verdi, Miss Pauline Swanson. The reading of "If—Two Miles After Kiplin," by Miss Gladys Craven, brought applause.

The guests were invited into the dining room where an attractive Christmas tree was filled with gifts for each member. Miss Sara Gable cut the gifts from the tree and little Miss Mary Haynes passed them to the members. Mrs. J. I. Woolsey poured coffee. Others assisting in serving were Mrs. William Malone, Miss Sara Gable, Mrs. Charles Lunsford and little Miss Mary Haynes.

Sycamore Woman's Club's Yearly Activity.

Sycamore Woman's club's yearly report covers many activities in which the women have been unceasing and constructive and as a result many worthy causes have been sponsored which has aided humanity in very many material ways. One of the outstanding features was the erection of a beautiful log cabin on Main street to be used for a library which is to furnish reading material for several districts of the county. Funds were secured in various ways with which to erect this cabin. J. M. Tomlinson, of Albany, Ga., ever a benefactor of good causes, donated the logs from his pine orchards near town, and several other friends gave money. A booth was sponsored at the South Georgia exposition, at Ashburn, Ga., for which a prize was awarded in money, and the town of Sycamore donated a substantial purse. The club gave money for the relief of the storm sufferers in south Florida. A little girl has been kept in school and clothed by the club. A little boy sufering with infantile paralysis was sent to Dr. Hoke's clinic in Atlanta, Ga., for examination and treatment.

The home beautification project was sponsored in the form of a contest. A prize in money was awarded to the group making the most improvement around their homes. This did much to encourage the improvement of yards by putting out plantings in the most effective ways, putting up lattice under the edge of the house and porches, and putting a coat of paint on their houses. Memorial trees of magnolia, holly, dogwood and crepe myrtle were planted on the highway and streets. The health clinic sponsored by the club did very much, indeed, toward controlling and subduing contagious and infectious diseases. Through the efforts of the club a Parent-Teacher association was organized and the first year's dues was paid by the club.

State President Issues Message

Dear Friends: Christmas is almost here. True, the clubs have been reminding us of it for some time. The Vidalia Woman's club honored me with an invitation to a special luncheon and then to attend the regular meeting Thursday, December 13, to hear their Christmas cantata. A mere matter of two hundred miles; but I could hardly hope to get back in time for the evening service at church. After the district meetings, and the Southeastern council, I was able to settle down for a two weeks' meeting at my church, preaching morning and evening, with this one interruption.

The Augusta Woman's club began singing Christmas carols on December 3. It was a highway beautification luncheon, however, and I wish every club in Georgia could have seen the wonderful highway, with a bridge in the middle, that ran the length of the central table. Mrs. Henry Bird would have advised them to hard surface it, for the automobiles had to stand still in all that sand. But Mrs. W. T. Roberts would have delighted in the lovely flowers and trees all along the way. Yet Dr. McHatton warned them that no highway planting should ever be undertaken without first going over the entire road with an expert in landscape gardening. Preserve the views, he urged, "but where is such a person to be found?" asked Mrs. Speer, of the Sands Hill Garden club. "We have one at the university," said he, "but he is in great demand, and you may have to wait; put in your application at once."

But to get back to Christmas. I am going to ask every club in the federation to give me a present. I want them all to enter me on the club roll as an honorary member. I wish I might say as an active member, for I am doing actual work for every one, but the dues might be a little too much for me just now. But the reason I want to be enrolled is because I find that it does a lot of good for a club to have the state president as a member. Here I have been telling the Augusta Woman's club about their duty toward Tallulah and what pride they should take in the school, and in all these years my appeals seemed to have made very little impression. Of course they did "their duty in maintenance, and specials," but now, Mrs. Moody, the chairman, just says, "I think we should have a perpetual scholarship," and every one votes—"yes"—as though it were the most natural thing possible. And when I called Mrs. Moody and asked if something else for Tallulah could be done, she said, "Yes, of course."

So I expect to ask that every club make a new year's resolution. I want to be certain that you say, "Yes;" so please put me down as a member. All of this reminds me that I am an honorary member of the Beach Island, S. C., Interdependent club. I must go over to see them and remind them that they have a member who is state president in Georgia. I'll tell them from my own experience just how Mrs. Maginnis feels in regard to her clubs; her pride, her hopes, her devotion to them.

Just one other thought in regard to Christmas. The Christmas spirit is much abroad in the federation. At San Antonio I told you they all agreed that only through nourishing the human soul could we get anywhere. One said "Christianity alone has brought us a gospel of the infinite worth of man, the value of man's life, the concrete realization of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, transforming and redeeming ideas to which mankind, alas, is even now far short of having attained." We have thought of the federation as being non-religious, because it is non-sectarian. But this Christmas of 1928 sees a mighty awakening in federation affairs.

Last year we studied the labor saving devises, essential if women are to have leisure for other things. This year Mrs. Sherman is asking for a selected list of clergymen whose advice is to be sought as to the best method of giving religious training in the home. "What can be done to make religion real and vital and individually important?" From the answers given to these and other questions our American home department will prepare a pamphlet for our use on the vital subject of Religious Instruction for Children.

Mrs. L. A. Miller said at the biennial, "International good will is but the love of Christ extended like a garment to cover the world; education is but wisdom incarnate in daily living; art is but a recognition and imitation of divine thought expressing itself in joyous creative activity; home-making is a demonstration of the kingdom of heaven on a small scale, love enclosed." Take away the inspiration of religion from our daily living and life has no purpose and meaning."

It is then well that we begin early to sing our carols and to tell the Bethlehem story in word and in deed.

Faithfully yours,

ELEANOR L. BRENNER.

Mrs. Sanford Is Honor Guest Of Lexington Woman's Club

The Lexington Woman's club met Thursday at the home of Mrs. W. K. Howard, with Mrs. S. V. Sanford, first vice president of the state federation and Mrs. Andrew Erwin, prominent club woman of Athens, as honor guests. The president, Mrs. Hamilton McWhorter, called the meeting to order and Mrs. F. C. Reed read the Club Collect, and Miss McWhorter introduced the honor guests.

Reports from several committees were given; Mrs. Earle Reynolds, finance chairman, reported the amount of $24.10 raised from annual Christmas bazaar. Mrs. W. H. Maxwell reported meeting of junior club. Mrs. G. A. Barron, education chairman reported, book week program, terminating with a book shower for the school library, a splendid success. Forty-eight volumes were added to the library, including a set of Werner Recitation series, which was presented by the club.

Mrs. McWhorter asked the junior chairman, Mrs. W. H. Maxwell, to take charge of the Christmas carols. The program chairman, Mrs. F. C. Reed, took charge of the meeting, and Mrs. W. K. Howard, Fine Arts chairman, assisted with the program which was on "Georgia Poets, Authors and Musicians." Mrs. W. T. Cunningham gave the "Life of Frank L. Stanton;" Mrs. G. A. Barron, the "Life of Augustus Evans Wilson;" Mrs. Minnie Crawford read: "A Sketch of Corra Harris;" Mrs. E. C. Maxwell gave, "The Life of Uncle Remus;" Mrs. R. F. Brooks read interesting facts pertaining to the life of Miss Mildred Rutherford; Miss Orr read a selection from Edgar A. Guest; Miss Mary Alexander then gave an interpretation of the music of the head and heart, with vocal solos; Miss Mary Brooks interpreted the music of the feet with a piano selection.

A musician contest was enjoyed after which, Mrs. Sanford gave the club a most interesting and delightful talk on "Club Life and Activities," using as a theme: "Be ye doers and not bearers only." In closing Mrs. Sanford commended the Lexington club for their past achievements, their loyalty to their school, etc., stressed her belief in the fact that education was the biggest business of the nation.

Public Welfare Message Issued Through Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick

Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, of Portland, Ore., chairman of public welfare of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, sent through Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, vice president of this national committee, the following message to the southeastern council, in Asheville, November 23 and 24:

"Please convey from our department to southeastern council and stress Mrs. Sippel's keynote of 'community service.' Announce transfer of Indian welfare and community service divisions to our department of public welfare and stress the newer name of the division of correction. A health advisory board from national health agencies is being invited to serve and to determine future development of health program of our committee, for which a new handbook will be written early in January.

"Splendid material is now ready in Indian welfare and a challenge will be thrown out to all states to participate in a national program for the Indian. Sorry that distance and occupation makes it impossible for me to be with the southeastern council in person to ask their earnest interest in the public welfare programs which will be laid before them."

State Press Chairman Stresses General Federation News Value

BY JULIA M. SPARKS.
State Press Chairman.

Your state press chairman desires to call attention to the official organ of the general federation, the General Federation News, the splendid magazine which is our own trade journal and is necessary if we would do our best work. So many inquiries have been received as to who is entitled to the News that the list of those who, by virtue of their office, are entitled to receive the magazine is copied from the November number: all state officers, district presidents, state department and division chairmen, state transportation chairmen, presidents of all per capita paying clubs. If you hold any of the above offices and are not receiving the News write general federation headquarters at once and give them your name and the name of the president or chairman you succeeded, so that the change be made. State headquarters has notified the general federation of all changes as soon as they come to headquarters, but some have never been reported.

The district chairmen and the individual clubwoman needs the Federation News to carry on her work just as much as the president does, and for several years the General Federation News has urged clubs to subscribe for the entire membership and in November issue of the magazine names of 99 clubs that are 100 per cent is given, three of these are in Georgia—Twentieth Century club, Boston; Beautiful America, Buford; Woman's club, Hoschton.

Single subscriptions $1 a year; two years $1.50; five years $3; special rate to clubs half of whose membership subscribes, 75 cents a year; rate to clubs whose entire membership subscribe, 50 cents a year. All subscriptions payable in advance.

The Federation News compares favorably with the highest priced magazines in makeup, being printed on best book paper, clear print and illustrated. If the family often wonder what you find to interest you in club work and why you love it so much, keep a copy of the Federation News on the living room table and they will soon understand what the federation means in making the world a better place in which to live and work. If you cannot get your club to take it as a whole, give it to some club friend for a Christmas present. Address orders for subscriptions to the Federation News, 1734 N. St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Clubhouse Location Discussed in Columbus.

Location was discussed at length at the meeting of the governing board of the Columbus Woman's Club House association held Friday morning at the public library. As yet no definite location has been decided upon, however, several sites are under consideration, and have been recommended to the board which composes this committee. Several new members were admitted to the club, among them the Cotillion club, Miss Mabel Hutchins, Mrs. McInnes, Mrs. Lovett Wade.

Two card parties have recently been given for the benefit of the Club House association, one by Mrs. W. R. Blanchard's circle when $42 was cleared, and another by Mrs. Frank Lammus' circle, which netted $87. This was added to the club house fund.

Mrs. C. J. Meredith as treasurer announced a balance of five thousand three hundred and eighty-one dollars in the treasury. Mrs. Gafney's circle will entertain at an evening party December 18, at the Muscogee club to which the gentlemen as well as the ladies are cordially invited.

Mrs. R. K. Rambo Is Honored By Brenau College

Mrs. Robert K. Rambo, of Atlanta, has been elected to membership on the board of trustees of Brenau college at Gainesville, her terms of office to begin at once, this announcement being made here by Hayne Palmour, president of the board of trustees, through the secretary, Sidney Smith. Mrs. Rambo is one of the best known women in Georgia, being prominent socially and as a leader in the activities of organized women throughout the state. She is also well known in church and educational work as well as in patriotic service through the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Daughters of the Confederacy.

Mrs. Rambo is second vice president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs and served with distinction as president of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs. She teaches a large Sunday school class of business women and has always shown a deep interest in the educational uplift of young girls. Mrs. Rambo will act as program chairman of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, which will hold its 33d annual meeting at Gainesville in May, 1929.

Brenau college, of which Dr. H. J. Pearce is president, is announcing a strong addition to the faculty of its music school this year. Franciszek Zachara, who holds high rank as a concert pianist, has been added to the faculty. It is announced that Mr. Zachara will give one or more recitals at Brenau college during the session, which is expected to attract music lovers from various sections of the state.

Mrs. McDaniel Hostess To Norcross Club.

The December meeting of the Norcross Woman's club was held at the home of the hostess, Mrs. C. A. McDaniel. Miss Lola Key, the librarian of public library, made report of 62 books having been given to library during November by the "Lend-a-Hand Society of Boston, Mass. The library donated ten books to the Nacoochee school. Mrs. H. J. Reynolds reported the offer of a lot from Mrs. H. V. Jones through the club to the community for a recreation ground, swimming pool, tennis court, etc. The community to finance it, and in case it ceases to be used for these purposes to revert to the estate of Mrs. Jones. The club indorsed the proposition, and a committe of five was appointed to submit the offer of Mrs. Jones to the city council.

Mrs. Keady reported the observance of Armistice day in all the churches. Mrs. B. F. Summerour reported that her committee on library grounds had made preparation of the ground for grass seed and the bulbs that had been donated. The club sang "America—the Beautiful." Mrs. W. M. McElroy read a paper on the need of physical as well as mental development of school children; Miss Lola Key read the "Floating Child;" Mrs. A. J. Johnson read an original paper, "The Family, God's Gift, and the Responsibility of Parents."

Civic Improvement Club Hears Many Reports.

The Norcross Civic Improvement club held the December meeting Wednesday afternoon at clubhouse, and the vice president, Mrs. T. E. Summerour, presided. The treasurer, Mrs. McLauchlin, reported a balance of $625 on hand.

The committee serving lunches at the school reported $114 to be turned over to the treasurer. The home economic chairman of the high school, Miss Lena Bess Medlock, made a strong appeal for this department of the school and how the club women might help. Mrs. D. K. Webster, chairman of Tallulah Falls school, asked that club members contribute bulbs, and rose cuttings to be sent to the school. Misses Winnie Letson and Annette O'Kelley played a piano duet. Miss Martha Elliott read the Patriot.

The club adjourned and a social half hour enjoyed. Refreshments were served.

He's Santa The Year 'Round

CHRISTMAS is the happy season of the year—a time when everyone makes plans to spread remembrances and good cheer. It is our greatest demonstration of thoughtfulness. Dad, as well as the rest of the family, stops to consider the needs and desires of friends and loved ones. But while the rest of the family is thinking solely of Christmas, Dad must keep other things in mind. He must be exactly as thoughtful of his family's future. His plans must put a halo of future security over Christmas Day—a halo that can best be provided through adequate insurance for the family.

Let us show you how you can arrange for a Christmas check for your family to continue throughout their lives after you have passed on.

Y. W. C. A. Activities Revolve Around Many Christmas Parties

Christmas parties are being planned by the departments of the Atlanta Y. W. C. A. The girl reserves of the Amicus club, girls of Girls' and Commercial High schools, will adopt family welfare children, calling for them at their homes and returning them after the party to be given Thursday afternoon, December 20, at the "Y." Each child will be provided with dolls, toys, fruits and candies by Amicus girls. The names of these children, from 4 to 7 years of age, were secured by Miss Daisy Hoover, secretary of the girl reserve department, from the Family Welfare society and would have no Christmas cheer were it not for some such entertainment as has been the custom of the girls of the Amicus club to give. A lighted tree will hold the gifts and one of the girls will be Santa Claus.

Another party will be given at the Y. W. C. A. for the little girl reserves of the Blue Triangle club, the Pansy club of the Exposition Cotton Mill, and the Stewart Avenue Day Home. These children will have their party Tuesday, December 18. They will sing Christmas carols around the tree and have Santa tell them stories and direct games. Refreshments will be served to the one hundred who will attend.

The business girls will have a "hobo" party Thursday evening, December 20, at 6 o'clock, in their club rooms at the "Y." Members will come dressed as hoboes, be served apple cider and doughnuts over a bar, play old-fashioned games, and sing and dance around a tree.

The Rainbow club girls will stage a party around the old fireplace in the hall of the Y. W. C. A., and will sing and tell stories while toasting marshmallows over the fire. Miss Constance Rumbough, secretary for the industrial department, especially wants those girls who have been attending school at night or have not been attending the regular meetings because of illness, to join in the party Saturday evening, December 22, at 7:30 o'clock.

The Friendship club of the industrial department will have its Christmas entertainment at the Exposition Cotton Mill community house on Monday evening, December 24, at 7 o'clock, the program not yet announced.

Miss Mildred Wells, secretary of the business girls' department, and Miss Constance Rumbough, secretary of the industrial girls, will attend a conference for business and industrial secretaries in Knoxville, Tenn., December 19-21.

Miss Lucille Crabtree, director of health education, announces that gym and swimming classes will be closed the week of December 24 to January 1, and that the pool will not be open for dips during that time.

Russell and Fulton High schools had planned parties and services for the Christmas season but will not be able to have them because the schools have been closed on account of sickness.

Brookhaven News Is of Interest.

ONLY 9 OF 58 PASS EXAMS IN PHARMACY

Macon, Ga., December 15.—(AP)—President Jesse A. Mitchell, of the state board of pharmacy, announced here Saturday that only nine persons out of 58 applicants who took the examination in Atlanta on December 6 and 7, have been granted licenses as druggists. None ranked high enough to obtain licenses as apothecary or pharmacist, it was stated.

Those who passed the test were: Miss Ruth Washburn, Fort Myers, Fla.; A. G. Clements, Rhine, Ga.; C. H. Blitch, Homerville, Ga.; J. Robert McGarrah, Plains, Ga.; Neville T. Lee, Frankfort, Ky.; A. A. Citrynell, Emory university; Louis C. Lockhart, Tennille, Ga.; William N. Newsom, Atlanta, and Herman M. Cohen, Atlanta.

E. J. HARDIN HEADS SIGMA CHI ALUMNI GROUP IN ATLANTA

At a meeting of the Sigma Chi fraternity Friday at the Ansley hotel, E. J. Hardin was elected president of the Atlanta Alumni chapter for the coming year, succeeding Roy Goree.

E. J. HARDIN.

Other officers elected were G. R. Mitchell, secretary and treasurer; James A. Dombrowsky, first vice president, and J. W. Harris, Jr., second vice president.

Mr. Hardin, assistant vice president of the Retail Credit company, is a graduate of the University of Georgia in the class of 1915. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, honorary scholastic fraternity, the Piedmont Driving club and the Capital City club. For several years he has been active in the work of the Boy Scouts and is now president of the court of honor.

At the meeting of the fraternity the chief speaker was Hamilton Douglas, who spoke on the work of the chapter during the past year. Other speakers were James Rankin, representing the Emory chapter; J. W. Harris, representing the Georgia chapter, and Warren Booth, of the Georgia Tech chapter.

3 PRISONERS TRY TO BLOW WAY OUT OF THOMAS JAIL

Thomasville, Ga., December 15.—(Special.)—Ernest Surrat, Walter Friddle and Cay Clemmons, three of the five men who escaped from the Thomas county jail a short time ago by sawing their way out through the gallows, and were later captured by officers in Marietta, have staged another escape attempt.

Getting hold of a barrel of disinfectant in the Camilla jail, they touched off the inflammable fluid. Instead of creating an opportunity to escape in the subsequent excitement, however, their way was blocked by a crowd which hastily gathered around the jail.

Sheriff Gordon Davis, of this county, expects the three men to be turned over to him next week for trial in Thomasville city court, two of them having been in jail here charged with bad check operations, and the other with burglary.

WESLEY GROUPS TO GIVE CHRISTMAS PAGEANT TONIGHT

A Christmas pageant entitled, "At the Door of the Inn," will be presented at 7:30 o'clock tonight at the Wesley Memorial church by the young people of the Alpha class and the Epworth league. Incidental music will be supplied by the chorus choir, including the Angel's Echo choir, and the Adesta Fidelis. Miss Anne Bowie, local elocutionist, will be the reader and director.

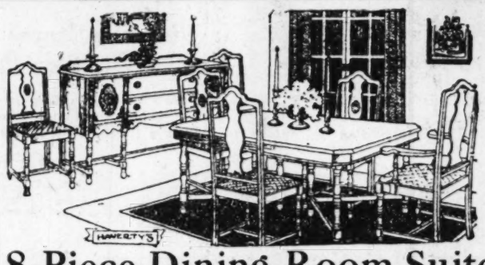

In addition to the nativity scenes, there will be given a symbolic mystery play taking place at the inn, in Bethlehem, and representing the human heart with its doors closed to its Christmas guests, Poverty, Humility and Sorrow.

The public has been invited to attend.

BARNESVILLE GROUP PLANS CLUBHOUSE

Barnesville, Ga., December 15.—(Special.)—Mrs. A. H. English was elected president of the club house commission here at a meeting Friday night. Other members of the commission are: Mrs. L. A. Collier, president of the Woman's club; Mrs. Tom Murphy, president of the Three Arts club; Mrs. C. H. Willis, president of the U. D. C., and Mrs. J. W. Reeves, president of the W. C. T. U.; Miss Mamie Mitchell, Mrs. J. M. Anderson, Mrs. Joe D. Smith. The purpose of the commission is to aid in the building of a new club house. Mrs. J. M. Anderson was elected secretary.

STATE'S URGENT ROAD ISSUE.

On this page is a communication from Mrs. I. Springer, of Sparta, who spent all of Thanksgiving day trying to get from Atlanta home over the state highways. She says her life and those of her companions were in constant peril, and that all along the road she saw automobiles ditched, overturned and stuck in the mud to a degree they could not be extricated.

This sort of thing is enough to exasperate even the patience of a woman, and she is perhaps not far from facts when she suggests that if the women were allocated to road building and men to the kitchens better conditions would ensue.

At any rate, Mrs. Springer's complaint is not unlike hundreds of others that reach us, particularly following a day or two of rain.

The whole plan of highway construction and maintenance in Georgia is wrong.

The law is as faulty as the roads.

The county unit system is wrong.

The method of shoddy construction is wrong. The crazy-quilt plan of paving is wrong. And the people of Georgia are justly "up in arms" about it, and are determined there shall be a change in laws and in methods.

Georgia bad roads have constituted a serious detriment to development in this state. They have not merely cost our own people, who operate motor cars, and who pay heavy motor taxes, millions of dollars in "mud taxes," and in expensive upkeeps, but they have advertised the state adversely throughout the nation, and kept thousands of would-be homeseekers and tourists away.

On two occasions the voters of Georgia have spoken on this issue, the solving of the highway problem having been the paramount issue in both of Governor Hardman's campaigns.

The general assembly meets in regular session late in June, 1929. If the highway problem is not disposed of before then it certainly must be so well under way by the date of the regular session that it can be disposed of in the proper way and without delay.

What Georgia needs is a system of connected, permanently paved highways from state lines to state lines, and it needs and must have such a system at the earliest possible moment consistent with sound economics. That means a capitalization of motor tax resources, a reconstruction of the operating plans, and a revision and strengthening of present laws.

Highway building is a business, and Georgia must solve the problem in a sound business way.

THE "FLYING WINGS."

The aviation interests of America are deeply interested in the news from Germany that the Junkers Airplane company is buildling a giant 50-passenger monoplane of over 2,000-horsepower for transoceanic service.

Besides its great size, several other unusual features are announced in the new plane, which is known as the "Flying Wings," and technically termed "type J 38" by the Junkers company.

In this monoplane the passenger quarters are in the wings, which are over six feet thick and 120 feet long. The cabin quarters, which are divided into smoking and nonsmoking sections, are themselves 75 feet long. They contain convertible seats and berths.

The wings also contain the plane's four 550-horsepower motors, for repair or attention while in flight. Each wing holds two of the motors, which are the "L 55" type, formerly water-cooled, but now being adapted to air cooling. The plane will also have a well-equipped kitchen and a super-radio set.

By means of a special compressor device it is said the new plane can fly at almost 20,000 feet with hardly any loss of power. However, the company has announced its intention of trying to increase its ceiling to over 32,000 feet. If tests at the new ceiling prove successful trans-oceanic passenger service will be shortly inaugurated, it is claimed.

MEXICO'S GOVERNMENT.

With the support of former President Calles, and the smoothing-out of the differences with the labor group the new president of Mexico begins his administration under a fairly clear sky.

There will probably always be insurgency in that country. Such a large element of the population belong to the peon classes that it is not difficult for a military revolutionist, or a bandit leader, to recruit a considerable force. But the firm hands of the late President Obregon, and of his successor Calles, have done much to restore standardized government to that country.

It is believed that President Gil, though not a military figure, will continue the good work accomplished by fairness, progressiveness and diplomacy.

The new president has retained three cabinet secretaries and many of the officials of lesser category who were part of the administration of his predecessor.

Secretary Luis Montes de Oca retains the portfolio of finance and public credit and will continue the financial policy of economy and strict adherence to the budget system which he instituted.

Dr. Jose Manuel Puig Casauranc is to continue as secretary of industry, commerce and labor and General Joaquin Amaro remains as secretary of war and marine, taking General Abundio Gomez as adjutant general.

General Pascual Ortiz Rubio, Mexican ambassador in Brazil and former secretary of communications, is called to the portfolio of state (gobernacion). Felipe Canales, chief clerk under President Portes Gil in this department, is named subsecretary, and Ignacio Garcia Tellez becomes chief clerk.

Deputy Marte R. Gomez takes over the portfolio of agriculture and fomento, with Luis Arturo Romo as subsecretary and Alfonso Gonzalez Gallardo as chief clerk.

Ezequiel Padilla, federal attorney general under President Calles, goes to the portfolio of public instruction and belle arts, Professor Moises Saenz remaining as subsecretary and Professor Alfredo Uruchurtu as chief clerk.

Javier Sanchez Mejorada assumed the portfolio of communications and public works. Francisco L. Terminel, formerly subsecretary for agriculture, goes to communications in the same capacity. Javier J. Ostos is appointed chief clerk.

Professor Genaro Estrada remains as subsecretary of foreign relations, being in charge of that department pending the filling of this portfolio. Adolfo Cienfuegos y Camus remains as chief clerk of this department.

Juan de Dios Bojorquez remains as chief of the bureau of national statistics, an executive bureau which has been organized and perfected under his direction.

Enrique Medina is given the appointment as federal attorney general and Jose Aguilar y Maya that of attorney general for the federal district and territories.

Primo Villa Michel, who for a large part of the Calles administration, has been in charge of the government of the federal district as secretary, is appointed governor.

Antonio Castro y Leal, counselor of the Mexican embassy in Washington, is appointed rector of the National university.

Dr. Aquilino Villanueva becomes chief of the bureau of public health, Julio Fressinier Morin, comptroller and Arturo M. Elias, Mexican consul general and financial agent in New York, chief of government arsenals and factories. Fernando Torreblanca remains as private secretary to the president.

RELEASING REAL ESTATE TAXES.

One of the measures for affording financial relief to agriculture that is finding increasing favor is the release of real estate from state taxation.

It is contended by very able economists that any state in the union can now find ample sources of revenue without continuing ad valorem taxes upon land, whether in the country or in the urban areas. That does not mean that the land is to go free from any levies for public expenses, but that whatever burdens are laid upon it shall be for local purposes and be imposed by the people of the county and the municipality as the people themselves shall determine.

As things are now in most states the larger tax levies are those self-imposed in the lesser governmental units. Compare with them the common state levies would not appear heavy, but the removal of the state levies upon land would still afford substantial relief to the land owners in strictly rural areas.

Modern life employs many agencies unknown in the earlier eras of the national existence and which can be subjected to indirect and almost invisible taxation with large aggregate yields to the state. An at hand and convincing example is the gasoline tax which trickles from the motorist's pocket into the public treasury every time he stops at a filling station.

In every session of the Georgia general assembly there are legislators who can demonstrate beyond dispute that a general ad valorem real estate tax is both unfair and unnecessary. While it seems to figure fair on its face, in practical operation it is highly inequitable and often distressingly burdensome to the small farm owners of the state.

There are some months yet before the state assembly must tackle the tax problems of the commonwealth. The chance is open meantime for some wise and strong legislator to make an intensive study of this problem of land release from state taxation and get both fame and gratitude to himself by championing it to success.

A POOR FARMERS' STATEHOUSE.

Out in Nebraska, the state from which have emanated the lustiest wails from farmers in distress, and whose governor tried to raise a flivver-riding army of 100,000 aenemic agricolists to bulldoze the republican convention at Kansas City (and didn't get 'em), they are finishing up for early dedication a state capitol at Lincoln costing $10,000,000.

That is ten times more than the capitol building of Georgia here in Atlanta.

Presumably the Nebraska statehouse, with its lofty tower and lavish furnishings that amazed Governor Smith when he compared them with New York's cheaper equipments in its capitol at Albany, is to be "Exhibit A" when the famishing farmers of Nebraska go up to Washington to demand "relief" from the new congress.

But one can scarcely visualize the congressmen of Maine, or of Maryland, or of Ohio, or of Louisiana, or of Idaho, looking upon pictures of their modest and unmodern statehouses at home and then upon a panoramic view of the strutting structure out in Nebraska, having the cockles of their hearts burn with pity and appropriative charity for the Nebraska pleaders.

Those congressmen may have in hand, also, certain figures hunted out by Franklin Edson White, president of Armour & Co., and presented before the farmers and stockmen of Nebraska and sister states in convention at Omaha recently. His packing industry has had, perhaps, the largest dealings of any with the people of the corn, wheat, hog and cattle belts.

Mr. White told his hearers that the average man's income throughout the United States is $2,350 per annum; but that the average farmer's income in Kansas is $3,020, in South Dakota it is $3,356, in Nebraska $4,010, and in Iowa $4,180. He was frank to say that what the farmers in the west need in the way of relief is "fewer farms and higher prices."

He did not add, but a majority of the congressmen representing the $2,350 per year men may do so, that what the western farmers also need is fewer $10,000,000 capitol palaces!

LUCKY BABIES OF TODAY.

The American babies who were born in the year that Woodrow Wilson was elected president did not have the same chance to grow up and become president as the babies born this year.

In 1912 the births of babies were officially registered in few of the states, but this year they are so recorded in nearly all of the states. The registration area is about 90 per cent complete and embraces 93 per cent of the population of the country.

It is estimated that in 1912 some 300,000 babies in the United States died during their first year, but in 1926 there were but 182,000 such deaths—a clear saving of 118,000 for the average year. In 1915 10 per cent of the babies born died before their first birthday, but in 1926, the last for which we have official figures, only 73 died in their first year.

These splendid and invaluable results in life conservation are to be credited to the cooperation of the federal and state governments in maternity aids and infant hygiene. How noble is such work and how consonant with the spirit of Him who took little children in His arms and blessed them!

THE END OF HONEST SERVICE.

Up in the populous and rich state of Ohio there is a plain, frank, homespun gentleman by the name of Vic Donahey, who is serving out his third consecutive term as governor. He is a democrat who has been unbeatable in that almost solidly republican commonwealth. Few men in the history of the state have been more popular with the Buckeye people.

With the advent of January next he will end his six years of faithful and honest service and go out "to find a job in some business at a moderate salary to gain a modest competency."

Governor Donahey frankly confesses that he is "broke" because he has given his time and labors to the people of the state to the neglect of his personal fortunes and family's welfare. He says:

"I want the people of Ohio to know exactly where I stand. I have been wearing cheap clothes and economizing in every possible way and I can save but little out of my salary of $10,000 in this job."

It is another case like to Belisarius begging an obolum from the passers on the highway, and goes far to explain why so many able men in all the states shun the cares and costs of public service.

THE DEAD LINE ERASED.

Since the War Between the States democratic national candidates have not come into the south because they did not need to do so to conjure votes. The solid south was theirs without cozening.

The republican candidates did not come because they knew they could pick no ripe electoral apples from southern orchards.

Now that both Hoover and Smith came and spoke their minds let us hope the hoodoo is permanently chased to limbo. Hereafter, at all events, candidates will feel assured that they can come into the south as welcome guests and safeguarded political hunters.

THE HOBOES TREKKING SOUTH.

The esatern newspapers are noting the rapid disappearance from the flophouses and park benches of that region of the hoboes who summer in those salubrious cities. The tribe is on its annual trek to the south in side-door Pullmans and the brake rods.

Those birds of perennial migrations are not real objects of sympathy or charity. With scarce an exception they are professional grafters. The only treatment to which they are entitled and amenable is a prompt arrest by the police and a stiff stretch on a rock pile or in a public road gang.

Atlanta has had influxes in times past of these truculent travelers and our authorities should prepare in advance to pluck them as fast as they drift in, and see to it that their pleas of "can't find any work" are quickly made untenable.

THE DECLINE OF ORATORY

Recently the third international oratorical contest between high school students had a distinguished performance in our national capital.

The contestants were bright, ambitious youths from the eight countries—England, Germany, France, Argentina, Canada, Cuba, Mexico and the United States.

After each of the young Ciceros had strutted his stuff before eminently qualified judges the first place was awarded to the nervous, passionate representative of France.

Surprise has been voiced in private and in the public press that the American contender, after winning the championship of the states, should have reached only fourth place in the international contest. The suggestion follows that we Americans are losing our zest for oratory and that "flaming speech" may soon become another of our lost arts.

The fact is that the proportion of real orators in our country has been visibly diminished for many years. The great senate of the United States, once the forum in which were heard the famous orators of our country, is now almost barren of men who can exhibit the graces and power of true oratory. In the house of representatives at Washington there is not a member who stands out as an orator of force and fame.

In fact one looks almost in vain for a handful of truly great orators out of all the walks of our American life. The cult of business practically has abashed those who have felt the urge to cultivate classic oratory. The mob assails such with the chilling epithets of "windjammer" and "ballyhooer!"

The reason the young Frenchman won the leadership in the recent contest was not found in the matter of his oration, good as it was, but in the fact that he "turned himself loose" when he got on his feet. He threw his soul into his speech. Demosthenes and Cicero agreed that oratorical eloquence resides in "action" and "earnestness." The young Frenchman had both beyond his competitors. A new crop of American orators must also have them in high degree of cultivation.

A member of congress has made an appeal to abandon the militaristic features of the inaugural parade and embody only those typifying material things. For instance: Lame ducks, stool pigeons, office seekers, bootleggers, Hoovercrats, men riding hobbies and golfers in plus fours.

When it was announced that Herbert Hoover would occupy the Penny home at Miami previous to his inauguration, the boosters of other communities in Florida who had extended an invitation to him to accept their hospitality remarked in chorus: "Penny wise and pound foolish."

In his last message to congress the president used a small "n" in "negro," though capitalized in all previous papers. But the "I" had it in "Indian."

Someone hastens to advise us that they pronounce the name of President-elect Portes Gil as if spelled "heel." If a "g" is an "h" in the Mexican language, what in "h" is an "h?"

Republicans Are Planning To Solidify Their Southern Gains.

Washington, December 15.—(Special.)—The unexpected and disconcerting results of the national election are having equally unusual repercussions here at the capital. The politicians of every breed and opinion are earnestly discussing what has happened and what is probably to happen in the near future.

The natural elation and confidence of the republican conquistadores are reflected in the promptness with which Chairman Work, of their national committee, has leased permanent offices for himself and a large staff here near to the white house. He is calling into conference the principal leaders in congress and in the states with the purpose to maintain an active campaign for the election of a republican congress in 1930 and another sweeping national victory in 1932.

The commonness with which these republican magnates take for granted that Hoover will remain in the white house as president for eight years is remarkable. They assume that he will have no party rival for the 1932 nomination and that his re-election is a sure thing. They do not admit a possibility that he may fail to make good with the voters of the country and get from them a tremendous re-endorsement.

* * * *

To Nail Down Southern Gains.

It is reliably stated that one of the main endeavors of Chairman Work and the Hoover administrators will be to nail down the republican gains in the south. Plans are being formulated to so reorganize republican machines in the southern states as to make it possible and pleasant for those who voted the Hoover-Curtis ticket in November to stay in the republican ranks and share in making the republican programs of the future.

These leaders are too intelligent and well-informed not to know that the gains their party registered in the south were due to the democrats who revolted from their own party's ticket because of their religious and prohibition prejudices.

On the subject of prohibition the republican leaders believe they will be able to fully satisfy the expectations of the dry voters of the south. They say the only chance of the democrats to win back the trust and support of the revolters of 1928 is to nominate in 1932 a candidate for president who will be more militantly dry than Hoover is going to be?

Candidly, these republican captains do not believe the democratic bosses will do any such thing. And they will use their influence and strategy from now until the summer of 1932 to keep before the voters the picture of the democratic party as the possession and power of the wets of the east and the alien-controlled cities.

Aeneas Africanus to the Rear.

One of the very stern and positive intimations that come out of the republican G. H. Q. is that the colored brother is to be quietly, but effectively, eased out of leadership, offices and power in the southern states.

It is told me definitely by men who must know the facts ahead that the Ben Davises, Perry Howards, Bob Churches, Walter Cohens and "Gooseneck Bill" McDonalds are to fade from the republican scenarios in the south. There may be attempts to placate some of them with practically invisible but sustenant positions here in Washington, in Liberia, Haiti, Santo Domingo, or elsewhere. But they are no longer to lord it over the local republican organizations.

When your correspondent suggested that such suppressions might cause considerable negro insurgency, the answer came promptly that the self-disqualified masses of negroes in the south are of no value to the republican party and cannot now be made a necessary asset. What the intelligent republicans of the country now want, I am told, is to abandon their old wet-nursing of the negro for political and sentimental effects, and to build up in the south white republican organizations which can command the open respect and support of strong and influential southern men and women. Northern men and women are tired of being looked upon as "negro nursers."

* * * *

Cabinet Places Are Predicted.

On the authority of one of the closest of Hoover's personal associates, shortly following the election, I stated in this column that the south will be represented in the Hoover cabinet—possibly by two chiefs of departments. I am now told that the prediction holds good and may be assumed as a forthcoming fact.

The statement is made that the president has said that the great south "ought to be represented in the cabinet of the nation's president," and he said that before he was nominated at Kansas City and elected in November; hence it is taken to be one of his fixed principles of administration.

Naturally I was curious to learn what my confidential friend could suggest as to possible southern cabinet material, so I asked him. He mentioned the names of half a dozen prominent southern republicans whose qualifications added to their politics might appeal to Hoover.

The first written name in his list is that of Colonel David H. Blair, of North Carolina, the present highly esteemed and efficient commissioner of internal revenue. It is said that Hoover very highly regards the administrative abilities of Colonel Blair and that while Secretary Mellon would like to retain him in his present office he would strongly approve him for a cabinet post.

* * * *

Others Who Are Tagged.

Among the others who are tagged as possible, if Hoover draws upon the south, are Bascom Slemp and Colonel Henry Anderson, of Virginia; Claudius Huston, of Tennessee; Governor Morrow, of Kentucky, and R. B. Cregar, of Texas.

As for Bascom Slemp the doubt is raised of his ability to get confirmation by the senate, because of the mixture of his name in the patronage selling scandals in the south that are now under the spotlight of a senate committee. No one believes that Slemp was personally interested in the assessments laid upon office-hunters and office-holders, for he is several times a millionaire. But as chairman of the state republican committee he is charged with hijacking the job-holders in its interest. That would dispose many senators to turn thumbs down on him should he be nominated to a cabinet post.

With the possible exception of Cregar, of Texas, the other persons above listed are eligible gentlemen, any one of whom would grace a cabinet and none of whom would be persona non grata to the southern people, republican or democratic.

Santa Claus—Saint or Sinner?

I know it is a sort of sacrilege to even raise such a question, but I am not raising it. Each year now the pudgy little saint is summoned before the bar of judgment and asked if he is really a saint. So far as I am concerned, he never was a saint. He was something infinitely better in my childhood memories. He was a fairy. But people whose morals are very much more scientific than mine, have brought this little gnome under indictment, and declare that he is a menace to the moral nature of childhood.

They insist that the Santa Claus story is a falsehood, which we tell the children. The children discover afterward that it is not true and their faith in all stories is thus disturbed. But I insist that Santa Claus is true. Santa Claus is a myth, and myths are the deepest verities of the human race. They are born in the childhood of the race, and we might say that they are baby truths. A myth is a truth in its infancy. Like all babies, it will grow up, and in growing will change its form.

Meaning of a Myth.

The test of the truth of a myth is whether we can grow up—whether it can stand the change of form. Indeed this is the test of any story, drama, idea or ideal. It is the test of translation. Can it speak only one language? All truth must have its childhood and speak the language of childhood. The language is the form in which the idea is first revealed, but if the idea is dependent upon the form it is not true and must die.

The Santa Claus myth personifies the faith, which is as old as the race, that despite all the shadows and sorrows joy and good will shall be triumphant. Once a year this embodiment of merriment and good will, to the rhythmic accompaniment of bells, tumbles down the chimney from above to put to flight the shadows and discords of life. Old Santa personifies this spirit of goodness, which comes to reward good little girls and boys. It is true, because that is just what happens on every twenty-fifth of December, wherever faith in this little old fairy has dominion. This is just the first step. When Santa Claus ceases to come down the chimney to give little children things, he comes into the hearts of children to teach them not merely to get but to give, and the child who once received Santa Claus with joy, plays Santa Claus himself with even greater joy.

It is readily granted that there is much to be criticized in the form of this myth, though I myself, with the music of sleigh bells playing through my memory and the thrill of the gorgeous Christmas tree still vibrant in my spirit, find it difficult to make the criticism. This fat little saint, who insists upon making his way down sooty chimneys, cannot make the finest appeal to the aesthetic nature of children. We might well wish that our forefathers had handed down to us a fairy story of greater beauty. Old Santy, when sometimes too vividly portrayed to little children, frightens them more than he charms. A little tot of a girl clung tremblingly to her mother's hand on Christmas morning while dad, disguised as Santa Claus, distributed gifts. When the toys had all been received she said with respectful courtesy but quivering lips, "Now old Santa 'on can go back up the chimney." Perhaps we ought to have a fairy whom childhood would welcome not simply for his gifts, but for himself.

Christmas a Birthday.

But we have found our compensation in a very queer mixture of our religion with this ethical story. Christmas is also the birthday of Jesus. Beauty comes into our Christmas celebration with the wise men following the natal star and the shepherds listening to the music of the angels. Thus we take the hands of our children and join the wise men and the shepherds at the cradle of the Christ child.

Personally I find no call to start a revolution in our Christmas celebration. So long as the rhythmic lines

"'Twas the night before Christmas,
when all through the house,
Not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse."

awaken the thrill of childhood expectancy within my spirit, I shall be loyal to old Santa. I merely raise the question, for those who shall come after me, whether we would not do better to put all of our emphasis upon the birthday of the Bethlehem Babe, and let the wise men from the east be the bearers of gifts to childhood, while the natal star bathes a cradle in radiant beauty, and the angels sing their lullaby song in the skies.

Nevertheless, while Santa Claus may not be a saint, I am sure that he is no sinner.

EVERYDAY QUESTIONS

BY DR. S. PARKES CADMAN

Sharon, Conn.

The sixth and tenth chapters of Hebrews and the second chapter of II. Peter contai passages which seem to teach that the backslider is hopelessly lost. How do you square this teaching with the old hymn:

"While the lamp holds ou to burn
The vilest sinner may return?"

The habit of resting such tremendous issues as a man's eternal salvation on isolated passages of this character should cease. Compare them with Christ's parable of the Prodigal Son. Did he not return home from the far country, where he had spent all his substance in riotous living? Was he not gladly received by his anxious and expectant father? St. Peter thrice denied his Lord, yet he was the first apostle for whom Jesus inquired after His resurrection.

The fatal apostasy which means final banishment from God is more than a single act. It is a confirmed and wilfully persistent habit which repudiates the repeated overtures of divine grace. I cannot believe that any sin is beyond the reach of that grace once the sinner seeks its mercy.

I am nearly 50 years old, a widower with children rapidly growing to manhood, yet a failure—there you have me. I love my home and am industrious, but yet nowhere . . . just a cog in the wheel, accomplishing nothing really worth while. Some men are rich and successful. I am interested in doing something for mankind and to know the truth. Can you help me?

According to your long letter you have your health, profitable employment, a peaceful home, children on whom you gladly lavish your affection and who in return love and esteem you. I assure you there are numberless men and women in America, 50 years of age, who would surrender their worldly wealth for these assured blessings. Why then reckon yourself a failure?

It is not because you have yielded to the suggestion that your creative period has passed, leaving you painfully aware of abilities unused, projects unfulfilled and opportunities forfeited? Doubtless the loss of a good helpmate who might banish these moods of depression intensifies them.

Were she at your side she would probably tell you that in this modern era 50 is an age of planning and achievement. Think of the men and women beyond the '40s of whom you know as actively engaged in enterprises beneficial to themselves and the country. I am not speaking of those extraordinary personalities who shine brightly till they are 80, but of an ever-increasing number of ordinary citizens whose day of vision and of activity is lengthened far beyond the years you have attained.

The field is still open for you. It awaits your riper experience, your deepened knowledge, your power of reflection, your better blending of caution with hope that hope may not be premature nor caution drift into despair. Your desire to do something for mankind has already been translated into the concrete. You have lived honestly and soberly, cared for your motherless children and fulfilled your common tasks. I urge you to repudiate your pessimism and continue to do with your might what your hands find to do. You are of the sort which labors on, builds better than it knows and finds at the end that its melancholy was a delusion.

Cincinnati, Ohio.

I am '35 years old but cannot get interested in anything. I have plenty of energy and work hard, but finally give up every job in disgust. People consider me uncouth because I insist that they attend to their own business. I fear I am becoming a failure. How would you suggest a single man of my type could help himself?

Consult a good dictionary for the word constancy, memorize its meaning and firmly resolve to practice it. Your wabbling robs you of the race, while "old slow and sure" at your elbow wins it. Thirst for frequent changes can be a decided detriment. It may be native to your mercurial temperament, but it has to be subdued by cultural processes. Had you conquered yourself, you would conserve your pep and make it shine with a steady light instead of intermittent flashes.

So blot out the mark of unreliability opposite your name. Hang on to what you have, make today the servant of tomorrow and take longer, steadier looks at life. The creature of the moment is frequently energetic, but he is seldom dependable.

While the dictionary is open turn to that neglected term courtesy, and let its significance be your guide in behavior. Read "John Halifax,Gentleman," and take him as your model.

The Background of Foreign Affairs

Is Locarno To Be Salvaged? France and Italy Again at Outs; War Talk in South America; China Asserts Her Independence.

BY HENRY KITTREDGE NORTON.

(Copyright, 1928, for the Atlanta Constitution.)

The white dove of Locarno, which, two years ago, was fluttering about Europe as a harbinger of peace, has lost a number of tail feathers of late. M. Briand's ardent wooing of Dr. Stresemann seems doomed to repeated interruption by the heavy boot of M. Poincare. And at Geneva last September even M. Briand, perhaps a little lovelorn at Stresemann's absence, did some very unromantic talking to Herr Mueller about the state of Germany's armaments.

The cooling off has been caused by France's refusal to withdraw her troops of occupation from the Rhineland until Germany makes some substantial concession in regard to reparation. Germany insists that the occupation was to obtain security, that France has obtained the desired security through Germany's complete fulfillment of all of the military clauses of the Versailles treaty and that the French have no right to continue the occupation as a means of extorting money from Germany.

Here is room for bad feeling. And England has done her part to make more room. The Anglo-France agreement in regard to armament, which brought such prompt opposition from the United States on its naval side, brought no less sincere condemnation from Germany on its military side. For, in return for France's support on her naval contentions, Britain agreed to stand with France in not counting trained reserves as a part of a country's military strength.

This not only ruined what slim chances disarmament had, but it lined up the two most powerful nations in Europe side by side to preserve their hegemony by military power. Such actions were wholly inconsistent with the Locarno and Germany can see no good in them.

To make matters worse, from the German point of view, Sir Austen Chamberlain has recently announced that the allies have a legal right to stay in the Rhineland until all the provisions of the Versailles treaty are performed. He adds that he thinks they ought to get out as a gesture of friendship for Germany, but France is much more likely to be interested in his legal opinion that in his gesture.

Now at Lugano, not far from Locarno, the various foreign ministers are gathering to talk it over. Will they be able to get the dove back on its wings again?

While relations between France and Germany have been going from bad to worse, the ill feeling between France and Germany has flared up again. When the antipathy became very marked, a year or so ago, M. Briand turned his amative ability in Mussolini's direction and ill will was obscured for a time in a midst of pleasant words.

There was nothing substantial to back up the words, however, and now the ill feeling is again emerging. The Anglo-French agreement aroused no more enthusiasm in Italy than it did in the United States or Germany. Italy's great hope for success in her aggressive foreign policy was based on securing a measure of British support. She counted much on the irritation which was so frequently evident in French-British relations. The new agreement not only put an end to these hopes of British support, but the terms of the agreement convinced Italy that behind it there was some sort of deal for the cooperation of the British and French fleets which would leave the latter supreme in the Mediterranean.

Such cooperation would put a definite end to Italy's dream of adding to her north African empire or materially expanding her influences in Asia Minor. At the same time the Italian success in bringing Albania under her wing has served to bind Jugo-Slavia closer to France and to insure French aid for the Slav state in the case of trouble with Italy.

Italy thus finds herself fairly surrounded by the skill of French diplomacy. And it irks her sore. Her mounting irritation against France burst into hostility when a French court imposed only a light prison sentence on the murder of an Italian consular official. Once more the Franco-Italian fat is in the fire and M. Briand will have to exert all his skill to get it out without burning his fingers.

Just as the dignitaries of 20 American states meet in Washington to work out a scheme of general arbitration for this continent, and while the plenipotentiaries are listening to speeches telling how peaceful is this side of the world in comparison with the other, a couple of South American neighbors have a shooting scrape and their peoples talk of war.

Foreign policies are an educative thing. A week ago few citizens of this country had ever heard of the Gran Chaco. Now the papers are full of it, for it is over the Gran Chaco that the quarrel between Bolivia and Paraguay rages. This stretch of grassland is claimed by both states and each has, in its own opinion, a perfectly legal title. Bolivia claims it as within her constitutional boundaries and Paraguay claims it as part of her original colonial territory.

Most of the South American states were somewhat hurriedly formed and as a consequence, their boundaries were vaguely drawn. Much of the diplomacy between these states since their foundation has been devoted to straightening out frontier disputes. Some have been successfully settled. Others, like the Tacna-Arica dispute and that over the Gran Chaco, still remain as a cause of friction.

Bolivia has occupied most of the disputed area, but Paraguay has penetrated various parts of it. Last week the forces of the two countries clashed, each insisting that the other was an invader. La Paz and Asuncion were as prompt to adopt a warlike attitude as any Balkan capital under similar circumstances.

An appeal has been made to the League of Nations, both countries have been quick to state their cases in Washington and the Pan-American conference now in session has adopted a resolution calling for a peaceful settlemen. There is thus furnished a real test of the strength of the sentiment in favor of arbitration and possibly a test of the relation of the league to American disputes.

Two years ago, when various powers met in Pekin to discuss the Chinese tariff, a resolution was passed declaring that China should be free to fix her own tariff schedule after January 1, 1929. At the same time China undertook to abolish "likin," an international customs tax which was and is being levied by every local ruler who has sufficient power to get away with it. The two resolutions were not in form conditioned one upon the other, though it was stated at the time that autonomy was to be dependent upon China's success in doing away with this aggravating and commerce killing tax.

The Nanking government, resting its case only in part on the conference resolution, has announced its determination to put in force a new tariff schedule next year, even though "likin" is still collected. In order to do this, the Chinese government must abrogate existing treaties by which she has agreed to keep her tariffs below 7 1-2 per cent.

Quite naturally such a proceeding is met with objection from the nations which export goods to China. Japan is more heavily interested than any other country, the Chinese market being the mainstay of Japanese manufacturers. Tokyo has therefore protested strongly against the tearing up of her treaty and the imposition of higher tariffs. She has been bargaining with Nanking in an effort to secure some agreement which will protect her markets or at least give her some other consideration—such as the recognition of some $200,000,000 of doubtful loans—for giving up her treaty rights.

These negotiations have so far come to naught and Nanking has published her new schedule. This schedule itself seems quite reasonable. Luxuries are heavily taxed, but even then the average duty is less than 23 per cent. Nevertheless, Japan refuses to consider it, insisting upon its illegality under her treaty. One more tangle in the Far Eastern skein of events.

Sparta Woman Tells Of Sad Experiences On a State Highway

Editor Constitution: On Thanksgiving day I went to Atlanta on the so-called highway. I guess people are better off if they have no machine to go on these highways. For the last 15 years the people of Georgia have spent millions and millions of dollars on these so-called highways. Then when the least little rain comes people are on these highways in the ditches with broken windows and windshields, slipping and sliding from one side of the road to the other.

The ditches that they dig I can see no sense in them. They leave the dirt right on the edge; next day it rains the dirt into the ditches.

On the roads where the yellow, slipping mud is, if they would gravel it it would prevent all this trouble. What is the end? The counties are broke, also the state, as they have to pay out payrolls all the time. I was on the road from 7 o'clock in the morning until night coming from Atlanta to Sparta. Our lives were in danger all the time. Then I looked around and saw all the machines in the ditches and all the trouble others were having, as well as myself.

People should open their eyes and see how they are fooled about these highways.

I believe if the women could take charge of fixing the highways and put the men in the kitchen less money would be spent and we would have better roads.

Wichita Papers Laud "Bob" Timmons, Native Georgian and Ex-Reporter For Constitution, Recently Drowned

BY LAUREN FOREMAN,
Former City Editor of The Constitution.

Robert H. Timmons, of Wichita, Kan., native Georgian, Emory graduate and former Constitution reporter, who was drowned while on a hunting trip on Friday, November 23, was held in the highest esteem by the people and the newspapers of his adopted city, as revealed by copies of the Wichita papers which have been received in Atlanta.

Since 1918 Mr. Timmons had been assistant to the vice president of the Kansas Gas and Electric company, in charge of its public relations work, for which he was ideally fitted by disposition and through his newspaper training.

True to his southern birth and rearing, Mr. Timmons had remained a democrat in politics and was prominent in the councils of that party in Kansas. When Governor Jonathan Davis went into office he appointed Mr. Timmons an aide on his staff and thereafter he was known in Kansas as "Colonel Bob" Timmons.

Editorial Tributes.

In an editorial paying tribute to the talents Colonel Timmons brought to his work, the Wichita Beacon said the day after his death:

"Bob" Timmons is dead. It is difficult for his friends, who were numbered literally by thousands, to realize that.

"No man in Wichita, in Kansas, in this extensive region, perhaps was better known, more sincerely loved and admired than "Bob" Timmons. He was a figure of large influence, a leader in important affairs of business. Yet he never was too busy to lend a helping hand to those less fortunate than he.

"Colonel Timmons started his career as a cub reporter. Among his staunchest friends to the day of his death were members of the press.

"He never boasted of anything but this:

"'I used to be a newspaper man myself.'"

Under the simple title, "Bob Timmons," the Wichita Eagle carried an editorial which said:

"In the tragic death of Colonel Robert H. Timmons Wichita and this entire section of the country lose a friend keenly sympathetic to their aspirations and singularly gifted personally in ways that count in the forwarding of community enterprises.

"Loyal always to his employers and to the industry with which he was identified, he yet was able to find the time and the energy to devote to the interests of those about him. He labored indefatigably because his vision was boundless and because his belief in his city and his state was confident and unfaltering."

Loyalty to Friends.

In addition to editorials, all the Wichita papers carried articles telling of the popularity of Colonel Timmons, his loyalty to his friends, and the grief caused by his death. In a signed article in the Evening Eagle, Dick Long, feature writer, said, among other things:

"One of the tenets of Bob's creed was loyalty. He gave his loyalty and expected loyalty in return. It made no difference how the crowd went. One knew just where to find Bob.

"When Governor Jonathan Davis was elected governor he appointed Bob his aide with the title of colonel. During the stormy two years when the farmer-governor administrated the executive affairs of state Bob performed his duties well, in fact so well, that newspapermen who "covered" the meeting of Governor Davis and President Warren G. Harding at Hutchinson on the president's last trip across the country were unanimous in the statement that the governor of the state of Kansas had a far better aide than the president of the United States.

"And when the storm of political intrigue broke around Governor Davis and he was arrested shortly before giving up his office Colonel Bob was on hand. He did not shirk or attempt to shun the spotlight. Until the day when his official duties ended his duties were performed.

"On his return to Wichita a well known business man told Mr. Timmons that he was glad to see how loyal he was to the governor. And Bob's reply was characteristic.

"'It was the thing to do, no matter what some people might think.'"

Brother of Atlantan.

Mr. Timmons was the son of the late Rev. B. E. L. Timmons, Methodist pastor, and brother of Willis M. Timmons, well known Atlanta business man. At Emory he was a member of the "famous class of 1902" and numbered among his classmates, Judge Virlyn B. Moore of the Fulton superior court; Charles B. Shelton, county attorney; H. W. Martin, of the Atlanta and Lowry bank, and other men now prominent in the business life of Atlanta, as well as the late Thomas W. Connally and the late J. LeRoy Duncan.

On leaving Emory college in 1902 he became a member of The Constitution's city news staff, on which he served for two years. Criminal Law Revision Is Imperative Demand

Editor Constitution: Not since that awful, and disgraceful riot in Atlanta, several years ago, following which, your most excellent, patriotic, and high-toned editorials, contributed so very much, in denouncing the infamous spirit, which induced said riot, and allaying the inflamed prejudices and fears which said riot had provoked, has any article in my opinion, appeared on your pages, of such vital importance to the supreme interests, of your city, the state and entire nation, as your editorials of November 25th, and December 6th, regarding the abhorrent and dangerous, situation, brought on by criminals in defiance of all law.

We congratulate you most heartily on same, and sincerely trust that you will with all your heart and soul, undertake the exceedingly important task, of arousing our careless and sleeping people to the destruction, that has been creeping upon us for years, like an Alpine avalanche, that moves almost imperceptibly, inch by inch, then suddenly with lightning speed and titanic power, rushes downward, carrying to overwhelming disaster everything in it's path.

We sincerely hope that you will with all your God-given power and at any and all costs, engage in the battle of civic righteousness, against entrenched vice, which utterly perverts all moral laws, in defiance of both God and man.

In your editorial of November 25th, you point out the real cause promoting the criminal tide, sweeping our nation, viz: The lax enforcement of such laws as we now have, the numerous technicalities, with which said laws are encumbered, by which exasperating delays can be and are secured, in addition to the very many loop holes, in these laws, through which the guilty escape.

You state most truly, that this situation, invites crime because the criminal or would-be criminal, is aware of the more than even chance, for escaping either arraignment, or final penalty.

Your statements are absolutely true. You have hit the nail on the head, but you must hit, again and again, until you awake and arouse both pulpit and press, in the effort to thoroughly arouse a sleeping nation, so busy with their own private interests, heaping up money for their children, who in all likelihood will be robbed and murdered, by the criminals, who are daily increasing in both daring and defiance of the laws of God and man.

You further say that the Georgia legislature should recodify the criminal laws of the state and remove these pernicious loop holes, through which criminals escape.

This recodifying and revision of both our criminal laws and jury system is absolutely and imperatively necessary, but Mr. Editor, who put these noxious technicalities and loop holes in our laws, but the Georgia legislature? I had and may still have a statement to that effect, made by that distinguished lawyer and judge, the late Judge George Hillyer, possibly 20 years ago, in an effort, which now seems to have been in vain, to arouse public sentiment to the increasing crime of murder, in which he openly charged that the said loop holes for the escape of criminals were purposely inserted in our laws, by criminal lawyers, because they made so much more money by defending murderers, than by assisting in their punishment.

Chicago considered up to a very short time ago, the most wicked city in America, has at last had a most commendable house cleaning, and if a committee of the best citizens of Atlanta would visit that place, study the methods employed, come back and inaugurate a similar undertaking, they would undoubtedly unearth much corruption and discover the source of many crimes.

Business Man Calls Attention to Our Airport Situation

Editor Constitution: Forward looking citizens should seriously consider the very important subject of Atlanta as an airport.

Transportation through the air is such a startling new development, and is so rapidly becoming a practical factor in the nation's life, that slow moving minds have not as yet awakened to the responsibilities and opportunities presented to the community.

It has become a vital problem that concerns every large center. The geographical location of cities that are now the important railroad centers of the country, will for the same reasons become most logically, the prominent airport centers.

Atlanta is particularly fortunate in location as a distributing center of first importance for air routes covering the entire southeastern section of this country. This prominence is an inheritance or gift of vast value.

How to meet the responsibilities of this imposed opportunity for expansion of this enormously valuable development deserves most careful and intelligent consideration.

Other cities like Atlanta have had this new problem thrust upon them without preparation or knowledge of the requirements of this new phase of civic activity.

No city was fully prepared at the outset, and usually had to meet the situation by hastily acquired air fields.

The great city of New York has used the privately owned Curtis field, located on Long Island, an hour's distance from the city.

In most cities their acquired air fields have proven by experience and the increased demands of the industry, to be located at too great a distance from the center of cities, to practically meet the need of speed connection with postoffice for mail delivery, or with hotels to accommodate passengers by airplane.

In New York the city is now developing its own air field on a location formerly used as a municipal garbage dumping ground, situated half way between Curtis field and the city, shortening the distance by one-half.

Other cities are working out their problems to suit their circumstance. How about our situation here in Atlanta? Like the other cities we made such provision as was possible at the time by acquiring an option on a vacant tract owned by the Candlers, priced at $100,000, located beyond College Park, some eleven miles distant from the postoffice.

Upon this Candler field has been expended about $100,000 by city and county appropriations. The question of exercising the option to purchase must now be considered before its expiration in another year.

The expenditures already made there have only provided the nucleus for such an air field as will in the future provide adequate air terminals for an airport intended to provide for the entire southeast in air navigation.

Many questions are involved that are new and differ from all previous transportation problems. The question, why should a municipality provide terminal grounds and facilities for commercial transportation companies operating regular passenger, express and freight service in competition with other carriers. No such obligation has been assumed for railroads or electric and bus lines. They furnish their own terminals and provide their improvements necessary to the handling of their traffic. In addition they pay to the municipalities, taxes, percentage of gross receipts as franchise taxes and other charges for privilege of occupancy, in other words, as rent and privilege of doing business.

In the transportation of mail, the government now purchases sites, erects its postoffice buildings and carries the entire cost of handling the mails. All this on land. Why should the principle of paying its way, differ, when the transportation is through the air?

Candler field is now expanding into an important commercial enterprise, providing space and buildings for transportation companies, aviation schools, pleasure flying, air taxi service, all operated presumably at a profit to the operating companies.

All these services to be greatly expanded in the near future through competition in this rapidly developing field of industry made possible by awakened interest, and through the free use of the air.

Why should not the land occupancy for this business be adequately paid for?

Foreign countries have granted subsidies to the operators of air transportation. In this country the development has been accomplished on a strictly commercial basis of making the earnings do better than pay the cost.

With us the burden has been put upon the municipalities to furnish a form of subsidy by furnishing the terminal facilities at little or no cost to the operators.

This may have been necessary at the beginning, in the interest to encourage the investment of capital in an uncertain enterprise, and to meet the rivalry of competing cities for centers for commercial operating companies, and government mail routes.

But this new industry has already reached the point of self support, both in private and government operation, and is fast becoming a profitable competeing commercial business.

In a survey of the future, there can be no permanent continuation of city subsidies by furnishing and maintaining expensive flying fields, without returns in the form of charges, to compensate for the cities' costs.

The position of a city in its relation to this new air transportation problem has been likened to that of a seaport, where wharf and dock facilities for ships, should mainly be provided by the seaport cities. This is done through understood charges for the use of these facilities.

If inland cities like Atlanta are thus to assume this new civic responsibility of maintainng such a department of public utility, it is a matter of great importance, calling for a large expenditure of money, and should at the outset have the serious consideration of a qualified commission to make a survey of the whole situation, and plan a comprehensive schedule of building and operation of such an air field as will meet the needs of Atlanta's important position now and in the future, with especial reference to location that will best serve the purpose.

In the building of such an air field large appropriations of money will have to be provided, either from city and county receipts, or from a future contemplated blanket bond issue.

It will take $100,000 to pay for Candler field, which is a reasonable price for the property. Large expenditures have already been made there, which are also to be considered. Only a beginning has yet been made in developing Atlanta's future air field.

Many cities are spending millions of dollars on theirs and our should be a million dollar proposition before we are through. How is Atlanta to handle this important matter?

These are questions upon which the public needs to be informed, before they can intelligently approve appropriations or vote on a bond issue for the purpose.

In common with other cities, it is said that we have made the mistake of going too far away from the center of the city for our location. That it takes too long to transport the air mail from Candler field to the post office, with too much waste time in transit.

In the passenger service, it is said that it takes as long to transport a traveler to the Biltmore hotel, because of congestion of highways, as it does to bring him from Chattanooga to Atlanta.

If a nearer location than Candler field can be secured, now is the time to do it, before further sums of money are wasted in improving an inadequate location. The money already spent there might be profitably charged off as experimental expense.

Between two and three hundred acres, it is now understood, are now required for an air field, and in the expansion of the future, possibly twice this amount of land will be necessary.

Atlanta has recently acquired by purchase a large tract of 470 acres of land at a price of $410,000, known formerly as the Perkerson, now the Ragsdale Park.

The neighborhood for which this property was purchased is limited in population, for which a 100-acre park would be ample. This would leave 330 acres of land located just on the edge of the city, less than half the distance of Candler field from the center of the city. Why not utilize this better location and convert it into Atlanta's municipal air field.

It would probably cost many thousands of dollars to clear and grade this land for the purpose, but it would better meet Atlanta's responsibility for a nationally acceptable air field of metropolitan proportions.

When completed its space and facilities should be rented or leased to the operating companies who may use it, as also the government for mail terminals, and a revenue secured that will pay a fair return on the investment. The same as our present city park concessions are now leased.

Municipal ownership should not involve municipal profligacy in affording special privileges without adequate compensation.

The municipal air field should be incorporated into our city park system, under the regulations and superintendence of the city's park department.

This is to advocate the appointment of a commission of best qualified city officials and citizens, by the mayor and general council, to make a complete survey of the whole situation, before additional expenditures are made at Candler field, and to recommend a policy for the future, dealing with location and estimated cost, with the purpose of recognizing Atlanta's importance as the leading center in the southeast as an air port terminal, comparable to its recognized importance as a railroad center.

The Song That Lives.

BY ERNEST NEAL,
Poet Laureate of Georgia.

I.

"Silent Night, Holy Night!"
Oh, the witchery of that song!
Heavenly light, heavenly light—
Falling earthly shrines among—
Wreathes with halo from above;
Gently soothes with peace and love.

II.

"Silent Night, Holy Night!"
Words and music sweetly roll:
Simple they, but with what might
Grip and hold the listening soul!
Bringing into lives of men
Dreams beyond all mortal ken.

III.

"Silent Night, Holy Night!"
Truth and beauty breathes each word;
Scenes obscure to selfish sight;
Sounds by selfish ear unheard
Float like heaven thru the soul;
Bid the gates of love unroll.

IV.

"Silent Night, Holy Night!"
Shepherds watch on hill and plain;
While we sing, with faces bright,
Lo, the King is born again!
Born in heart-throbs, purpose high—
And Christmas light of baby's eye.

V.

"Silent Night, Holy Night!"
Hover with Thine angel wing
The Prince of Peace, the God of Right
In all the carols that we sing.
May life's way the whole year long
Lighted be by holy song.

Farming System Needs A Complete Revision

Editor Constitution: Your editorial, "Georgia's Farm Problems," so splendidly presented in your issue of the 13th instant, should meet the approval and adoption of every cotton grower in the south. The solution of the farm problem in the cotton-growing stat edepends primarily upon efficient farm operation by each individual grower.

Efficiency on the farm is as imperative as efficiency in the banks, the manufacturing plant and all other successful lines of industry. Efficiency in production means economic production and economic production on the farm is only possible through the intensive culture of crops on a limited acreage planted per plow. It is impossible to legislate prosperity on the farm or make the industry profitable by expansion of financial credits to the individuals. The average low yields of lint cotton per acre on the enormous acreage now planted to secure ample supplies of the staple to meet world requirements for consumption, does not pay the actual average cost of production at 20 cents per pound.

The cotton-growing states, less than one-third of the total states of the nation, are now planting in cotton nearly as much acreage as all the 48 states plant in wheat. Instead of planting 45,000,000 acres in cotton to produce 15,000,000 bales annually or less, at a loss of several hundred million dollars to the growers, the same supply of the staple should be harvested with efficient farm operation, on 30,000,000 acres and at a profit to the growers.

On 900 cotton and corn demonstrations we have in operation this year in counties of nine states, cultivated intensively, the reports show yields of from 300 pounds to 1,000 pounds of lint cotton per acre, and from 30 to 70 bushels of corn per acre, and in all cases a satisfactory net profit per acre over the cost of production. In many of the communities the reports show that the average farm production this season was only 100 pounds seed cotton per acre or one bale of lint to 15 acres.

Careful investigation over the cotton belt shows that only about 30 per cent of the rank and file of cotton growers produce needed food and feed crops on their farms.

Our entire system of farming needs to be changed and based upon better methods and greater efficiency. Less acres to the plow and higher yields per acre. When the foundation is made safe in production, cooperative marketing and holding the surplus will become an accomplished fact of great economic value to the growers.

Golden Jupiter Shines Brilliantly in South

Editor Constitution: Golden Jupiter—satellite of our sun! Shining splendidly in the south. Gigantic Jupiter, largest of planets. Golden Jupiter, planetary mirror of our sun. Reflecting the solar rays which reach that planet after a journey af almost 500,000,000 miles. Huge Jupiter, whose volume would contain more than 1,300 earths. Shining through the evening, setting before sunrise.

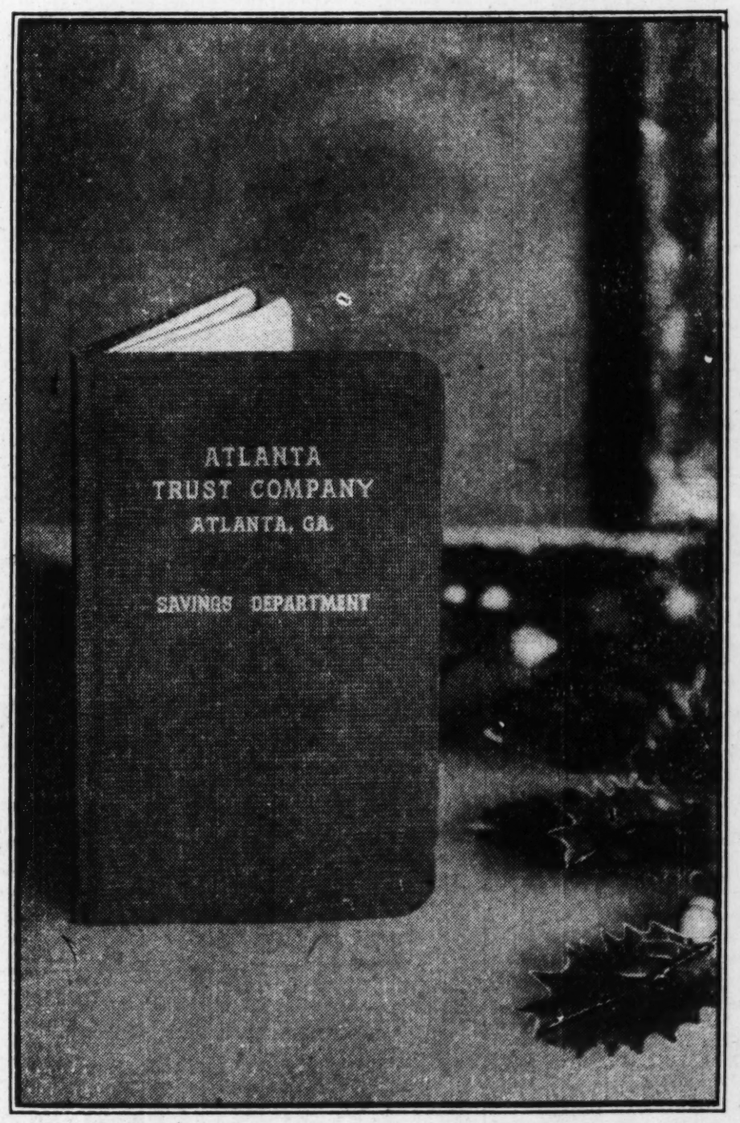

Golden Jupiter, nine-mooned Jupiter. Around which there revolve Io, Europa, Ganymede, Callisto and five unnamed satellites. Of these satellites Ganymede is much larger than our own Satellite. Golden Jupiter whose surface is hot—a semi-sun. Whose solar orbit lies between that of Mars and that of Saturn. A planet which may come as near to our earth as 370,000,000 miles and may recede as far from us as almost 600,00,000 miles. Great and golden Jupiter, shining splendidly in the south.

'BUTTER AND EGG MAN' IS NEW MET PICTURE

As its pre-Christmas program, the Metropolitan offers the picturization of a sensationally famous bit of stage entertainment, "The Butter and Egg Man," which is the story of a young man with plenty of ambition, a little money and worlds of nerve, who hits the great white way with a wham and licked it, or rather, knocked it for a goal.

Jack Mulhall, popular star, and Greta Nissen, famous screen beauty, have the leading roles in the picture, which is the story of a young man who had his grandmother stake him for a roll for Broadway. He hit the famous street with ambitions to become a playwright and show promoters, and is taken for a spin by a couple of promoters who thought they knew everything in the books for show producing. The show they produced is a flop and they blame it on the leading woman, who has worked her charms on the young man until he fell in love with her, and then bought out the promoters.

Until the picture is seen the real humor and the real merits of the picture are unimaginable, it is said. From start to finish the action is said to be handled in a superior manner and the most that can be gotten from them is easily seen and enjoyed.

In keeping with its new policy of comedies on every program, the Metropolitan offers this week Johnny Burke, comedian of Mack Sennett's war picture, "The Goodbye Kiss," in "Jim Jam Janitor."

"Outcast," Howard.

"Prep for Pep," Rialto.

"Butter and Egg Man," Metropolitan

"Revenge," Keith's Georgia.

"The Wind," Loew's Capitol.

DOLORES DEL RIO STARS KEITH PICTURE

The Georgia theater takes its place this week among Atlanta theaters with a lineup of stage and screen entertainment featuring United Artists latest sound special "Revenge," starring Delores Del Rio and a vaudeville bill consisting of Eddie Pardo's "All Collegiate Show."

Dolores Del Rio is said to unfold an entirely new characterization in the role of a fiery gypsy maid of many moods. In "Resurrection" and "Ramona" she played a tragic role. In "Revenge" she is said to be the essence of charm and fire as the adorable gypsy bear-tamer and even in her most dramatic nuances to accentuate her performance with with delightful humorous touches.

"Revenge" is heralded as probably the most unusual moving picture of the new season. Miss Del Rio has been in some ten or twelve productions of merit, but in none of these has she given so truly a dramatic performance as in this role, it is said.

Cameo.

"His Last Haul," which shows at the Cameo Monday and Tuesday of this week, is a story of the underworld, and the principal character is leader of a band of safe cracksmen, but there is neither gun play nor lurid sensationalism of any type in the film.

"Surrender," which shows Wednesday and Thursday, is a spectacular, forceful story of the hectic days on the Galician-Russian border just after the outbreak of the war in 1914.

Mary Philbin is cast as the Galician, and she falls in love with Ivan Mosjukine, who enacts the role of a Russian prince. In "Kit Carson," the Friday and Saturday attraction, Fred Thompson decided to do the life of Kit Carson, but he found the character so rich with material that he chose only to do the two ramnces that figure in the life of one of America's most colorful characters.

Lillian Gish Eats Pork and Beans In New Picture

Lillian Gish, the incomparable star, in a drama of the sombre wind country of the southwest, entitled "The Wind," is the latest sound picture in store for amusement lovers at Loew's Capitol theater this week. With a record of producing some of the classic characterizations of the screen in super-productions of the past, Miss Gish now comes in a role which is said to be one of the outstanding achievements of her career. In her support will be found Lars Hanson, who played opposite Miss Gish in "The Scarlet Letter."

Lillian Gish, ethereal and wistful, can hardly be imagined dining on a platter of salt pork and beans—but this is exactly what she had to do in her latest starring vehicle, "The Wind," at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

Furthermore, the meal wasn't daintily served, either—a great slab of salt pork and a rough-looking collection of beans—such as would be found in a cowman's shack in the wilderness, was the course.

This occurred during the scenes showing her arrival as a delicately nurtured southern girl, into the wind-swept wastes of the Texas prairies, where she was forced, in the story, through the death of her mother. The meal is her first experience with the hardships of the cow country.

"As a matter of fact," she confessed after the gastronomic ordeal, "I rather enjoyed it."

STUDENTS OF TWO INSTITUTIONS PLAN CAROL PROGRAM

On Wednesday evening, December 19, the students of Spelman and Morehouse colleges will give a concert of Christmas carols in Sisters chapel at Spelman. A similar concert was given last year and there have been many requests for its repetition.

The program this year will be varied, including a number of old favorites and several new ones. Several groups of students will sing, some numbers being given by the joint chorus, and others by the glee clubs and quartets of the two institutions.

The public is cordially invited to attend the concert, which will begin promptly at 8 o'clock.

Rialto Will Give Part of Receipts For Pasadena Fund

The Rialto theater has set aside Monday evening from 6:30 to 11 o'clock as "Georgia Tech Night" in cooperation with the school to raise funds to send the Tech band to Pasadena on December 22.

Fifty per cent of the theater's gross receipts taken in during these hours will be given to the band to help defray expenses of the trip. Special tickets have been printed by the theater and furnished all members of the band, from whom they may be secured, or those bought at the theater's box office will go towards the same fund.

FOOTBALL REVUE FILM FEATURED AT MET

The Metropolitan offers this week scenes of California's Golden Bears in action and also a review of Tech's Tornado accomplishments on the gridiron in 1928.

The scenes of the California gridders are newsreel shots of their most important conference and intersectional games and were secured especially for the Metropolitan's showing for this week.

Also on the Metropolitan's short reel program are Movietone News scenes of world events in sound and sight, and Johnny Burke in "Jem Jam Janitor."

West End.

Clara Bow with James Hall in "The Fleet's In," will be seen Monday and Tuesday. This is a Paramount picture with plenty of laughs. Her role is that of a taxi dancer in a public hall for the sailor boys.

Wednesday Ramon Novarro will be seen in "The Road to Romance." Marceline Day takes the leading feminine role, the girl he loved, in the hands of marauding sea hawks! The turn of a card to decide which one should possess her! That is one of the suspense moments in this M. G. M. picture.

Clive Brooks is starred Thursday in "Forgotten Faces." William Powell and Mary Brian will be seen in this feature picture. Friday, Norma Shearer, in "The Actress." A fascinating screen bit of Pinero's "Trelawney of the Wells." Saturday a feature, "The Water Hole," with Jack Holt. One of Zane Grey's best western stories.

Ponce de Leon.

Four pictures appear on the program of screen entertainment announced for the coming week by the Swint & Davis management of the Ponce de Leon theater, popular community playhouse at Ponce de Leon avenue and Boulevard.

The week gets under way Monday with "Rin-Tin-Tin," the wonder dog, in a new thriller called "Jaws of Steel." The story is of gold prospecting days and the heroism of a dog that grows from puppyhood on the rough frontier. The supporting cast is excellent and the picture is declared to be one of the best ever made by the dog actor.

For Tuesday and Wednesday the management has scheduled "The Waterhole," a Paramount feature starring Jack Holt and Nancy Carol. This great Zane Grey story has its setting in the western deserts, and it is replete with human emotion and the elements of romance necessary to success.

At the Ponce de Leon Thursday and Friday will appear "The Blue Danube," probably the high spot of the week's bill. This Pathe masterpiece with Leatrice Joy in the leading role has a tremendous throbbing love theme dominating a plot blending intense drama with delicious comedy. Its background is the world war, and a capable cast supports Leatrice Joy in this masterful film.

The picture announced for Saturday showing is "The Red Riders of Canada," an F. B. O. production with an all-star cast.

Alamo No. 2.

Amazing in its portrayal of what goes on behind the scenes in the newspaper world, "Man, Woman and Sin," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's ultra-modern romance starring John Gilbert, is a picture that astounds and grips with its fascinating disclosures. It will be shown at the Alamo No. 2 theater Monday only.

Jeanne Eagles, famous star of the phenomenal stage success, "Rain," appears as a fascinating lady of mystery and charm, society editor of a great daily, mistress of its powerful owner and beloved of a young reporter. Gilbert, as the reporter who goes through a soul-searing experience, has one of the most tensely appealing roles of his career. Monta Bell, himself a newspaperman, wrote and directed the film, laying its scenes in the local room in which he familiarized himself with the newspaper world. Included in the cast are Gladys Brockwell, Marc McDermott, Cosmo Kyrle Bellew, Hayden Stevenson and Charles K. French.

Prepsters Star In 'Prep Pep' At the Rialto

The Rialto offers this week a comedy romance "Prep and Pep," featuring David Rollins and Nacy Drexel.

Motivated with youth, fun and excitement, this story centers about a military prep school romance which blossoms in the school boxing ring and spends its whirl through a series of episodes.

The picture was taken at Culver Military academy in Indiana and is said to be exceptionally true to life of the average American prep school.

Both stars have won various laurels during the past year for their juvenile personalities. Miss Drexel was chosen from thousands of girls by F. W. Murnau for her blonde beauty to play a feature role with Janet Gaynor in "Four Devils," a Broadway sensation.

On the same bill are two Vitaphone acts, Eddie Nelson, leading comedian of the musical comedy hit in New York, "Good News," and Ceballos Crystal Cave revue. Nelson offers a comedy monologue entitled "Stop and Go," which is highly pleasing. The Crystal Cave revue represents a minature musical revue.

DISCONTINUE BABY HEALTH CENTERS UNTIL NEW YEAR

All baby health centers will be discontinued until after January 1, it was announced Saturday by Dr. J. P. Kennedy, city health officer.

Loew's Grand.

The notable picture which uses both sound and color effects, "The Wedding March," with Erich von Stroheim in the leading role, will be brought back to Atlanta for its first return engagement Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at Loew's Grand theater under the popular price policy of that theater. For Thursday, Friday and Saturday the Warner Brothers' melodrama, "The Midnight Taxi," with Antonio Moreno and Helene Costello, will be offered at Loew's Grand theater.

"The Wedding March" shows von Stroheim in one of his greatest roles and gives "the man you love to hate" many marvelous opportunities. It is a story with a background of European court life almost overwhelming in its lavish richness. The glittering pageantry of court life at Vienna is shown in contrast to the simple life of the peasants. Produced in techni-color, numerous effects of rare beauty are produced.

"The Midnight Taxi" is a super thriller all about hijackers, gem thieves, dancing girls, with some great scenes of life on rum-running ships outside the 12-mile limit, a race through the air and a bitter fight waged on top of a runaway freight car.

Corinne Griffith Stars 'Outcast' Seen at Howard

"Outcast," based on the popular stage play of same name, starring beautiful Corinne Griffith, is offered by the Howard this week.

A decade ago Elsie Ferguson leaped into fame in the role of "Miriam" in Hubert Henry Davies' play and this character has now been brought to the screen by Miss Griffith. The "Orchid of the Screen," a title won by the star for her beauty, is seen as "Miriam," a girl of easy virtue, but with a heart of gold and a soul above her sordid surroundings, who not only rises to great heights herself, but also uplifts the man she loves.

Edmund Lowe is cast in the male role opposite the star. Several years ago he played this part opposite Miss Ferguson in the stage production and has transferrd it to the screen.

The principal actors in the supporting cast include Huntley Gordon, Kathryn Carver, Louise Fazenda and James Ford.

Laughter and tears, love and jealousy and the added contrast of a beautiful girl of the streets whose love uplifts a man of wealth are said to make "Outcast" an unforgettable picture.

Corresponding to the beauty of the picture are the theme songs used in movietone accompaniment. Two heralded movietone numbers, Clark and McCullough in "The Honor System," and "The Family Picnic" complete the program.

Psychology Lecture.

The new order of business and society will be the subject of a lecture in applied psychology to be given by Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby on Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the mahogany room of the Ansley hotel. The public is invited.

THEATER NEWS

VARIETY OPERA TURN TOPS NEW LOEW BILL

"Memories of the Opera," produced by Caesar Rivoli and company, has been procured for the pre-Christmas week bill of vaudeville at Loew's Capitol theater. Caesar Rivoli is a conductor and musician and will bring to Atlanta some of the most beautiful numbers in grand opera. Included on the program will be selections from Gounod's entrancing "Faust," Mascagni's "Cavaleria Rusticana," and Verdi's "Il Trovatore." The Rivoli company is a grand opera company in miniature with a special conductor for the regular orchestra to assure smooth performances of these great classics.

Two other artists who will appear on the new bill at Loew's Capitol are Dennis Chabot and Nonette Tortini, "The Boy From Belgium" and "The Girl from France.' Here are two artists who present dance numbers, songs and musical selections on the piano and violin.

Comedy will be found in the act of Moran, Warner and Margie, entitled "Collegiate and How," a juvenile satire on modern youth. Alice Deyo and company will bring "The Last Word In Novelty," a combination dancing, singing, comedy and acrobatic offering. Miss Deyo's company includes Jimmie Franks and Ray Locke, two dancers and tumblers.

The opening act will be presented by Mankin, "The Frog Man," a contortion novelty. Special scenic effects are used.

EDDIE PARDO, FUNSTER, TOPS KEITH VARIETY

Keith's Georgia swings into the new week with a lineup of stage and screen attractions that promises a wide variety of entertainment. "Revenge," United Artists' latest sound special, is the screen fare to be served up along with Eddie Pardo's "All Collegiate" revue.

Mr. Pardo has gathered together an array of talented youngsters who are all specialty artists for his "All Collegiate" show. Even though they are young, Mr. Pardo states that they are dyed-in-the-wool, blown in the bottle artists. The "All Collegiate" show presents a variety of acts, with the entire company getting together at the finish for a frolic that promises to make real whopee. There is Mr. Pardo himself and Mollie Dodd, Ford and Price, Reese and Melan, Little Sisters, Alan Greene, Clayton Wentworth, Tommy Rush, Tamare Drasin and Minerva Reddy, all included in the cast.

Stage Policy To Return?

On no authority whatever and purely on the word of your correspondent, reestablishment of the Howard theater stage policy seems imminent, after several months of experimentation in the all-sound picture policy at that theater.

Officials deny or decline to comment, but that's what officials are for. Into everybody's business, little birds are always meddling, and bearing tales, and especially is this true of the theatrical racket. The little birds have it that the discontinuance of the stage policy at the Howard recently was a test by Publix, the result of which would have effect on every Publix theater in the country.

And since Publix is the big shot of the theater game, you know what that means.

There's no use arguing, the policy has been a financial success, but in a Publix de luxe theater, that isn't the principal element. They probably made money before the sound policy and made probably just as much with it.

But that brings us back to a little personal prediction made by this department some time ago when Mr. Jolson's "Jazz Singer" was still tearing 'em down at the Metropolitan. The prediction said that the "talkies" were here to stay, which didn't show any great amount of intelligence on the part of the forecaster, for when any project has as much money invested in it as the "talkies" have, it's bound to be here for some time.

It was doubted, however, that the "talkies" could remove the human element from the theater. The doubt was repeated when Publix removed the unit shows from the Howard. Again not that it hasn't made money. It has. But it somehow isn't the ideal entertainment.

Pictures still will continue to talk and be synchronized. But when the proper time on the program comes, the lights will go up and we'll have our "in person" shows just as always; even if it's only half an hour.

Doug Figgers To Revolutionize "Talkies."

Mr. Fairbanks, well-known movie actor, is going to jump into the "talkie" field with his sequel to "The Three Musketeers," a picture titled "The Iron Mask," according to press story received by this department.

A portion of the story is printed herewith:

"A new and revolutionary development in the use of sound is about to reach the motion picture screen.

"It will make use of the 'talkies,' but there will be no dialogue and the voices of leading players will be heard but not in conventional conversation. This is the innovation that Douglas Fairbanks will bring forth in his forthcoming production, 'The Iron Mask.'

"A method akin to the 'chorus' in the ancient Greek drama will be used with the direct form of speech, explaining action and motives, addressed directly to the audience, similar in personal appeal to the heroic utterances of the mummers of the Euripidean tragedies.

"When Mr. Fairbanks first announced that he would make a sequel to 'The Three Musketeers,' Alexandre Dumas' immortal story of the four bravest guardsmen of France, the cinema world waited anxiously to learn whether he would make use of the newly developing 'talkies' in his picture. While the rest of screendom frantically experimented in harmonizing sound with silent drama, Doug said nothing. With the intelligence and artistry which have marked his entire career, he waited until he had found the logical medium for the expression of his imaginative ideas and purposes.

"Dialogue between characters of history and fiction like those in 'The Iron Mask' would have an incongruous grotesqueness, he reasoned. The illusion of other worlds and other times must be maintained. If these characters conversed poetically, as would befit the spirit of the play, they would soon grow tiresome to a present-day audience. To speak in modern argot would remove them from the realm of their romantic world. But, by means of direct speech these heroes could maintain their dignity and the elusive color of the story while including their audience in the secrets of their glamorous lives."

'Steamboat Days' New Attraction At 81 Theater

An outstanding treat is in store for white patrons of the 81 theater on Decatur street, it developed Saturday when Manager Tom Bailey announced that "Steamboat Days" is the attraction scheduled for next Friday night's midnight frolic performance.

The entire import of the announcement isn't apparent in the name "Steamboat Days." The crux of the matter is that this big colored revue show will bring back to the 81's footlights that internationally-famous coon shouter, Bessie Smith, and her inimitable rendition of the snappiest jazz songs on the stage.

With Bessie Smith will come a company of 25 talented performers to make "Steamboat Days" a memorable performance in the regular winter series of weekly midnight frolic shows. The company boasts a number of outstanding principles in addition to Bessie Smith, these including clever dancers, excellent singers, screamingly funnny comedians and a big chorus.

"Everybody knows about Bessie Smith," Manager Bailey stated, "and the company she brings here ably aids her in entertaining. I strongly recommend this show and urge that all who wish to see it procure their seats as early as possible.

Advance seat sale will be at Jacobs' at Five Points and at the 81 box office.

MEDITERRANEAN FILM TO BE SHOWN TUESDAY

Public Invited, Without Charge, to Program Sponsored by North Agency.

Animated views of Algiers, Egypt, Greece, Turkey and Palestine will be presented to Atlantans in showing of a moving picture taken on the Mediterranean voyage of the S. S. Rotterdam, at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday night in the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium, according to announcement Saturday by John T. North, general agent for the southeast of the Holland-American line. The film will include scenes in other exotic lands visited during the cruise.

Presentation of the film will offer an outstanding opportunity for persons interested in travel in the Near East, Mr. North pointed out. The film has been brought to Atlanta from Philadelphia under auspices of the John T. North agency. It is being exhibited in all principal cities of the nation and is scheduled to go to Boston after the performance here Tuesday night.

Open to Public.

Special invitations to the showing of the travel reels have been issued through the North agency. It is believed that the exhibition will attract a large local gathering as it is also open to the general publi without charge.

The itinerary of the S. S. Rotterdam on its cruise of the Mediterranean includes the following points of interest after departure of the crack ocean-going liner from the Holland-American docks at New York: Funchal-Medeira, Casabalanca, Morocco; Cadiz, with a special trip by rail to Seville; Gibraltar, where the touring party again picks up the S. S. Rotterdam after overland trips in Spain and the historic north shore of Africa; Algiers, Naples, Tunis, Athens and Constantinople.

Ancient Cizilizations.

At this juncture the cruise enters the lands of ancient civilization of Egypt and the Holy Land, visiting Haifa, the famous port of Palestine, where the modern movement of the Holy Land is shown at its peak; Alexandria and Cairo.

Returning through the Mediterranean, ports of call for the S. S. Rotterdam include Kotor, Dubrovnik, Venice, Naples, Monaco and Gibraltar.

This constitutes the 1929 itinerary of the S. S. Rotterdam and gives an indication of the spots from which scenes to be presented in the travel film have been taken, Mr. North stated.

PLUMBERS NAMED BY LOFTIS GIVEN CHANCE TO SPEAK

Four plumbers named by W. S. Loftis, plumbing contractor, Friday in his statement to the investigating committee of the board of education, will be given an opportunity at 10 o'clock Monday morning at a meeting of the committee to admit or deny Loftis' statement, Roy D. Warren, school commissioner from the tenth ward, and chairman of the committee, announced Saturday.

No testimony other than the affirmation or denial of Loftis' statement by the four plumbers will be taken, Mr. Warren said. At Friday's session of the committee, Loftis named S. S. Shepherd and D. A. Farrell as two men who came to his office while he was figuring on bids for three junior high schools and asked him, he testified, if he did not think that they were "due some consideration." Loftis said that Lee Guest, a plumber named Stephenson and, he thought, Farrell were present at a meeting in a vacant office at which time bids for the Stout school jobs were discussed after they had been taken over by the bond company. The meeting, according to Loftis broke up when he said that he "would not be in on it."

BREWER IS NAMED LEADER FOR 1929 OF MALTA LODGE

C. B. Brewer, formerly senior warden of the Malta Lolge No. 641, F. & A. M., has been named worshipful master of that organization for the ensuing year. He succeeds W. Stanton Hale as leader of the lodge.

Officers elected to serve during 1929 with Worshipful Master Brewer are R. W. Bowie, senior warden; I. M. Valentine, junior warden; R. H. Vogel, treasurer; George L. Duncan, secretary; J. W. Gormack, senior deacon; Robert S. Little, junior deacon; A. B. Morton, senior steward; H. V. Fitzpatrick, junior steward; S. B. Wilson, chaplain; J. M. Hart, tyler, and L. P. Johnson, organist.

The meeting was one of the principal gatherings of the year, and was featured by addresses and dinner with an elaborately planned menu, in addition to routine business of the communication.

STERCHI INTERESTS TO BE CONSOLIDATED

Consolidation of all the furniture interests of J. G. Sterchi, consisting of 52 retail stores and 10 factories in all sections of the south, will be consummated soon after January 1 of next year, it was announced Saturday by W. M. Hicks, manager of the local Sterchi store and head of the Georgia division of the organization.

Mr. Hicks has just returned from a meeting in Knoxville of stockholders of the Sterchi furniture interests, and he brought with him an article from the Knoxville Sentinel explaining the consolidation and its purposes.

According to this news article, auditors are now checking accounts of the stores and factories, following which all will be merged into a single corporation, with a corporate stock necessarily of several million dollars. Maskins & Sells, of New York, are doing the auditing and their employees are now going through accounts of the Atlanta Sterchi store.

The movement is designed to secure central buying, administration, accounting and control, and is expected to result in many advantages and economies. It will bring into a single corporation many interests in which Mr. Sterchi now owns more than half interest, including the parent organization at Knoxville, known as Sterchi Brothers, a partnership; Sterchi Bros. & Fowler, at Chattanooga, another partnership; the J. G. Sterchi Furniture company at Johnson City, Tenn., a corporation; the Sterchi Furniture & Carpet Co., at Atlanta, a corporation; the Sterchi Bros. company at Bristol, a corporation; the Sterchi Manufacturing company, a factory at Knoxville, which is a corporation; the Boyce Manufacturing company at Chattanooga, another corporation, and the various other units of the Sterchi chain. Stores in Georgia are located here and at Athens, Gainesville, Macon, Bainbridge, East Point, Rome, Dalton and other smaller cities.

The merger is not expected to affect the personnel of the various units, nor will it involve any of the realty, mining and railroad properties of Mr. Sterchi, who has been in the furniture business for 40 years and whose activities in this line now comprise one of the largest concerns of its kind in America.

"I want to make it clear," Mr. Sterchi has said, "that this is not a stock-selling or money-raising proposition. Whether or not any stock will be placed on the market at all has not been determined, there may not be any available even to close friends. But I want to have things in such shape that stock can be marketed in the usual way if it is found advisable.

"Meetings of stockholders of the various companies will be held the first of the year, when the different stores can vote on the consolidation. But there will be no doubt about all coming in."

MAGICIANS TO MEET

Monthly Gathering To Be Held Tuesday.

The Atlanta Society of Magicians will hold its December meeting Tuesday at the home of Sherwood Blodgett, 54 Westminster drive.

Following the business session, the host will present a magical program composed entirely of small vest-pocket tricks he has collected from all parts of the world. Dr. F. E. Van Der Veer and Julian Boehm will show a number of new manipulations with playing cards.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

"LOOKING FOR CHRISTMAS BOOKS."

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

Lucia in London. By E. F. Benson. Riseholme called Lucia a snob but she did not mind that for life was giving her a good time and she was getting the things she wished for, and was seeing the places she longed to see, so it was all right with her. And now she had fallen heir to a London house and had been to dinner with an ambassador, a marquis, a countess and two viscounts, and she had almost as much money as she needed but not quite. The story of how Lucia "managed" makes a delightful story. The author is the son of the late Archbishop of Canterbury, and he leaves his London home every year from October until June for some quiet place where he does his writings. (Doubleday-Doran Co.)

The Murders in Praed Street. By John Rhode, author of "The Ellerby Case." This is a new mystery story in which Dr. Priestly plays his usual exciting part. There are many adventures and in the dramatic climax he finds himself face to face with the mysterious murderer. There is not a dull moment in the whole story. (Dodd Mead & Co., New York.)

Second Eden. By Florence Ward. The story is staged in a mid-western town a few years after the world war during which time the citizens had made big money and there was a conflict for leadership in financial circles. The story is woven around a group of people whose lives and happiness are being influenced by this condition. The heroine is Diana Wayne, whose position in this conflict makes a most interesting story. (Smith-McRae Co.)

Gettin' in Society. A novel by George Blake. The story of the social comedy of the Faed family, the war having given it a dose of prosperity. The story is unusually interesting as the difficulties are unfolded in which the different members of this well-known middle-class Scotch family finds itself—it is a story of social readjustment where a family is lifted from living to luxury. (Harper & Brothers.)

Rome Express. By Bertrand Collins. A dramatic story of an international marriage in which the cities of Paris and Rome furnish the background against which the nobility of many nations appear in a light of friendship and friendly relations. Piero, a foreigner, is in the diplomatic service in Italy when the announcement comes that he has been made minister to Esthonia. Greta, his wife, is an American girl, and the story tells of her experiences while living abroad.

Mr. Collins belongs to one of the oldest and best families of Seattle, Washington. At the age of 13 he made his first trip across the Atlantic, and since then he has made many. At the age of 13 he was sent to Middlesex school, a famous school in Massachusetts for boys, and from there he went to Harvard graduating in 1914. In 1917 he went overseas a part of which time he served on Admiral Sims' staff in London. For a first novel the story shows a keen insight into the life of the people on the continent as well as on his own American shores. It is a clever story. (Harper & Brothers, New York.)

Heart of the Woods. By Isabel Adams. While this is an interesting story it really cannot be called fiction. The scene is laid in the pine forest of the Laurentian mountains and the characters are French-Canadians and the few visitors who find this far-away inviting place. The story as contained in this book is told by Mrs. Gwynn, who with her two closest friends, Dr. Graham, Sr., and Jr., have enjoyed seeing their neighbors at work and play, all of which she describes in an interesting manner, especially meeting the famous French-Canadian singer, Jean Brunhardy, and his daughter, who are camping in this glorious exiled spot.

Isabel Adams has lived for many years among the habitants of the Laurentian region. She is a Scotchwoman by birth, and came to Canada with her husband, seeking the healthful seclusion of a high forest home. Besides being a close friend to French-Canadian neighbors, she is interested in one of the big hunting, fishing and winter sports clubs to which hundreds of vacationists repair each year, and she herself takes an active part in these outdoor sports. Heart of the Woods is her first published book. (The Century Co., New York.)

The Charwoman's Daughter. (Mary Mary). By James Stephens, who since his recent visit to America, is, if anything, more popular than before—in fact he has by this trip widened his circle of admirers.

This book was published in the U. S. A. under the title "Mary, Mary," and it is a beautiful story woven around Mary Makebelieve who lived with her mother on a real back street in Dublin, and anyone who loves a real human interest story will find pleasure in the story of Mary's life, her ups and downs, and the big heart she carried around with her to help her bear the burdens that she seemed to find in all directions. (The MacMillan Co. New York.)

The Odyssey of a Nice Girl. By Ruth Suckow, author of Country People" which was a study of the daily life of the immigrant farmer in rural Iowa, so in this book she takes up the study of the life of the same class in towns.

Marjorie, the daughter of a small shopkeeper, whose life has been in such narrow circles, is always wishing and dreaming that she may some time free herself from these environments and realize the meaning of independence.

Her home life was too small and narrow and later when she goes to Boston to study "she reaches out eagerly for the things she has longed for, and dreamed of in her home town where she was spoken of as "such a nice girl," and owing to her inheritance she was never able to try her wings of which she dreamed. She finally marries and settles down to the existence of which she had not dreamed.

The author's father is a Congregational minister in Iowa and in this way she was thrown with the different types of communities. She also spent a summer in Colorado. She is a young writer whose work has been appreciated from the very beginning—her first novel "Country People" was warmly received. (Alfred A. Knopf. Publisher, New York.)

Petite Pauline. By Ethelwyn N. Curry. This is a story of a little child told by her teacher. It is a psychological study of character. The incidents and personalities are not wholly imaginary—they have a basis in fact. The little heroine was a real child—the story is told by a real teacher. (Harold Vinal, Ltd. New York.)

Peter Menikoff. The amazing story of a Bulgarian boy in the Great American Melting Pot. By Dr. Peter D. Yankoff, A. B. Here is another story which is said to be one of the most amazing stories of personal achievements in our language—and it is another true story. The hero is not a creation of the author's imagination. He was born in one of the little peasant villages of Bulgaria. During his childhood he had no opportunity to observe life as lived by men of the outside world and yet during the early years of his boyhood he found a way. (Cokesbury Press. Nashville, Tenn.)

Against the Sun. A Search for Death; the Story of a Great Love. By Godfrey Elton. The book has received the approval of many leading publications. "Mercilessly brilliant and subtle . . . It is an able deeply interesting story." (Houghton Mifflin Co. Boston.)

The Lie. By Helen R. Martin, whose many books of fiction with all the earmarks of realism have been thoroughly enjoyed, none more so than "Sylvia of the Minute." As her readers recall she gives her stories the well known Pennsylvania Dutch setting. In this story the wife has told the husband a lie—not a real, sure enough lie, but one of those polite prevarications which do not always end as innocently as intended. And the worst part in this case is her husband knew, and being one of those superior creatures which can be found in the low as well as high estate decided to make it a terrible offense and to punish her accordingly. On the other hand, the wife fails to take it so seriously as her husband and makes it a first class comedy. Her high and mighty husband walked in the trap set for him and the end was all the reader could ask for. (Dodd Mead and Co. New York.)

A Little Clown Lost. By Barry Benefield. Author of "Bugles in the Night," and "The Chicken-Wagon Family." The author's literary friends have been watching his increasing popularity with much pleasure for many years. His work has been favorably compared with that of Morley, the late Don Byrne, and even Dickens, for he has a way of presenting realistic men and women to his readers who possess all the lovable qualities of your best friends. This story is full of beautiful ideas, and is a first-class romance. (The Century company, New York.)

Bram. By Charles J. Pelton. The author says in the preface that he was asked by Mr. Bram to write this story not only in the old ordinary way of asking some one to do something for you but in that insistent manner that all writers will understand. It is a love story. (Edward J. Clode, Inc., New York.)

Rosalie's Career. By Faith Baldwin. The story woven around Rosalie, the heroine of this lovely story can be summed up in these words: Rosalie who was lovely, lovable and ambitious, "lifted herself out of a drab existence into the golden land of love and romance of which every girl dreams." (E. J. Clode, publisher, New York city.)

Pleasant Jim. By Max Brand, author of "The Blue Jay." The author is noted for his thrilling stories, for being an expert horseman and a two-gunman. He knew little about romance, but one day by accident he met Sally, who was as clever, brave and as daring as a woman could be. The climax is all you would ask for two unusually big-hearted people. (Dodd Mead & Co., New York.)

The Sword Peddler. By Thomas Grant Springer. To quote from a well-known critic: "Here is the 'Show Off' of the later Elizabethan period, differing but little from its modern prototype, except in setting." After all, Mr. Springer says that "men are only boys grown tall." (Cosmopolitan Book corporation, New York.)

CUBA TODAY.

Cuba and Her People of Today. An Account of the History and Progress To Its Independence; a Description of Its Physical Features; a Study of Its People; and, in Particular, an Examination of Its Present Political Conditions; Its Industries, Natural Resources, and Prospects; Together with Information and Suggestions Designed to Aid the Prospective Investor or Settler. By Forbes Lindsay, author of "Panama and the Canal," and Nevin O. Winter, author of Mexico and Her People of Today. (Revised edition.)

At this time the United States is very much interested in the present day conditions in Cuba. It has been increasing for many years until now the American realizes that much history has been made in Cuba during the past few years. There is progress there, wealth always follows progress, and population always follows both. While there has been a little friction, now and then, the people of each country continue their friendly relations. On some days in the mellow sunshine of a wintry day Havana has an American air for the streets are full of tourists from all over the United States. And it is hoped that with this stream of visitors and the friendly spirit shown by our neighbors that a better understanding will continue.

The author in this beautiful volume tells more about the prospective industries of Cuba to the people of the United States, this information having been asked for many times, with reference to the geography, the progress, etc., all of which will give the reader the result of conditions as they stand today. (L. C. Page & Co., Boston.)

Jubilee Jim. The Life of Colonel James Fisk, Jr. By Robert H. Fuller. How He Traveled with Van Amberg's Circus; Made a Fortune in Contraband Cotton; Lost It in Wall Street; Joined Jay Gould in Capturing the Erie Railroad; Fought Commodore Vanderbilt to a Draw; Ruined Daniel Drew; Organized and Put Through the Gold Panic and the Disaster of Black Friday; Brought French Opera Bouffe to America, etc.

There seems to have been very little in which this unusual character was not interested at one time or another. From the time he made his debut in New York until he is returned to his own Vermont Hills as his last resting place, there was no rest in his life—it was made up of excitement, varied, alluring and easily compared to a will-o'-the-wisp. The story of his life as written here probably will be recalled by some of the oldtimers of the great metropolis.

As to the author of this story he was a graduate of Harvard in 1888 and had 18 years of newspaper work as reporter, editor, and political writer, being the Albany correspondent of the New York Herald. The writer of this postscript, Charles E. Hughes, says that realizing his ability he asked him to become secretary to the governor, a very important position. After this he held several very important positions in New York city and at the time of his death he was on the staff of the Merchants' association of New York city. "He always represented my ideal of the faithful public servant, the sort that makes democracy worth while," says Mr. Hughes. (The Macmillan company, New York.)

JUNIOR BOOKS RECEIVED.

This Man Adams. The man who never died. By Samuel McCoy. This volume is dedicated to Phillips Russell with the following: "This book is for next year's children. For children still do retain some ability to weigh on their merits the assertions that the world makes to them. But grown people never. . . ."

The author has written an interesting story around "This Man Adams" —written it from the viewpoint that after a careful study of the great patriot's mind he is convinced that he never died. This is being evidenced every day if you will simply draw the veil aside and in imagination you will see him a patriot, with hotter blood than any citizens of this century, walking through the United States, being recognized on all sides for his brilliant, "fiery, frosty, lovable Puritanism as displayed during his second term as president of the United States." (Brentano's, New York.)

Self-Development in Drawing. As interpreted by the genius of Romano Dazzi and other children. 100 illustrations. By Walter Beck. This handsome book is written to serve the parent as well as the teacher. If mothers and fathers will study these drawings they will be better able to assist and understand their children. The analogue is made through illumining the developments of the gifted Dazzi through other children.

A most valuable instruction is that Mr. Beck will show the children the first analysis of the technics of drawing. The author says that teachers have formed their teaching methods on the theories gained in normal schools. Read what he has to say about the future of the normal schools. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

The Good-For-Nothing Graysons. By Millicent Evison, author of "Peggy Pretend." Picture jacket in full color with illustrations by F. Vaux Wilson. There is no family life so interesting as that which is composed of six children—there is nothing sadder in family life than a family of six motherless children, and yet they, too, find something in life to be thankful for. This is the story of six children who lived in an old mansion in a quiet New England town. Without a mother's love and a mother's guidance they grew up largely by themselves, and naturally the neighbors were very much interested in their doings. They were called by the village postmistress "the good-for-nothing Graysons." There's Nancy who has not only tried to be brave but to help her younger brothers and sisters, these including Philip and Florence, lovely and lively twins, called Flip and Flop, and who play a conspicuous part in the story of the Graysons. (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co., Boston.)

Gifts of the Star. The boy who would be a knight. By Rebecca Rice Jacket and six illustrations in full color by W. N. Berger. There is nothing that proves more interesting and entertaining to a boy or girl than a story of the days of knighthood, which had its greatest appeal in the days of Richard the Lion-Hearted.

The story is woven around a boy who thought he was a peasant. He was brought up by a friar who for a long time does not tell the boy of his true station. The boy knows that under these conditions he cannot be advanced to knighthood, and yet his heart is so set on this one thing that he plans for himself a coat of arms, the basis of which is a star. He finally becomes a page and is known as "Giles, the Star." The setting is historical and it will interest to the last page. (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co., Boston.)

The Story of the Janes. By Grace Humphrey. Illustrated by Hattie Longstreet Price. From year to year historical stories have been published in this column from the Penn Publishing company, of Philadelphia, among the books being "The Story of the Marys," "The Story of the Elizabeths," "The Story of the Johns," "The Story of the Williams" and "The Story of the Catherines." And now comes "The Story of the Janes."

The historical Janes will also make most interesting stories both abroad and in America, among the names appearing in this book are Joanne d'Arc, the French saint; Lady Jane Gray, Jenny Lind, the Swedish Nightingale; Jane Austin, celebrated author; Jane Seymour, one of the many wives of Henry VIII, and Jane Adams, of Hull House fame. This book contains brief biographies of these noted women and the life of each is interwoven into a fascinating story that will be enjoyed and is just as interesting to the grown ups as to the school girl. Christmas Spirit Giving and Love, Says Dr. Sutton

That the true Christmas spirit is embodied in the themes of "love" and "giving," and that every child in Atlanta can add immeasurably to the happiness by the holiday season by giving a cheerful, happy, bouyant, glorious spirit to the world about them, is pointed out by Dr. Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools for Atlanta, in his weekly letter to the students of the city schools.

Superintendent Sutton writes:

"My dear Boys and Girls:

"All the messages from the north pole and every radiogram received indicate that Santa Claus is thoroughly prepared, and that he will ride into Atlanta on schedule and will bring us some wonderful gifts. But I am writing this letter today to appoint every boy and girl in the city of Atlanta public schools, as a real Santa Claus' helper.

"In other words, I sincerely hope that Christmas will mean giving rather than receiving to us. Let us give of our best to those around about us. I am so thankful that it does not require money to give real Christmas cheer. There are a thousand things that we can do for those of our household, and among the things we can do for our friends and associates is to bring the real Christmas spirit into our own hearts and the heart of our city.

"So often Christmas is made the occasion of noisy, vulgar, and inappropriate celebration. There are two great principles that should control the Christmas season. They are almost the same principles.

"First is the motive of love. The whole idea of Christmas is an effort to express that inexpressible thing that we call love. All the treasures of heaven were investigated and sent into the earth to express the Father's love, and then he exhausted all of His own infinite resources by expressing that love in the person of the Christ child. Therefore, let us make love the theme of our Christmas. And since Christmas is preeminently a home festival, let us show the love spirit in the home, to those who have meant most to us, and are expending every energy to make life livable for us. Let us show the Christmas spirit of love.

"Along with the love theme and closely connected with it, is the theme of giving. We cannot love unless we give and we must give if we love, so that the two are almost identical. On our part, Christmas should mean the idea of giving, not expensive presents, not money, nor all the things that money means, but the idea of giving a cheerful, happy, buoyant, glorious spirit to the world. A song of thanksgiving, a smile of good cheer and a prayer for higher and better service, these are really the things that we can give at Christmas time.

"As a result of these two Christmas motives there should come to everyone the two things greatly prayed for—peace to all mankind, and glory to God. Christmas is, therefore, a season of quietude, of family reunions, of communities coming together in love and sympathy with each other.

"Let us see to it that Christmas is not disturbed by any vile or wicked act of any boy or girl of our city. I wish for you the happiest Christmas of all that you have spent. I pray for you that peace and joy may enter your home and that you may give glory to God, and find for yourself the sweet Christmas spirit which the angels brought to earth nearly 2,000 years ago.

"Always your friend,
"WILLIS A. SUTTON.

U. S. Commission Merchants To Meet Here on January 8

All problems relating to the marketing of fresh fruits and vegetables and the various business angles of the industry will come up for consideration and discussion at the 37th annual convention of the National League of Commission Merchants of the United States to be held here at the Biltmore hotel on January 8 to continue through January 11.

The convention will bring to Atlanta several hundred of the most influential commission merchants from all sections of the country. It will be the first time in history that the organization has held a convention in Georgia. The local committee has arranged a splendid program of entertainment, which, together with one of the most constructive and important business programs, will comprise one of the most outstanding conventions scheduled for Atlanta during the coming year.

Hardman, Ragsdale to Speak.

Governor L. G. Hardman will welcome the delegates to the state, and Mayor I. N. Ragsdale will deliver the address of welcome on behalf of the city. The response will be made by J. Earle Roberts, of Philadelphia, Pa., second vice president, general manager and secretary of the league.

Aubrey Milam, of Green & Milam, commission merchants of Atlanta, and chairman of the local executive committee of five in charge of the local end of the conclave, Saturday announced the tentative program of the convention. John M. McCullough, of McCullough Brothers, local commission merchants, is president of the Atlanta branch of the national league and is chairman of the local entertainment program.

Chairmen of other committees include: Ladies, Mrs. Ernest L. McCullough; program, W. G. Merrin; automobiles, T. L. Hoshall; golf, Aubrey Milam; reservations, E. L. McCullough; registrations, Wilshire.

Three Special Trains.

The commission merchants, handling millions of dollars' worth of fruits, vegetables and kindred lines annually from all parts of the country and abroad, will pour into the city on January 7 and 8. They will arrive on three special trains. Two will travel from Boston, New York, New Haven and points east, through Philadelphia and Washington, over the Pennsylvania, thence via Southern to Salisbury, where they will detour for one stopover at Asheville, N. C. Arrangements for handling these trains will be under the direction of Ralph B. Clayberger, Philadelphia, who has charge of all reservations. These trains will be known as "The Eastern States Special," traveling in two sections, and will join the main line of the Southern from Washington to Atlanta at Greenville, S. C.

There will be "The Presidential Special," made up at Cincinnati, bringing delegates from Chicago, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and points en route and named in honor of L. J. Keach, of Indianapolis, president of the league, who will preside at the business sessions of the convention. This special train will be an all-Pullman, club and dining car train of 12 cars, arriving on the morning of January 8 at 8:30 o'clock. Arrangements have been made for plenty of taxicabs to transport the delegates immediately to the Biltmore. This train will travel over the Southern.

"Eastern States Special."

The "Eastern States Special" trains will travel 10 minutes apart, stopping for 15 minutes at Buford, where they will be met by a group of five airplanes, flying in squadron formation, bearing signs beneath the wings reading, "Welcome, National League," and other greetings.

Permission has been asked the United States department of commerce to permit a complete "stunt-air" show at Buford for the amusement of the delegates, and small souvenirs for ladies will be dropped attached to tiny parachutes. The local committee has made arrangements to register all delegates in advance of their arrival here, assuring them a minimum of inconvenience.

The remainder of the day of their arrival will be spent by delegates in "looking over the town" and golfing for those who are interested. During the afternoon of that day the ladies will be given an automobile ride through the city, including visits to probably the federal prison, Cyclorama, through Druid Hills and other points of interest. This would be followed in the evening by a "get-together" meeting in the Georgian ballroom of the Biltmore, featured by select vaudeville acts, informal welcome talks, dancing and buffet supper.

Luncheon at Club.

On Wednesday, January 9, all ladies will be taken to East Lake Country club, and given a bridge-luncheon, with prizes to be awarded. At 2 o'clock that afternoon all men who are interested in golf will be taken to East Lake to witness an exhibition by Bobby Jones and Charley Black, or probably a foursome will be arranged to include two visiting players.

A complete minstrel show, with a cast of 40 people, will be staged at the Women's club on Wednesday night. Included as an added feature will be the Big Bethel choir, to be followed by dancing at the Biltmore until midnight.

Thursday afternoon the visitors will enjoy a trip to Stone Mountain for a view of the Confederate memorial. This will be followed by an elaborate banquet at the Biltmore, where attractive souvenirs will be presented all ladies present. A cabaret show and dancing will follow the banquet.

Address of President.

President Keach's annual address will follow the report of the secretary, greetings of kindred organizations and the welcome addresses. These will conclude the first day's business session, which will be preceded by invocation and memorial services.

The second day's business session, opening at 9:30 o'clock, will be featured by various addresses, including one by Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business, official organ of the chamber of commerce of the United States, Washington, D. C. He will speak on "From the Bottom Up, or the Top Down." M. P. Rasmussen, assistant professor of marketing, New York State College of Agriculture, Cornell university, Ithaca, N. Y., will deliver an address on "Are You an Efficient Wholesaler or Jobber of Fruits and Vegetables?"

"The Practice of Financing Growers and Shippers by Distributors" will be the subject of Earl R. French, executive secretary, New York Food Marketing Research council, of New York.

Topics for special consideration which will conclude this session include "Borah Mandatory Licensing Bill" and the "Summer's Voluntary Registration Bill."

Final Business Session.

The third an dfinal business session will be featured by nomination and election of officers, selection of the convention city for the next convention. Reports of the chairmen of the following committees will be made: Advisory board, A. D. Hitz, Indianapolis; national treasurer, H. F. Waidner, Jr., Baltimore; general manager and secretary, E. L. Roberts, Washington; national councillor of chamber of commerce, of U. S. A., W. E. Jones, Baltimore; branch league councillors, George Lafbury, Pittsburgh; national executive and executive arbitration committee, Stanley R. Kingman, Boston; national legislative committee, Ralph B. Clayberger, Philadelphia; national membership committee, W. B. Shafer, Norfolk; national transportation committee, L. H. Bondi, Springfield, Mass.; foreign trade committee, Carl I. Dingfeler, New York. Announcements of the national and special committees, members of the advisory board and national councillor and delegates to the U. S. Chamber of Commerce for the year 1929 will complete the business program of the convention.

Cuba, Land Rich in History and Romance

The seven winning contestants in the International Oratory contest among secondary school students of more than twenty different nations, in which Georgia high school students will participate, and which is to be staged next summer, will be given a three-month tour of South America. Herewith is presented the first of a series of articles descriptive of the picturesque lands these seven fortunate young finalists will visit.

A gay little land, colorful, fertile and palm-coiffured, distinguished through discovery by Columbus and prosperous in its progress to a nation's estate—that's the Cuba the seven victors in the sixth national oratorical contest will visit on their tour of equator-land and the world "down under" next summer.

There is aged Morro Castle, sentinel under whose watch the young orators of this republic will pass into Havana harbor to greet that republic.

There is Havana, metropolis of the Caribbean and once fought for prize of the very nations whose youth today contend for forensic distinction in the contest which send the student representatives to the United States to its portals.

And there is the seat of a history with the warmth of friction; a history which produced a constitution descendant from that which the seven successful contestants will have extolled.

Island Republic.

The largest of the West Indies, Cuba's area is approximately that of the state of Pennsylvania, but, while the state is nearly rectangular, the island republic is gracefully long, curving and slender. It is set angularly in the Caribbean sea with its head raised to look squarely into the jaws of the Gulf of Mexico and its base swerved southeastward to give up some of its land—at the insistence of nature and the Caribbean—to the creation of Haiti, a hundred miles or so away.

But this is knowledge of the kind which maps give, and on the voyage through the coral-studded southern seas, the orators will have opportunity enough for orientation. It is impressions the boys and girls will journey for, and these a plenty lie waiting for them in old Havana.

As the young orators enter Havana bay they might well dwell upon the history they studied back in their class rooms; upon the story of Fernando de Soto and his discovery of the Mississippi river. They'll recall the Spaniard's explorations of the lowlands which form the southern states of the United States, and his death and burial in the great river he found. They they may know it was from th every bay their ship is sailing that de Soto went forth to accomplishments for which he died.

Ground de Soto Walked.

In Havana itself, the boys may tread the very ground which de Soto walked; may be housed, if only for minutes, in the same old castle in which the discoverer of the Mississippi bid tearful farewell to his wife, Dona Isabel. The aged structure, Castillo de la Fuerza, built in 1514 and still standing, is the castle in which Dona Isabel, like Martha Washington who watched the tomb of her beloved George Washington until death brought her merciful relief from her grief, pined away her life for the intrepid de Soto who never returned.

Likewise Cortez, conqueror of the Montezumas; Ponce de Leon, discover of Florida, and Balboa, first white man to see the Pacific ocean—each of whom contributed so much to the ultimate founding of the nation of the seven orators—went forth to their labors and glories.

Whether Columbus ever saw what is known today as the Bay of Havana is doubtful as most historians agree that his landfall was in northeastern Cuba. It is believed, however, that the great discoverer's body was returned to the city of Havana, where it reposed in the cathedral—still standing—for a hundred years.

Proclaimed February 21, 1901, the constitution of Cuba embraces, like that of the United States, a legislative, an executive and a judicial branch. Again like this country, the legislative body of Cuba is composed of a senate and a house of representatives. While the United States has 48 "states," Cuba has 24 "provinces." Cuba, too, has a president in whom she vests her executive power for a term of four years and he, like the president of the United States, has a cabinet to assist him in his duties. That cabinet, however, differs slightly from that of this country.

Havana Large City.

But again, this is book knowledge and while the orators may be conscious of the similarity between the government of their land and that of the little country they are visiting early in their summer tour, they probably will take more interest in modern Havana as they see it. Havana is no small city; its population is slightly greater than that of Washington, capital of its parent republic, with an estimated 563,000 inhabitants in 1926.

In it, the modern and ancient rub elbows. Wide and palmed avenues, lined with buildings of Moorish and Spanish architecture, run parallel with thoroughfares so narrow that two persons cannot pass on the sidewalk. Many of the doors on the Cuban houses are of solid mahogany and the low flat roofs of the dwellings are used frequently as porches on which siestas and evening reposes may be enjoyed.

The American orators may visit Havana's cigar factories, where readers, perched high above the heads of the workers, read the news or fiction for the diversion of the busy laborers below. The young Americans, too, may go to the fronton, "Palace of Shouts," to watch a game of jai-ali, a sort of hand-ball which is the baseball of Cuba.

No matter where they go, however, the young Americans will learn that a good strong "hiss" to a servant will bring him on the run, and that another "hiss"—instead of a press of an electric button—will stop their trolley car at the next corner.

The Airplane Has Fought Its Battle and Won Its Place in the Community's Every-Day Life

Twenty-Five Years of Aviation

BY EDWARD P. WARNER

Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Aeronautics

PERSPECTIVE makes history. Columbus' crew, dominated by thought of their own perils and miseries and the hope of wealth, had no idea of themselves as great discoverers. Nor did it occur to their contemporaries to set up their contributions to the map as marking an outstanding event in human history. To live in the time of the Reformation was to be intellectually perplexed, and perhaps physically endangered for the holding of unpopular views. But neither leaders of thought nor common men could conceive of the revolution in the spiritual outlook of centuries yet unborn that was being wrought by Luther, Knox and Calvin.

The transient waves that beat upon the beach impress themselves on every bystander, but the great geologic movements that form and reshape continents begin so imperceptibly that their magnitude and significance can be judged only after centuries or millenniums. So with the beginnings of the great basic tides in human affairs. Even twenty-five years is too short a lapse of time across which to regard them fairly, or to rate their true scope.

It lacks just one day now of being twenty-five years since that memorable December 17, when the aspiration to human flight, entertained and struggled for through centuries, was realized at the han ls of two young Americans. We are about to celebrate the anniversary of the day when those patient, shrewd, observant, painstaking brothers from Dayton saw their machine, with one of them at the controls, lift into the air from the lonely wind-swept North Carolina beach where they had gone in search of favoring breezes for their experiments. Even now it is far too early to appraise justly the place of that event in history. It still grows in magnitude with the passage of time, but we have gathered enough perspective to make an attempt from which the eye-witnesses upon that December day early in the century were debarred.

No engraved invitations were sent out for the first flight. Only a few spectators were present, but some of them still live near Kitty Hawk, and one or two are still active members of the life-saving crew there, to which they were attached in 1903. Looking back across the span of years, they can summon up no recollection of marked emotional reaction. They were swept by no realization that the dream of Icarus was coming true before their eyes and that they were privileged to be the first to gaze upon what no eye had ever beheld before. It takes time to assimilate an idea like that.

It takes so much time to overcome a nearly universal reluctance to novelty and to realize that something new is actually going on that not even after five years was the airplane fully accepted. Not only its practical utility, but its very existence, was still being challenged.

The Wrights had been flying in an open field just outside of Dayton through a considerable part of 1904 and 1905. Airplanes had been flown successfully and publicly in Europe during the two succeeding years. Yet in 1908, when Wilbur and Orville Wright went back to Kitty Hawk, scene of their original triumph, for further experimentation, the reporters who furtively followed them there and hid in the brush to watch had their plain tales of fact mercilessly blue pencilled by editors who suspected them of drawing on their imaginations and recounting fantastic impossibilities.

Mark Sullivan's exhaustive study of the contemporary records has revealed an editor whose immediate reaction to the story of the flights of 1908 was to telegraph his correspondent at the scene to "cut out the wildcat stuff."

The record of those early days and of the doubts of public and press is worth examining not only for its historical interest, but because it may impel us to humility in our judgments now. It is as dangerous as ever to set arbitrary boundaries to progress or to human ingenuity, or to conclude that what is new is impossible.

Professor Langley once remarked that every important invention or scientific development had to pass through three stages—the first, in which the popular verdict was that the thing couldn't possibly be done; the second, in which it began to be said that perhaps it could be done, but even if it could it wouldn't be of any use; the last, in which it was impatiently asserted that, of course, it could be done, and everybody had always known it. Professor Langley said that he himself had seen the airplane pass through all three.

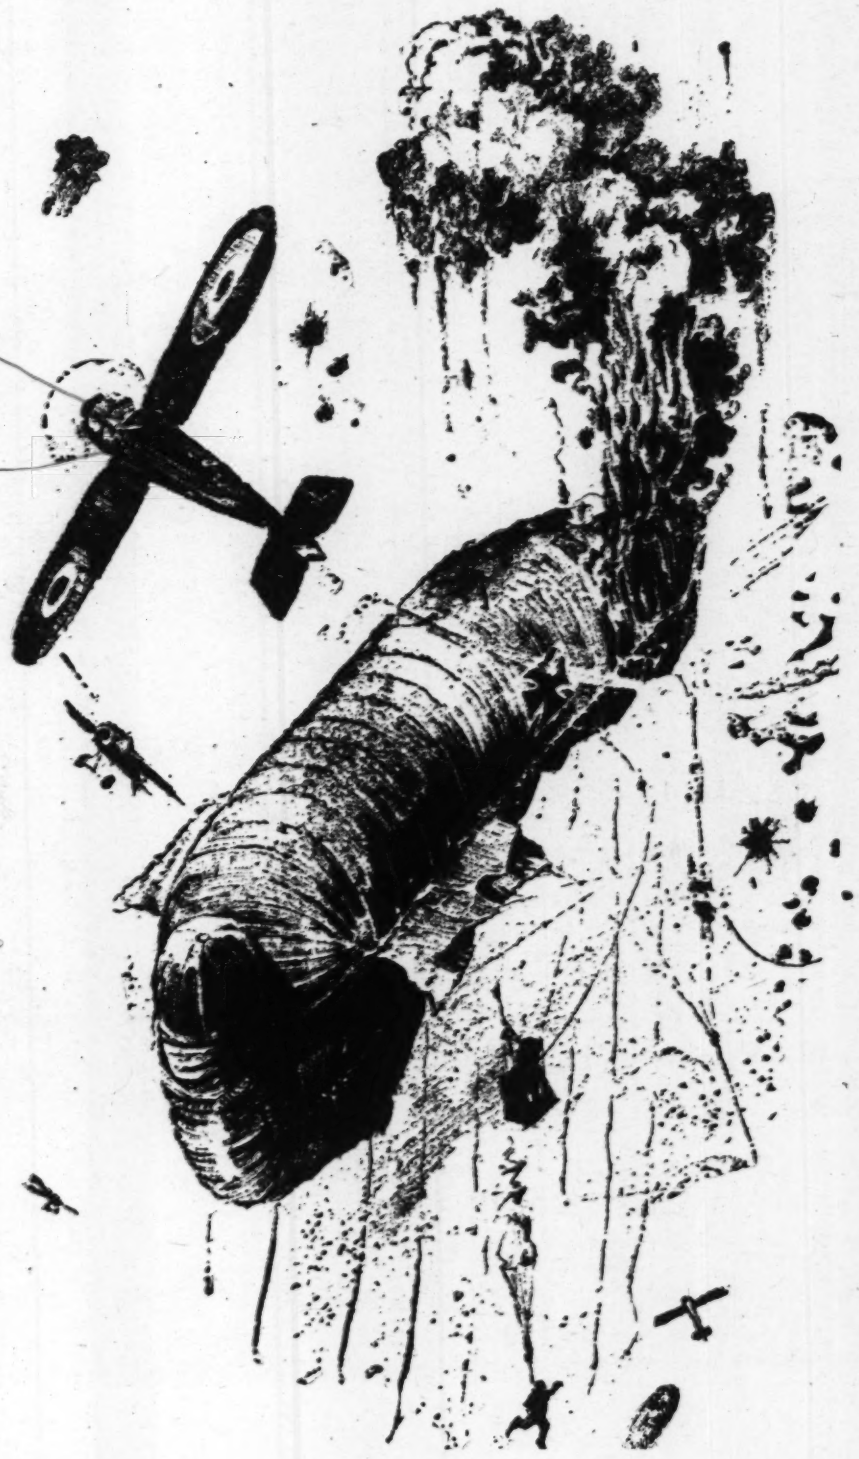

Orville Wright, who made the first flight, has watched the strengthening of the third stage and its transition into a fourth, where the airplane is universally accepted as a permanent utility, one of the things taken so much as a matter of course that we can scarcely recall how we ever got along without it.

The airplane has fought its battle and won its place in the community, but we still must be watchful lest we estimate its development incorrectly or plant ourselves in the path of new basic discoveries, fortifying ourselves and opposing them with the stubborn conviction of impossibility which the previous generation as a whole entertained toward human flight in any form.

Skepticism did not terminate with 1903. Driven reluctantly from its front line trenches and compelled to admit that there was such a thing as an airplane, popular conservatism dug in on the tenet that it was only a scientific toy, tricky and dangerous and incapable of practical use. One need not be a veritable pioneer of aeronautics to recall the amused tolerance with which aircraft enthusiasts were regarded almost up to 1914.

A new industrial art or a new form of transportation sometimes has to overcome that sort of opposition by steady and gradual progress, unmarked by sudden changes in public attitude. So, for example, did the automobile. First there were a hundred cars, then a thousand, ten thousand, a million. The rate of increase was phenomenally rapid, but fairly constant.

The airplane had started along the same road, but other factors intervened. A World War broke out and became the controlling element determining both the amount and the nature of aeronautical development. The war's influence dominated directly, both in belligerent and in neutral countries, for four years. Indirectly it is strongly felt even up to the present time.

The War Tremendously Accelerated the Growth of Aviation

In July, 1914, the air forces of the American army and navy were almost too small for mention, their aggregate equipment a couple of dozen airplanes, Great Britain, France and Germany together could mobilize some six hundred machines at that date, when the airplane already had been available for more than ten years. The world's aggregate production of airplanes for the previous year had probably totaled 600 or 700. In America there were about 270 licensed pilots, but many of them were inactive and possessed only very limited qualifications.

Fifty-two months later the principal powers engaged in the war had something like 60,000 machines in service, despite the enormous losses of equipment inevitable under war conditions. The number of airplanes built during the year immediately preceding the armistice was approximately 120,000, about 14,000 of them being produced in the United States. Nearly 2,000 planes were built in this country during the month of October, 1918. Where there had been less than 600 licensed aviators in the United States as late as January, 1917—and a considerable proportion of those had done no flying for the previous two years—the army and navy later could muster 18,000 pilots.

The war had many effects on aeronautical development, too. Some of them took years to manifest themselves, but one needed only a few weeks. Hostilities had no more than started when it became fully, finally and unchallengably evident that the airplane was to take a leading place among the instrumentalities of war. That is clearer now than it was in 1915 or in 1918. It is an accepted fact, which shapes the national defense policies of the nations of the world. When relations are strained between neighboring states it is the fear of air attack, swift and terrible, that haunts the sleep of premiers and war ministers.

Recognition of the indispensability of the airplane as a scout and as an auxiliary to naval and military forces and of its terrible potentialities as an independent weapon of attack would have come sooner or later in any case, but it was the war that tremendously accelerated its coming.

Military men, charged with great responsibilities for national safety, are traditionally slow to espouse panaceas reposing only on theoretical arguments or on peace-time maneuvers. Until 1914 the airplane fell in that class, and progress was relatively slow, especially in the United States, even though it was in this country that the first military airplane was acquired and put into service. In 1914 military air operations were submitted to the ordeal by fire and emerged triumphant.

In 1913 the aggregate direct expenditure on American naval aviation was less than $50,000. In 1916 this had increased to $1,000,000. For the current fiscal year the figure is approximately $33,000,000. We have increased our expenditures thirty-fold in a dozen years, but the usefulness of the result has been augmented in an even larger proportion, and we are getting more for our money now than ever before, with 600 qualified pilots in the naval service and with up-to-date planes of many types for them to use.

During the current year alone 300 planes will be purchased and naval machines will cover some 20,000,000 miles. In the period of intensive operations between July 1 and October 1 of last summer the service planes did an amount of flying equivalent to circumnavigating the earth two and a half times each day. The completion of the program authorized by Congress will bring naval aviation by 1932 into a proper relation with the remainder of the navy.

The air forces of other countries are embarked upon similar programs of balancing and development, and in each case the air arm is steadily increasing its relative weight in the general scheme of national defense.

The growing place of aircraft in military operations is due in part to the steady improvement in airplane performance—but only in part. Much is due also to the development of accessories making new fields of employment possible, and to the innumerable ideas for further use of aircraft which have proceeded from ingenious minds in and out of the service, and have been given the acid test for approval or rejection by trial in war or in recent years in maneuvers simulating war conditions.

The progress of military and commercial aviation has been affected by the evolution of auxiliary equipment and the introduction of new methods of operation as well as by improvements in the airplane itself. Air transport could be foreseen readily enough, but aerial photographic surveying, aerial dusting to fight the boll weevil and aerial forest fire patrols hardly fell within the scope of imagination in the pioneer days. The economic services of the airplane are now entrenched in a dozen fields, dependent upon qualities quite different from the mere ability to go from one place to another at speed beyond the capacity of any other vehicle known.

The idea of transportation by air was quick to catch the public fancy. Through the days of the Pony Express, through the years when village boys went down to the station to watch the "Limited" sweep through with a shower of sparks, through songs of "Rolling Down to Rio on Great Steamers, White and Gold," improvements in transport have had

Pirates Ahoy!

By Charles B. Driscoll

JOHN WILLIAMS, WHO HAD REASONS ENOUGH FOR TURNING PIRATE

IT WAS not difficult for a good sailor to turn pirate in the eighteenth centruy. In fact, it was sometimes very difficult for an able seaman with any spirit in him to refrain from piracy. A sailor who obeyed the law and was in all things subject to his masters lived a miserable existence most of the time. To call it a dog's life would be base flattery.

Whether in the navy or serving in a merchant ship, the common sailor was badly fed, badly clothed, and subject at all times to inhuman punishment. Any officer considered it his right and duty to have a common sailor beaten with the cat-o'-nine-tails for the slightest infraction of discipline.

Voyages of from 10 weeks to six months duration were regular routine. The seamen became lonely, morose, depressed, and inclined to mutiny, when they had been at sea many weeks on short rations, with vile drinking water and worse words from their officers. Occasionally the dissatisfaction would break out in open mutiny, and then somebody was very likely to be killed. There was always the temptation before the men to toss their cruel officers overboard and take to pirating. That way lay colorful adventure, riches, and the possibility of an easy old age.

John Williams was an American sailor of unusual intelligence, hardihood, and a certain amount of talent for leadership. He was born in the village of Chazee, New York, in 1789, lived the life of a sailor of the period, turned pirate, and was hanged in Boston on February 18, 1819.

In so brief a paragraph one can encompass the story of his life. Reading this simple record, one is inclined to say, "Well, what of it? Just another worthless bum, a criminal who got what he deserved."

But it is interesting and informative to look behind the brief outline, and learn what made a pirate of John Williams. For he was typical of the unsuccessful pirate who committed one or two crimes and paid the penalty.

When Williams was eight years old he was sent to Montreal, in care of a merchant named Fitzgerald, to be educated and trained for some sort of useful mercantile life. He learned English, French, and Latin, with some mathematics, and remained in school until he was seventeen. His father then, at his request, apprenticed him as a lawyer's clerk in the office of one John Ross. At the end of a six months' trial period, Williams was articled to Ross for seven years. The contract called for long hours at work daily, board and clothing to be furnished by the young man's father, no wages, but an opportunity to learn the business of lawyering.

At the end of a year and a half of apprenticeship, Williams was accused by his employer of keeping bad company. The lawyer called in the boy's father, who proceeded to apply the horsewhip upon the back of his wayward son, then about nineteen years old. When the indignant parent was so tired that he could no longer wield the whip, he asked his son what his plans were. John replied that he would not continue in the service of Lawyer Ross, whereupon the father and the employer joined in a complaint which lodged the young man in jail.

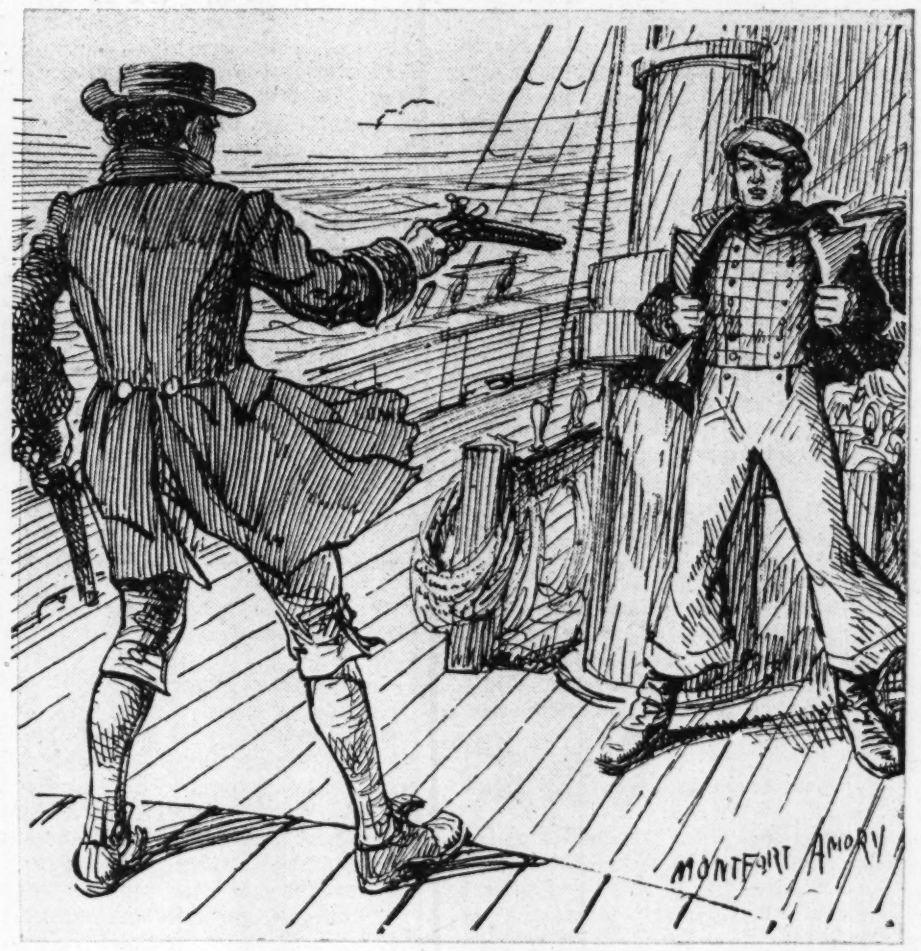

Such was the stern conception of the duties of parents and masters in the early days of the American Republic!

John Williams spent a month in jail, and then six months in the employ of a merchant named McKy. The merchant also accused the young man of keeping bad company, and discharged him. So young Williams went to sea.

He took the pains to steal from his employer the sum of five hundred and fifty Spanish dollars, before secreting himself on board the brig Mayburn.

A few weeks later the young man was a cabin boy on the brig Bettsy, bound for London. At anchor near Gravesend, the brig was boarded by His Majesty's press gang.

In those days, you may remember from your American history, the representatives of His Britannic Majesty insisted upon the right to board any vessel, under any flag, and impress into His Majesty's service any sailors who could not prove that they were not His Majesty's subjects. In 1812, the histories say, the United States went to war with Great Britain to prove that this was all wrong. That war, like many others which shall here be nameless and dateless, proved nothing, and the impressment of seamen from vessels of nearly all nations into the British navy continued until several nations had provided themselves with rather formidable navies of their own.

"Why don't you fire?" he shouted.

John Williams, although a native citizen of the United States of America, was forcibly impressed into the naval service of His Britannic Majesty. Of course, John had no papers to prove his American citizenship.

We set out to learn what made a pirate of John Williams. Tally one good horsewhipping and one illegal imprisonment.

Smarting under his unjust treatment, John Williams talked back to an English officer. For this he was given 36 lashes with the cat-o'-nine-tails on his bare back, which made the horsewhipping by Father Williams quite a pleasant retrospect.

Perhaps we had better set down 36 more tallies, making 38 toward the sum of John's justifications for turning pirate.

After a battle with a French vessel, in which many of the shanghaied English sailors were killed and wounded, young Williams deserted while on brief shore leave. He was recaptured at Maidstone, and after suitable punishment, was drafted on board the Spitfire. There was another cruise, more fighting, and Williams deserted again. He shipped aboard a merchant schooner, and on his return to London, four months later, he was again captured by the press gang.

This time Williams defended himself by claiming French citizenship and speaking no language but French, which he had learned very well during his school days in Montreal.

Despite his French, he was imprisoned in a coal-hole in Liverpool for 10 weeks, and was then discharged by Lord Mayor Drinkwater, who also compelled the officer responsible for Williams' false imprisonment to pay to the prisoner the sum of 34 pounds.

One more tally shall represent 10 weeks in a coal-hole.

There followed a cruise of 10 weeks aboard a Scotch merchantman to Buenos Ayres. There was a "patriot brig" in the harbor, and the captain thereof offered the British seamen 25 a month and a share in all prizes taken. Williams and five others joined up.

Now, a "patriot brig" was a sort of semi-legal pirate. She had papers from some South American republic, and flew any flag that was convenient. She was considered a privateer by nations whose ships she did not molest, and by other nations was rated a pirate.

Williams served five months without pay. When he asked for his wages he was imprisoned for three weeks, and then discharged, still unpaid.

Tally 40.

Shipping aboard the American schooner Ann, for Baltimore, at $40 a month, Williams thought he was bound for his own country, where he could obtain papers to protect him from further imprisonment. Vain hope! Before the Ann was out of Argentine waters, he was pressed aboard the British ship Laurestinus, and later transferred to the Nereus. About two months later, going ashore for water at Lockerin Bay, Scotland, Williams again escaped. He was pursued by the mate, whom he knocked down, jumped upon several times, and left lying unconscious.

This impressment ought to be good for another tally on the score sheet of John Williams.

On the way to England aboard a small lime sloop, Williams was shipwrecked, and saved the life of the master's wife.

On another voyage, Liverpool to Barbados, Williams was again captured by a press gang, and forced to serve aboard the British warship Bucephalus.

Forty-two!

After capturing a French prize, the Bucephalus came to anchor at Zerexie, and Williams asked the captain for his share of the prize money. He got a good flogging instead. This may serve for tally 43.

Williams escaped at the Cape of Good Hope, shipped aboard a merchantman for Rio Janeiro, and while obtaining water on shore in Brazil, quarreled with a Portuguese, was arrested and imprisoned for five weeks on bread and water, in company with a roomful of black slaves, and when liberated found that his ship had sailed. Tally 44.

At Buenos Ayres, two months later, Williams served five weeks in jail for beating up an officer who had attempted to punish him for accidentally bumping against the officer in the street. Forty-five!

We must pass lightly over a long period of sailing on many ships over many seas, during which the scores continued to pile up. At Barbadoes Williams was impressed aboard His Majesty's brig Swagger. Two months later he learned that war had been declared between the United States and Great Britain. Williams then announced to his captain that he would not fight against his own country, upon which he was beaten about the head with the captain's speaking trumpet, and given five dozen lashes on his bare back.

The score is now approximately 101.

Williams was forced to serve in battles against American ships, deserted, served in half a dozen vessels of various nationalities, and eventually returned to his babyhood home, whence he enlisted aboard an American warship and saw service until the end of the war.

With peace came a return to merchant seafaring. Williams shipped with Captain William Hackett aboard the schooner Swift.

Captain Hackett was a brute. He cursed and beat his men constantly, and subjected them to every imaginable hardship and humiliation. Nevertheless, Williams served without much complaint until, eight days at

Your Sons and Your Daughters

Lady Mary Ivinghoe Was Born to Luxury and Ease, But Something of Her Mother's Pioneer Spirit Lived On In Her When the Moment for Action Came

LADY IVINGHOE, who was fifty-five, sat in the long drawing room on the first floor of her house in Berkeley Square and told herself that life is a gay business.

"And it isn't over yet," she thought, "and won't be for ever so long, not for people like David and me—particularly me. David hasn't any more worlds to conquer, at any rate none as big as the ones he has conquered, but I've several left. Once Mary's settled, I'll soon show them."

"I'm glad I was always on the small side. My legs are better than Mary's even now, and my figure's delightful, if I did wear a corset at her age. Her hair's a more attractive color than mine, but my eyes are gray-green, and my mouth is more devilish. When she was born, we'd already climbed half way up the ladder; I was thirty-two and David thirty-five. That's why she's got so much poise and restraint. She's tall like her father, and you can't pick up a girl of her height and whirl her round and round like David used to do with me.

"I'm glad I had the boy when I was twenty-two. David and I were pioneers then, our hands against every man's, and that explains the boy's hair being red like David's and why he turned out a tearing devil, always ready to hit anything twice his size. Now I get my frocks in Grosvenor street and give political receptions and David's in the cabinet; but it's all one colossal bluff; just like Jo'burg in the boom days, although Mary doesn't understand. But, then, the young are more careful now than we were.

"She'll marry George Pont, who's going to be prime minister before he dies, and take no risks. I was a year younger than she is when young David was born at Kloffontein, and we hadn't twopence in the world, and the nearest doctor rode forty miles to look after me and arrived half an hour too late. She'll miss a lot, Mary will, and never know it."

In her bedroom on the floor above the Lady Mary Tring dressed herself exquisitely to take tea with a man she was not going to marry, and considered her future. She began to think on exceedingly recent lines, being no more than twenty-three.

"After all, people of my generation know all there is to know about sex and detest sentiment, and, personally, I've nothing but contempt for a girl who doesn't plan out her life and then stick to her plan. What I intend to do is to marry George Pont. The mere fact that one's hunted a good deal this season with a very attractive person called Bertie Maxwell needn't affect the question. If you're born the daughter of a man worth several millions, whom the king created an earl because of his services to the empire, you've got to live up to yourself.

"I like George very much. I admire him; it's a very old baronetcy, and politically George is the coming man. He's twelve years older than I am and that's about the right difference in ages. He's rich, and that's important, because so am I, and for a rich girl to marry a poor man is fatal. He always has a feeling of superiority, and God preserve me from an apologetic husband. George and I can make a most excellent marriage, do a lot in the world, and be a very important influence. If you're naturally constructive, like me, you can't endure driveling through life and spending the last part of it realizing your own futility."

She slid her arms into her sable coat, a supple miracle of soft fur, picked up gloves and handbag, gave a last look in her glass, and went down to the drawing room.

Lady Ivinghoe half turned at the sound of the door latch. There entered the room a tall girl in soft shades of brown from the deep copper-beech of her hat to the pallor of her stockings. Red-gold side curls brought forward made two patches of color on her face; she had one of those clear, creamy skins that so often go with her coloring. The side curls, blue eyes, and the scarlet line of her lips were the only high notes of color about her. She closed the door and came forward slowly, pulling on her gloves.

"I'm going out to tea, darling," she said.

Lady Ivinghoe looked at her with the eye of the trained soldier for a recruit, a very promising recruit, faultlessly turned out, yet a recruit still. She contrasted her own vitality, a kind of irrepressible hurrying forward to look around the next corner, laughing high spirits that nothing could quench, grave girl.

Mary smiled and asked: "Do I look nice?"

"You're very beautiful," Lady Ivinghoe said rather wistfully. Her voice seemed an echo of Mary's; both their voices had a caressing quality, as if they loved their words and had waited all their lives to say these very words to this very person.

"I s'pose I am, and yet, somehow, you don't sound quite happy about me. Is it the frock or what?"

She held open her fur coat to reveal the frock, but Lady Ivinghoe shook her head.

"The frock's perfect. I was only thinking, somehow, that life's gone very smoothly for you, Mary, and one day I suppose it won't, and then I'm not quite sure what'll happen. You've never learned to use your claws like I have. It's awfully useful to know how."

"I've never let is get as far as claws. My lot don't."

"I always got a certain kick at feeling their faces rip under mine. P'raps you'll never know. You are going to marry George Pont, aren't you, Mary?"

"I think so. It's not definitely settled, but sort of understood. I can't help admiring him. He knows what he means to do and lets nothing get in his way. I don't see any one else in the same world with him. Besides, he's very attractive. He treats me as an equal, for one thing."

Lady Ivinghoe smiled, because David, first Earl of Ivinghoe, had never treated her as an equal—as a goddess sometimes, as a naughty child often, as a darling always.

"Do you love him, if it isn't a rude question?"

"Not in the crazy manner, but quite enough."

Lady Ivinghoe, who knew you can never love quite enough, nodded.

"Is it his tea party, by any chance?"

"No, Bertie Maxwell's. He's going overseas to make his fortune, and it's a kind of farewell celebration."

"O, is he?" Lady Ivinghoe said quickly. "Well, be very nice to him if you can, because I expect he's in love with you, and it's very lonely to go overseas without some one you love."

"Sentiment," answered Mary, smiling in her turn, "is always rather a weakness. Still, I'm going to be very nice, up to a point. He rides awf'ly well; doesn't know what fear means. Good-by, my dear."

The door closed.

II.

Lady Ivinghoe's mind went back thirty-four years to the time when there was no Lady Ivinghoe but only Mary Packer, a fair haired girl of twenty-one, who rode awfully well and didn't know what fear meant.

Her father was the squire of Herewick, in the shires, and Mary grew up under the personal supervision of five brothers older than herself. The old squire never seemed to have any money, but in those days money mattered very little, and somehow all the boys went the public schools and into the navy or army or to the university. When the last brother had gone away to school Mary remained at home with a governess, helped exercise the horses, learned housekeeping from her mother, and prayed for the holidays. Vaguely at the back of her mind she realized that she was expected to marry a rich man.

For Christmas, 1894, Vivian, her favorite brother, was bringing a young fellow barrister down from London, a certain David Logan.

Mary met them at the station five miles away, driving herself in a dogcart with a liveried groom perched at the back, shoulders squared and arms folded.

She reached the station with time to spare, for those were leisured days. The groom walked the horse up and down in the station yard, and Mary walked up and down the platform, nodding to people and servants whom she knew.

Mary saw Vivian emerge from a first-class carriage, ulstered like herself, moustached and side-whiskered. Vivian was dark like her mother and of medium height. There followed him out of the carriage a red-haired young giant of six feet two, a gray-eyed Scot, who seemed to radiate all the strength and vitality in the world.

"Hullo, Mary!" Vivian exclaimed. "This is David Logan. My sister Mary, David."

They shook hands and looked at one another. Mary turned to Vivian.

"Hobson has the float for your luggage and I've got the dogcart. You'l have to sit at the back with Sykes, Vivian, and let Mr. Logan come in front with me. I won't trust you to drive, because Prince is very fresh and he can't bear the cold."

Sykes, standing at Prince's head, touched the brim of his cockaded silk hat. Mary climbed to the driver's seat and David Logan took his place beside her, arranging the black waterproof rug over their knees. Sykes let go Prince's head; Prince lashed out once or twice, danced a little, and moved off, with Sykes springing for the step at the back of the cart. They whirled away through the night at a slashing trot.

"He moves well," David Logan said with his soft Edinburgh accent. "Do you have much trouble to hold him?"

"O, no! He has a mouth like velvet. You can hold him on a snaffle quite easily. He's as good as gold, really, only it's a cold night and he got bored waiting."

Mary, who had never been shy in her life, talked lightheartedly with this tall young man, whom she liked at once.

In the light of the lamps on the lodge gates, David Logan took his first real look at his friend's sister. She sat perfectly erect, reins sorted between the fingers of her little dogskin gloved hands, whip at the correct angle, eyes gazing steadily between Prince's ears. Her profile, beneath the brim of her sailor hat, struck him as delicious, with its firm chin and hint of deviltry about eyes and mouth. Then she sent Prince forward and they bowled along a dark avenue and drew up finally in front of the manor house entrance.

They went out of the dark into the warm glow of the hall, with a great fire burning. On either side of the fireplace sat the squire, still in boots and gaiters, reading by the soft light of the oil lamps, and his wife busy over her sewing. A son or two on leave and a number of dogs completed the group.

Vivian introduced David Logan to his parents. It was a time when parents still enjoyed respect, when the father was lord of his household and the mother mistress of hers. David Logan found his host and hostess a kindly and dignified pair.

Dressing for dinner in his bedroom with the blazing fire, canopied four-poster, immense tall-boy standing against the wall, and the kind of arm chair depicted in Georgian sporting prints, David Logan's thoughts returned again and again to Mary.

He found her in the still, conventional drawing room before dinner, transformed into a very dignified young lady. Her green silk frock repeated the color of her eyes; it reached to the ground, and beneath it nestled a sequence of petticoats; it had shoulder pieces and very short sleeves, and the corsage cut in a deep V. Her fair hair, dressed high on her head, shone from brushing.

They made a stately little procession to the dining room, the squire with his wife on his arm and David with Mary. They talked mostly of hunting.

"The frost is breaking," said the squire. "We shall be able to hunt tomorrow, and I can mount you, Mr. Logan, as it happens, in spite of your inches. You ride, of course?"

"Thank you, sir. I've hunted several seasons with my cousins in Leicestershire and with the University Drag."

The ladies drank very little wine. When they had left the men remained a long time over port and cigars. David could see already that the members of this family were united in a very definite affection for their home and their parents, yet somehow he did not feel a stranger.

When he returned to the drawing room he found Mrs. Packer doing embroidery and Mary playing one of Strauss' waltzes, "Uber den Wellen," at the old fashioned grand piano. His gray eyes met her gray-green ones for a second. The faintest smile intensified for a moment the hint of devilry about her mouth, which he had noticed in the light of the lodge-keeper's lamps. Then she turned her eyes away.

With startling suddenness David Logan realized himself to be in love.

III.

Lady Ivinghoe, in her Berkeley Square drawing room, smiled a little at this point, because her memories were about to become very interesting.

There followed many days' hunting, during which David Logan reached the standard imposed by a very critical company; then frost made the ground iron hard again and brought hunting to a standstill. For this reason, in the blue-gray of a deepening winter twilight, Mary Packer was walking homeward along a frostbound road beside David Logan. She had taken the opportunity, as hunting was out of the question, to visit an invalid in the village, and David insisted on walking with her to carry her basket. On the outward journey they talked and laughed, but coming back they said very little.

Mary felt instinctively that before they reached the manor, David would ask her to marry him. The idea made her very happy, because she realized that she had fallen in love with him at their first meeting at the railway station.

Presently they came to a gate in the hedge and he put a hand on her arm. He looked down at her very gravely and said: "Mary, I want to tell you something, and this is the only chance I'm likely to get."

Devils began to dance in Mary's eyes.

"Well, David, you'd better hurry up. It's awfully cold."

He dropped the empty basket and took both her hands in his big ones.

"I love you and I want to marry you. Do you love me, Mary?"

Mary looked up at him and answered, with a faint note of impatience in her voice: "Of course I do. Ever since the evening when I first saw you. It's funny, because I've never really been in love before in all my life."

He bent down and kissed her passionately. She closed her eyes and gave herself up to being kissed. Then she opened them and saw that he still looked very grave. She put her hands up to the lapels of his coat and asked: "What's the matter, David? Why are you so worried?"

"Because, darling, I'm going to South Africa in a few weeks' time, and I don't know when I shall come back. I want to marry you at once and take you with me, but you mayn't want to go and your people are certain to be horrified at the idea."

Mary smiled and more devils lurked round the corners of her mouth. "I adore adventures. What are you going to do in South Africa, David?"

"I'm going there to make my fortune. I'm tired of sitting waiting for briefs that don't turn up. I've got just a thousand pounds in the world. I propose to risk it in a new country. Do you still want to marry me?"

"Yes, David, please. I'm quite used to making my own dresses. We've never been very well off, and the boys have always needed most of what there was. I'm afraid you'll find father very difficult, because it was always supposed I should marry Jack Butler. The Butlers have a place eight miles from here and they're immensely rich. Jack's coming to dinner tonight."

"And supposing your father won't let you marry me, Mary?"

Mary's chin tilted and her mouth set. "I'm twenty-one and I can do as I please, David. I'd rather not quarrel, because my father and mother have always been very good to me, but if you really love me and you really want me, I'll go to the end of the world with you in spite of anything."

Naturally there had been consternation at Herewick manor. The squire thundered in Jovelike majesty, and the squire's lady appeared very distressed.

Jack Butler, though not formally affianced, showed himself extremely proprietory and made a formal offer of marriage, only to have it refused gracefully by the lady concerned. David Logan stood like a rock. If Mary consented to marry him, marry her he would, if not from her father's house, then elsewhere. At last, out of affection for Mary, the squire gave way.

After three weeks of whirling excitement, the buying of frocks and the packing of wedding presents, Mary found herself for the first time in her life in a great liner, alone with her husband, steaming towards the sun. Presently the Southern Cross looked down on them by night and the sun shone uninterruptedly by day. She lay in a deck chair beside a David immersed in Roman-Dutch law and felt wildly happy. At last they steamed into Table bay, with Cape Town clustering at the foot of a great mountain, and began the long journey to Johannesburg, the City of Gold.

That was in 1895, when the boom in mining shares increased and the stock exchange boiled; not a bad opportunity for a young Scottish barrister with a constitution of iron and determination to match. At the end of the year little David was born in some remote drop where his father had gone to investigate a mining proposition.

Then, during four years, David Logan laid the foundations for his career as a financier till the storm between Boers and Uitlanders blew up to a hurricane after the Jamestown raid in December, '98; and in May, 1899, Sir Alfred Milner, high commissioner at the Cape, cabled to Mr. Chamberlain: "The case for intervention is overwhelming."

David Logan, riding the whirlwind till the last moment, reached Cape Town just before the Boer ultimatum made war inevitable. There Mary spent the three war years in a sort of crazy nightmare; the hectic early days when General French escaped by train from Ladysmith, on the point of being beseiged, and Rhodes was shut up in Kimberley, having acute dissensions with the military; when Buller landed with his three ill-fated divisional commanders, Methuen, Clery ,and Gatacre; when the 1,000 casualties of Methuen's action at Magersfontein ,shook the empire to the core and brought Roberts and Kitchener hurrying to the Cape to land on January 10th, 1900.

Unforgettable days, with Lady Sarah Wilson and Winston Churchill war corresponding, all the Johannesburg Jews carousing in exile at the Cape, London society beauties enduring a willing exile in Cape Town to beguile the convalescence of guards officers, and Baden-Powell conducting a serio-comic defense of Mafeking.

But it was at Cape Town that Da-

Tarred and Weathered

BY WEARE HOLBROOK

ONE of the saddest signs of approaching winter is the fading of the vacation complexion. In September the city is full of nut-brown maids and bare-headed boys with cheeks of tan. A tribe of swarthy foreigners seems to have taken possession of the banks and office buildings. Apparently the predictions of certain pessimistic sociologists have come true, and the rising tide of color is threatening Nordic supremacy.

But by the middle of October the sun-burned blondes are no longer painful to look at, and the brunettes have faded from mahogany to weathered oak. Even the week-end golfers begin to take on the refined pallor of civilization. And by the middle of December it is impossible to distinguish the man who spent three months in the mountains from the man who took no vacation at all. Gone is the vanilla-and-chocolate effect produced by the outline of a bathing suit upon the human form supine. Those long afternoons which we spent at the seashore, prostrate before the great god Tan, are only a memory. We are pale December shadows of our gay September selves.

When the Oddleighs returned from their vacation at Septic Beach last summer they were parboiled and proud of it.

But eventually their tan and sunburn faded. Mr. Oddleigh's shoulders, which he had colored as painstakingly as any sophomore ever colored a meerschaum pipe, soon ceased to excite admiration in the locker room of the country club.

Mr. Oddleigh, however, refused to let his environment daunt him. "There is no reason why a person shouldn't enjoy the health-giving benefits of the sun's rays in the winter as well as in the summer," he declared. "Sunlight is just as important as food and fresh air. It prevents rickets. Only the other day I saw a picture of a family of white mice that some scientist had been experimenting with. The ones that had been kept away from the sunlight were bow-legged and much smaller than the others. They had rickets. It was quite pathetic."

"But we don't have any bow-legged mice," said Mrs. Oddleigh.

"It's ourselves I'm thinking of," her husband explained. "Our bodies are literally starving for sunshine, here in the city."

"I don't see what we can do about it," she said. "Everything at the beach is closed up now. Besides, it's too cold, unless you're one of those people who go swimming in midwinter just to get their pictures in the paper."

"We won't have to go to the beach," said Mr. Oddleigh. "We can go right up on the roof of this apartment house. It's the ideal place for a sun-bath—a big, private playground, sheltered from the wind and open to the sky, high above the dirt and noise of the city. All the advantages of a summer resort without any of the travel and expense. Just think of it!"

Mrs. Oddleigh thought of it. "All right," she said. "You try it first, and tell me how it is."

So the next bright Sunday he put on his bathing suit and bathrobe, gathered up an armful of newspapers, and announced that he was going up on the roof for a sun-bath.

"You'd better take along a blanket," Mrs. Oddleigh advised.

"Nonsense!" he retorted. "Do you think I'm an invalid?"

"No," she conceded. "Not physically."

"Wait till you see me all brown and healthy," he said, tauntingly. "Then you won't be so snooty."

As Mr. Oddleigh waited for the elevator he whistled merrily and danced a little jig on the cold tiled floor. He had recaptured the carefree vacation spirit of midsummer. "Up!" he said, stepping jauntily into the car.

"Down," replied the operator.

"Listen," said Mr. Oddleigh, "just run me up to the top floor first, won't you?"

"Them folks down below was ahead of you," explained the operator, indicating his signal board. "I hate to keep 'em waiting, with Christmas so close."

"That's all right," insisted Mr. Oddleigh, "I'll make it worth your while." He reached into the pocket of his bathrobe and pulled out a piece of soap, a tooth brush and an aspirin tablet. "Here, take this," he said, thrusting the aspirin tablet into the operator's hand. "Next time my bootlegger calls, I'll give you a headache to go with it."

Leaving the elevator at the top floor, he pattered down the hallway to the stairs which led to the roof. Just as he reached them a hoarse voice behind him shouted:

"Hey, you!"

Mr. Oddleigh turned around and beheld a tousled head protruding from apartment 12J. The door of 12K opened and another head appeared.

"So you're the guy that's been swinging our Sunday papers!" declared 12J triumphantly.

"Not at all," replied Mr. Oddleigh, clutching the bundle under his arm. "These belong to me."

"Who are you?" demanded 12J.

"My name is Oddleigh. O. O. Oddleigh. I live here."

Then 12J appealed to 12K. "Did you ever see this bird before, Harry?"

"His face looks kind of familiar," admitted 12K dubiously, "but I can't place him."

"I live down on the sixth floor," explained Mr. Oddleigh.

"Then what are you doing up here?" asked 12J suspiciously.

"I'm on my way to the roof, to take a sun bath," said Mr. Oddleigh.

"A sun bath!" echoed 12J.

Mr. Oddleigh nodded, unfastened his bathrobe and showed them that he was dressed in bathing suit.

Then 12J and 12K shook their heads incredulously. "Well, Harry," said 12J, as Mr. Oddleigh continued on his way, "I guess it takes all kinds to fill an apartment house."

Pushing open the door at the head of the stairs, Mr. Oddleigh stepped out upon the roof and gazed about him, like a stout Cortez pinch-hitting for Balboa. The roof was more complicated than he had expected. He had pictured it as a broad expanse of smooth gravel surrounded by neat brick coping—a sort of walled garden with occasional chimney pots instead of trees.

But instead it proved to be a confused hodge-podge of pipes, posts, tanks and turrets. It reminded him of a modernist setting for a German "movie."

It was only after a diligent search that Mr. Oddleigh found a sunny spot large enough to stretch out in. He had intended to make a little carpet of newspapers to lie on, but as soon as he put them down a gust of wind picked them up and scattered them across the roof.

With his bathrobe flying behind him, Mr. Oddleigh set out in pursuit of the scattered sheets. He hurdled ventilators, vaulted skylights, chinned himself on clothes lines, and at length succeeded in cornering a fragment of the classified columns. But when he attempted to retrace his steps he found himself hemmed in by a veritable jungle of radio aerials. A confused tangle of wires surrounded him on all sides; their cold, coppery tentacles coiled about his knees and elbows, and he felt like a fly caught in a great metallic web.

Sighing happily, he returned to his sunny spot, rolled up his bathrobe to make a pillow for his head, and lay down with his face to the sky. There was a cool breeze, but the sun was bright, and the roof itself seemed to radiate heat. Mr. Oddleigh's eyes closed, and he slept. . . .

He was awakened several hours later by a sound of shrill barking. Turning his head, he gazed into the world-weary eyes of a Pekingese dog. "Go away," said Mr. Oddleigh sleepily.

The dog wagged its tail in a condescending manner, and began licking Mr. Oddleigh's left ear.

"Stop it!" protested Mr. Oddleigh, raising his head. He attempted to sit up, but to his dismay he discovered that some unseen force was holding him down. He could move his head and wiggle his toes, but the rest of his body seemed paralyzed.

The sun was high in the sky. There was an odor of warm tar in the air. Sniffing it, Mr. Oddleigh realized what had happened. He was stuck to the roof.

When at last he freed himself from his adhesive bed his color scheme resembled that of a penguin. But for the timely arrival of the Pekingese he might have become a permanent fixture on the roof; future generations of scientists might have discovered his fossilized remains and given him a jaw-breaking name.

"Good boy!" said Mr. Oddleigh. As he stooped over to pat the dog, a large lady in kimono and curl papers appeared from behind a nearby chimney pot. She gazed at Mr. Oddleigh with suspicion and then with alarm. "Come, Fifi!" she cried. "Come to mama!" And snatching up the dog she ran to the door and disappeared.

A frosty wind struck the untarred portions of Mr. Oddleigh's body and he shivered. He had had enough sun bathing for one day. After a discreet interval of waiting he followed the lady with the dog.

But when Mr. Oddleigh reached the door which had admitted him to the roof he found it securely fastened from the inside. He pushed it, pulled it and rattled the latch in vain. The lady with the dog had taken no chances. He was locked out.

Finally, with a light of determination in his eyes, Mr. Oddleigh approached the little sentry box which marked the top of the dumb-waiter shaft. Force had failed and the time for strategy had come. . . .

It was nearly an hour later that Mrs. Oddleigh, summoned to the kitchen by mysterious noises, opened the door of the dumb-waiter and beheld her husband crouched in the cubby hole reserved for ice and garbage.

"Welcome to Apartment 6L!" cried Mrs. Oddleigh, with old-fashioned courtesy. "I was just thinking of coming up on the roof to see how you were getting along. How are all the little infra reds and ultra violets?"

His only reply was a groan, as he eased himself out of his cozy compartment and tottered across the floor. His legs, cramped by their close confinement in the dumb-waiter, refused to straighten themselves.

"Rickets!" exclaimed Mrs. Oddleigh, tragically. "My dear, you must go right back to the roof and absorb some more rays. I won't have my husband looking like a mouse."

Mr. Oddleigh shook his head as much as the crick in his neck would permit. "Not today," he said feebly.

"Well, you certainly acquired a wonderful coat of tan anyhow," she remarked, surveying his tarry back and shoulders. "Why, you couldn't have got a deeper, richer color if you'd spent the entire winter at Palm Beach!"

And best of all, as Mr. Oddleigh has discovered, after persistent scrubbing with soap and water, it is the sort of color that lasts. From present indications, it looks as if he will have a head-and-shoulders start on the rest of the sun bathers at Septic Beach when the season opens next summer. While others wait impatiently for the return of the prodigal sunburn Mr. Oddleigh is, as his wife so aptly expresses it, "as brown as a berry." The smile is not as explicit as it might be, but perhaps that is just as well. There are all kinds of berries—including huckl and razz.

NO. 28---"THE OBLONG BOX"---BY EDGAR ALLAN POE

SOME years ago I engaged passage from Charleston, S. C., to the City of New York in the fine packet ship Independence, Captain Hardy. We were to sail on the 15th of the month (June), weather permitting, and on the 14th I went on board to arrange some matters in my stateroom.

I found that we were to have a great many passengers, including more than the usual number of ladies. I found, among other names, the name of Mr. Cornelius Wyatt, a young artist, for whom I entertained feelings of warm friendship. He had been, with me, a fellow-student at C——— university, where we were very much together. He had the ordinary temperament of genius and was a compound of misanthropy, sensibility and enenthusiasm.

On referring to the passenger list a second time I found that he had engaged passage for himself, wife and two sisters. And yet there were three staterooms for four persons—a thing I could not understand, since there were two berths in each stateroom. At last I concluded that it must be for a servant. But the word servant on the record had been written, then overscored. For baggage? Why, of course—a painting or something that he wished to keep an eye on. I said to myself, "That is what he has been bargaining for with Nicolino, the Italian Jew."

Wyatt's two sisters I knew very well, and most amiable and clever girls they were. His wife I had never met as they were but newly married. So that I was anxious to meet her, and I remained on ship in order to get a view of the bride, but Captain Hardy informed me that "Mrs. W. was a little indisposed and would not come aboard until the next day at the hour of sailing."

But I was to be disappointed. The vessel was forced to wait a week because of a strong southerly breeze, and it was nearly a week before we departed. Wyatt's party arrived about 40 minutes after myself. There were the two sisters, the bride and the artist. He did not even introduce me to his wife, since he knew me so well, and his sister, Marian, made us acquainted in a few words.

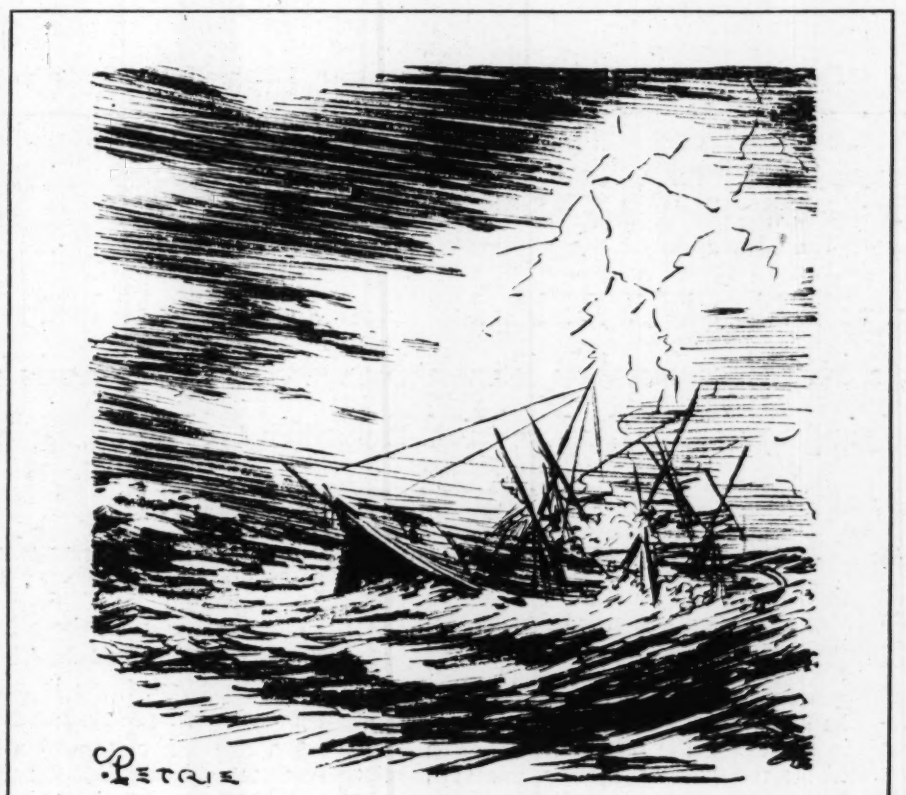

Mrs. Wyatt had been closely veiled. When she raised her veil in acknowledging a bow I was at once astonished. For my artist friend, when he had been her suitor, had described to me a very lovely creature. The truth is, Mrs. Wyatt was a decidedly plain-looking woman. We said very few words and she passed into the stateroom with Mr. Wyatt.

My old inquisitiveness returned and I looked about for the extra baggage. After some delay a cart arrived at the wharf with an oblong pine box. Immediately it was lifted over the rail and we were soon at sea.

The box in question was, as I say, oblong. It was about six feet in length and two and a half in breadth. Now the shape was peculiar and no sooner had I seen it then I took credit to myself for the accuracy of my guessing. Now, an artist could only want to take along pictures, and here was a box that must contain a painting of peculiar shape. That could be nothing but Leonardo's Last Supper, and a copy of this painting I knew to be in the hands of Nicolino. This point, therefore, I considered as sufficiently settled. I chuckled excessively when

The box did not go into the extra stateroom. It was deposited in Wyatt's own and occupied nearly the whole of the floor, no doubt to the exceeding discomfort of the artist and his wife. On the lid were painted the words, "Mrs. Adelaide Curtis, Albany, New York. Charge of Cornelius Wyatt, Esq. This side up. To be handled with care." Now I was aware that Mrs. Adelaide Curtis, of Albany, was the artist's wife's mother; but then the address was very plainly for mystification. I made up my mind that the box and contents would never get farther north than the studio of my misanthropic friend in Chambers street, New York.

For the first three or four days we had fine weather, although the wind was dead ahead. Every one was in high spirits and social except Wyatt and his party, who all acted very stiffly. Wyatt himself was gloomy even beyond his usual habit, in fact, being quite morose, but I was prepared for his eccentricity.

Our After-Sail Split to Ribbons, Bringing Us So Much In the Though of the Water That We Shipped Several Prodigious Seas.

Mrs. Wyatt was quite chatty; and to be chatty is no slight recommendation at sea. But I found out that Mrs. W. was far oftener laughed at than with. The gentlemen said little about her, but the ladies in a little while pronounced her "a good-hearted thing, rather indifferent-looking, totally uneducated and decidedly vulgar." The great wonder was that Wyatt had been entrapped into such a match. Wyatt had told me that he had married alone for love. But this was strange for one of his refinement to be attracted by such a person. To be sure, the lady seemed quite fond of him, particularly so in his absence, when she made herself ridiculous by her frequent quotations of what had been said by her "beloved husband, Mr. Wyatt."

If anything were wrong, I pitied my friend from the bottom of my heart, but could not, for that reason, forgive his incommunicativeness in the matter of the Last Supper. For this I resolved to have my revenge.

One day he came up on deck and, taking his arm as had been my won't, I sauntered with him backward and forward. His gloom seemed entirely unabated. He said little and that moodily and with effort. At last I ventured a home thrust. I determined to commence a series of covert insinuations or innuendos about the oblong box, just to let him perceive that I had been the victim, but not the whole victim, of his little bit of mystification. I remarked on the "peculiar shape of that box," and as I spoke I smiled knowingly and touched him gently with my forefinger in the ribs.

At first he stared at me as if he found it impossible to comprehend the witticism of my remark. Then he grew very red, then hideously pale, all in one minute. Then as if highly amused he began a loud and boisterous laugh, which to my astonishment he kept up with gradually increasing vigor for 10 minutes or more. In conclusion he fell flat and heavily upon the deck, to all appearances dead.

I called assistance, and with much difficulty we brought him to himself. At length we bled him and put him to bed. The next morning he was quite recovered, so far as regarded his mere bodily health. Of his mind I say nothing, of course. I avoided him during the rest of the passage, as the Captain cautioned me about his insanity, to all appearances.

Two nights after the unfortunate incident I was finding it difficult to sleep, and as my stateroom opened into the main cabin I went in there. Wyatt's three rooms were in the after cabin which was separated from the main cabin by a sliding door, rarely closed. While I was watching the ship heeled to leeward very considerably and the sliding door came open. I clearly saw Mrs. W. about 11 o'clock steal cautiously from the stateroom of Mr. W. and enter the extra room, where she remained till daybreak, when she was called by her husband and went back.

While I was still recovering from surprise at this strange occurrence, I heard a sound of the artist prying open the box with a chisel and mal-let, the latter being apparentl, muffled or deadened in some soft woolen in which it was enveloped. I imagined that I could see the moment in which he opened the little lid. After that there was a dead stillness, until very near daybreak. That is, unless I mention a low sobbing or murmuring that seemed to come from his stateroom. I guessed at the meaning of all of this, which in two subsequent nights I found to be a daily custom. He was evidently indulging in another of his quaint hobbies. He opened the oblong box in order to feast his eyes on the pictorial treasure within. There was nothing in that itself, however, to make him sob.

We had been at sea seven days, and were now off Cape Hatteras, when there came a tremendously heavy blow from the southwest. Everything was made snug, alow and aloft; and, as the wind steadily freshened, we lay to, at length, under the spanker and foretopsail, both double-reefed.

In this trim we rode safely for some 48 hours, without shipping water of any consequence.

At the end of this period, however, the gale freshened into a hurricane, and our after-sail split to ribbons, bringing us so much in the trough of the water that we shipped several prodigious seas. By the accident we lost three men overboard with the caboose, and nearly the whole of the larboard bulwarks. Scarcely had we recovered our senses before the foretopsail went into shreds, when we got up a storm staysail, and with this did pretty well for some hours, the ship heading the sea much more steadily than before.

The gale still held on, and we saw no sign of its abating. The rigging was found to be ill-fitted and greatly strained, and on the third day of the blow our mizzenmast, in a heavy lurch to windward, went by the board. To add to our dilemma we found the pumps choked and nearly useless.

All was now confusion and despair, but an effort was made to lighten our cargo by throwing much overboard. We also cut away the two masts that remained, but we were still unable to do anything with the pumps.

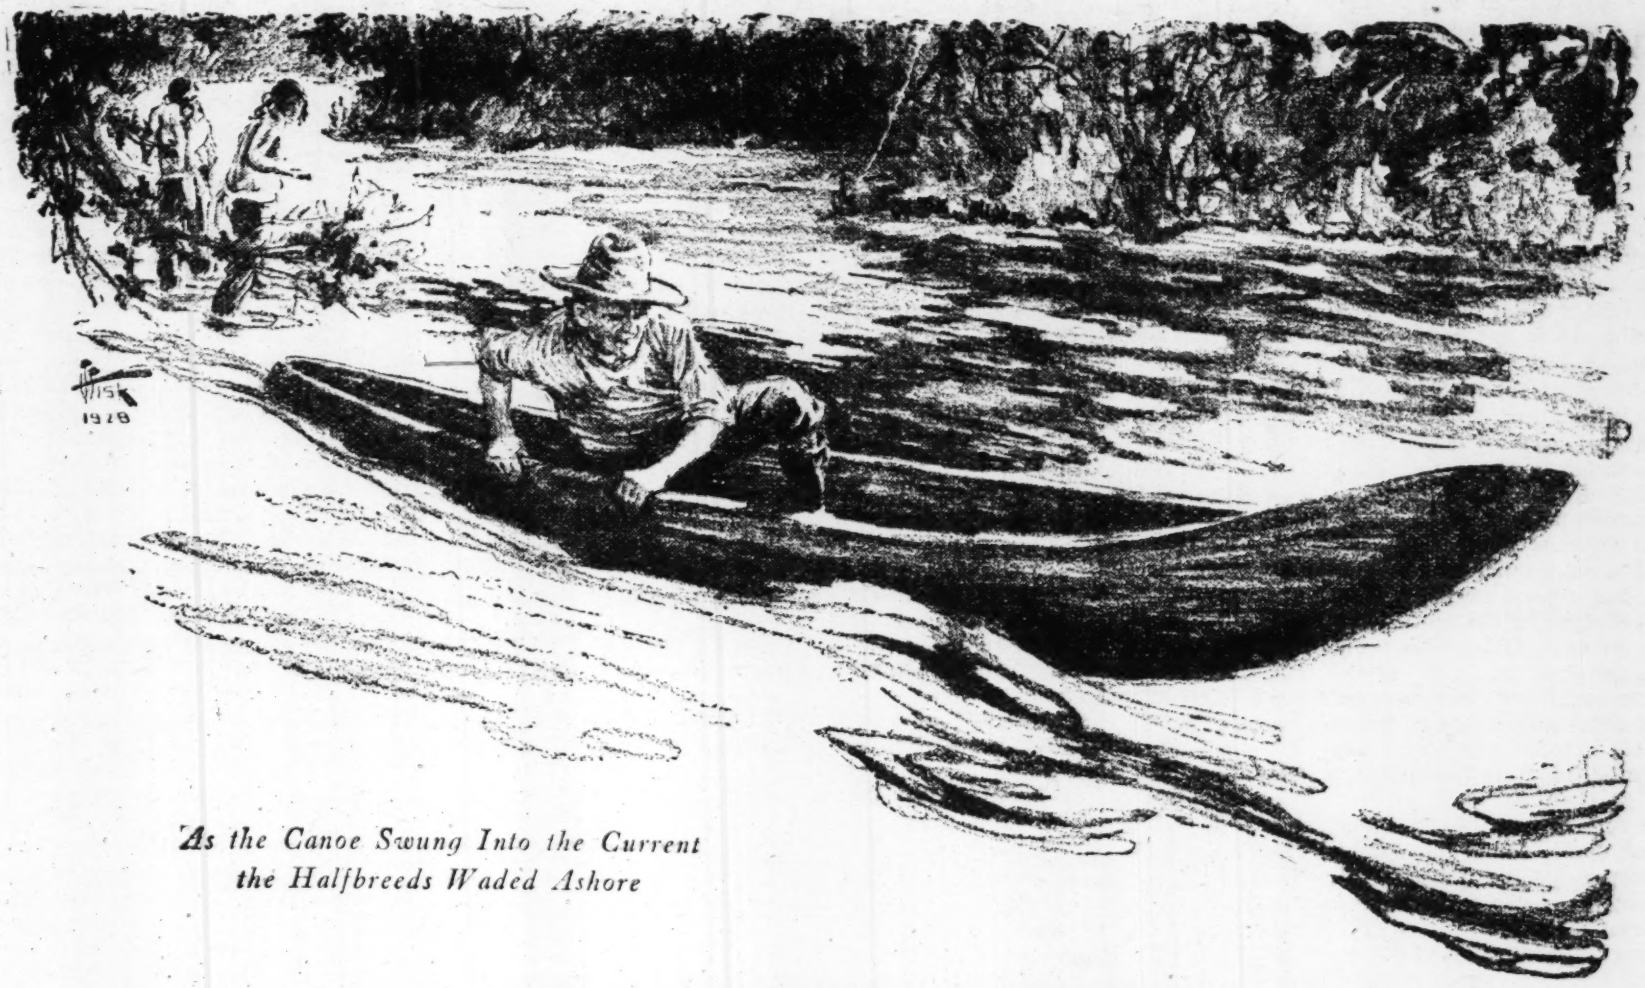

At sundown the gale had sensibly diminished in violence, and as the sea went down with it we still entertained faint hopes of saving ourselves in the boats. At 8 p. m. the clouds broke away to windward and we had the full advantage of a full moon, a piece of good fortune which served wonderfully to cheer our drooping spirits.

After seemingly incredible labor, we got the long boat over the side without material accident, and into this we crowded the whole of the crew and most of the passengers. This party made off immediately and arrived, after much suffering, at Ocracoke Inlet, the third day after the wreck.

Fourteen passengers, with the Captain, remained on board, resolving to trust their fortunes to the jollyboat at the stern. We lowered it without difficulty, although it was only by a miracle that we prevented it from swamping when it touched water. It contained, when afloat, the Captain and his wife, Mr. Wyatt and party, a Mexican officer, wime, four children and myself, with a negro valet.

We had no room for anything but ourselves and the clothes on our backs. What must have been the astonishment of all when Mr. Wyatt, a

The King of the Xingu

In the Brazilian Wilderness That Will Be Modernized Through the Influence of Herbert Hoover and Henry Ford, a Ruthless Rubber Baron Now Rules Thousands With an Iron Hand, Defying Law and Order—and Becoming a Jungle Millionaire

BY FRANCIS GOW SMITH

Leader of a Recent Expedition to the Brazilian Jungle

THROUGH the impenetrable jungles southwestward from Henry Ford's huge rubber concession on the Tapajos river there lies, in the most mysterious and fascinating region of Brazil, the domain of the world's most picturesque rubber baron. He is the wealthiest man north of Matto Grosso—a jungle millionaire. He lives like a hermit, in a rustic palace, commanding a great retinue of peons, who are virtually slaves.

He is known throughout Brazil as the King of Xingu. That very name is feared, not only by whites and negro peons, but by wild Indians who fear no other human being. He typifies the feudal tyranny of remote plantation methods in Brazil just as his new competitor in the rubber business, typifies North America's industrial enterprise.

And not the least dramatic phase of Ford's Brazilian project will be the wiping out of the King of Xingu's rubber monopoly, the liberation of his peons and the dawn of a new day for Brazilian prosperity.

Henry Ford has never met his jungle rival, and there is not much likelihood that he ever will. Nor is it probable that the lord of the rubber gatherers will be presented to Herbert Hoover during his present good-will mission to Latin America.

But these two—Henry Ford and Herbert Hoover—are his worst enemies. Thanks to them, the whole system of cruel enslavement and crude methods for which this jungle Croesus stands is doomed.

The president-elect will not have time during his hurried journey to visit such out-of-the-way primitive districts as the territory over which the King of the Xingu holds sway. But much of Brazil's future growth will be based not oy commercial progress in the cities, but on the exploitation of the rubber, nuts, lumber, minerals, cocoa and other raw materials of the romantic interior.

It is in the very midst of this romantic interior of Brazil that the King of the Xingu has set up his jungle domain, in the unmapped wilderness between the Rio Araguaya and the Xingu.

The Xingu river enters the Amazon from the south, flowing through the least known region of Brazil. West of it is the Tepajos river, near the mouth of which is Ford's plantation. To the east of the Xingu is the Tocantins, of which the Araguaya is an upper branch. The rubber realm ruled by the King of Xingu spreads on both sides of the river whose name he bears, and within indefinite, unmapped boundaries comprises an area fully as large as Portugal, parent-land of Brazil's early days. Within this great area, over which the King of Xingu exercises the very power of life and death, there are a few thousand white subjects and uncounted thousands of savages.

Into this region the present king came a quarter of a century ago as a penniless immigrant from Italy. The story goes that he served first as an ordinary laborer among the peons of the then dictator of the region.

A characteristic exploit of this earlier ruler was his construction of a canal to shorten the water route to Para. The canal was dug by a host of negro and Indian serfs. Those who were most rebellious in their servitude were ordered into the ditch on the last day of construction to clean up a rocky portion. While they were working there the water was let in with a rush from the upper end and they were drowned in the deluge.

Whether or not the present King of the Xingu had a hand in that outrage, he at least proved such an apt pupil when it came to discipline by cruelty and extermination that he soon was established as general manager for his boss, and later succeeded him as czar of the region. Since then he has extended his sway beyond the wildest dreams of his predecessor.

He has been able to do this by a reign of terror such as the Middle Ages seldom knew and by keeping his peons continually in debt to him. No matter how much rubber the gatherers may collect, it is never sufficient to pay for the extremely simple food for which it is bartered.

Elsewhere plantation czars of the interior order their capungas, or overseers, to trail and dispatch an escaping peon, returning with an ear for evidence of duty fulfilled. But the King of Xingu has a labor shortage problem to take into account. His peons who seek to break away without paying off their crushing debts are pinned in stocks, unmercifully beaten, and then left to lie for hours upon the ground. Vampire bats feast upon their blood and hordes of ants gnaw at their bare skins. After such treatment the King of Xingu is assured that one more victim of his tyranny will remain an abject toiler in his services.

His reign has not been without futile revolts among the 4,000 or more tormented peons under him. But the only plot that ever seriously endangered him was organized by Manoel Luiz, a rough fugitive from the diamond fields. The tempestuous Manoel, run out of Casanunga, came down the river and worked as a rubber gatherer to earn a new supply of food. With his wily tongue he began to foment a revolt among the usually listless and abject peons of the King of Xingu.

Manoel saw himself as the new strong man of the country. But before his plot was hatched—before he had even been able to encounter the elusive King face to face—the latter sent out from his jungle lair a selected trio from his personal bodyguard. They fell upon Manoel as he was cooking supper one night and lashed him to an ant-infested tree known to the natives as the "Tree of Saints" because early missionaries had been tied to it by the Indians for treatment similar to that meted out to Manoel. As the first step in the punishment they poured into his mouth a few drops of an Indian poison that paralyzes the tongue. Meanwhile, hordes of the ants overwhelmed the helpless rebel.

Most of the peons, wracked by fever and naturally indolent from hookworms, endure their fate without a murmur. Ordinarily they work in groups from a central rubber camp

Living in flimsy shelters made of sapling posts and thatched with leaves and grass, they lead a solitary existence, working day and night. They spend their days collecting latex and at night, after an unpalatable supper cooked over a fire built on stones in front of their shack, they smoke the latex to prepare it for shipment.

Once a month they come in from the jungle for their meager supplies, mostly beans with a little pork fat doled out to them on credit. They leave the rubber they have gathered and return to their patch of jungle, often thirty or forty miles from the central camp.

By the end of the year the rubber gatherer has turned over to the king's capunga perhaps three thousand pounds of rubber. Each capunga keeps a complicated set of books, which the illiterate peon cannot decipher. The books invariably show, however, that the rubber delivered does nto compensate for the supplies advanced through the previous year. The unhappy peon gets new supplies on credit and returns to his labors still further in debt. No money changes hands at all. Indeed, the whole commerce, up to the time the rubber is delivered in Para, is often purely a matter of bartering raw materials for a new grub stake. Many of the men through whose hands it passes are in debt for supplies to the next man to whom they deliver it.

Once a year comes the debt settlement—and then the rubber gatherers have an annual spree. They organize dances in the main rubber shack—stag affairs. The men line up along opposite walls, and to the time of clapping hands and singing—assisted occasionally by an accordion—they sally back and forth, advance, swing their partners, return to the wall and repeat. Pinga flows freely, and before the festivities are over the gatherers are too befuddled to know or care just how badly they have been swindled in the debt settlement.

Never before Henry Ford dawned on the scene has the King of the Xingu been confronted with the efforts of a foreign capitalist to compete with his primitive methods. Two other ambitious efforts, it is true, have been made to develop the country, but both failed. One was organized by Dom Pedro II, last emperor of Brazil, who endeavored to open transportation on the Araguaya with a fleet of tiny steamboats. The hulls of two of these craft may still be seen, rotting on the river bank at Leopoldina. And at Alcobocas rusty mountains of abandoned machinery and ironwork are a memorial to the attempt of Belgian and French capitalists to build a railroad into the region. Graft, lassitude and general inefficiency caused the downfall of both schemes. Henry Ford's plan is the first application of capitalistic enterprise from the United States to this enormously wealthy section of Brazil.

Few men have sought out the King of Xingu in his jungle haunts. He is suspicious of all strangers, and queer mishaps overtake those who venture into his realm in the unmapped wilderness. I first heard of him from my friend, Dr. Jose Morbeck, ruler of the diamond fields, while I was on my expedition from Matto Grosso to the Amazon. He persuaded me to turn aside from my planned course and seek to meet the King of Xingu in person. "Learn something of his methods," Dr. Morebeck advised me, "and study the possibilities of the development of the rubber and nut business by North American capital."

So during my trip from the Caraja villages down the Araguaya to the outpost hamlet of Conceicao, I turned westward into the hinterland. A negro rubber gatherer of Conceicao, a former lieutenant in the Brazilian army, warned me against the excursion.

"You may end in the troncos (stocks)," he said. And he told how escaping peons from the king's domain and unwanted intruders are captured and tormented unmercifully.

Word of these punishments has spread far and wide throughout the jungle. I found that my canoemen knew the terrors all too well to make the trip I contemplated and I was forced to get two half-wild Indians—a wandering Caraja warrior and his squaw—to handle the canoe.

All this territory in the rainy season is widely inundated by overflowing rivers. Strange interlocking waterways open up through vast regions of the jungle, so that it is possible to make extensive inland canoe trips, paddling by the hour beneath the green ceiling of the forest through glades decked with flowering vines. Occasionally, during the first day of our excursion, we passed the flimsy huts of groups of nut gatherers, perched on hummocks and half surrounded by the rising water: Then the empty silence of the jungle closed around us.

One evening we emerged from a shallow bayou into a broader stream and as dusk fell I sighted the red glow of smoking fires. We pulled toward the shore and a ragged group of sullen men came down to stare curiously at our approach. All but one were clad simply in tattered trousers. It was a rubber camp, in charge of a stocky, mustached capunga—himself more picturesquely clothed. He wore a black slouch hat with an enormous brim and a shiny snakeskin wound around the crown. In his tooled-leather belt were two muzzle-loading pistols of antiquated make, each more than a foot long and silver mounted. Besides the pistols, his belt held a gleaming knife with an eighteen-inch blade.

Before we had landed I realized that this was just what I had come to see—a rubber camp in action. I offered the vaguest explanation of my arrival. The capunga was only partially satisfied, but he observed the traditional Brazilian hospitality and offered me such food and shelter as they had. The men resumed their work.

They Were Rolling the Latex Into Balls of Rubber To Be Send Down to Para.

They were rolling the day's collection of latex into balls of rubber that later would be sent down the Araguaya to Para. Sach gatherer has a definite route through the jungle, including about a hundred widely scattered rubber trees. When he taps a tree he fastens to it a cup made of a nut shell. Into this the latex, a white, viscous fluid trickles. From the shells it is poured into buckets and taken to the base camp.

Here, at night the rubber is prepared over fires that give off heavy clouds of smoke. I watched the process with interest. Two men were turning a long stick slowly over each fire. A third man was pouring the latex in a thin, steady stream onto the turning stick. The thick smoke enveloped the latex, which was hardening and darkening into rubber as it accumulated in an irregular ball.

Over breakfast, the morning after my arrival, I became more communicative to the bearded man whom I took for the overseer. He was short, fat and swarthy, with a heavy mouth and cruel, shifty eyes which flickered with increased suspicion when I asked directions to the jungle mansion of the King of Xingu.

"He's gone away. Why do you want to meet him?" he asked.

Inadvertently I mentioned Dr. Morbeck's name. My bearded vis-a-vis eyed me coldly. I began to perceive that he suspected me of being an agent of the civilized powers to the south, come to check up on the cruelties practiced in this rubber wilderness.

"You can't see him," he said at last. "He sees nobody." And he changed the subject, offering to show me a grove of Brazil nut trees; where some of his men were collecting nuts.

Before we started he left me for a moment and spoke to one of the peons, who vanished into the jungle. We followed and came upon a group of huge trees.

Several peons were moving about underneath the tall, slender trees, collecting the heavy shells—as big as cocoanuts—each of which held from ten to fifteen nuts.

The capunga led me toward "the finest and tallest tree in the grove." Then occurred one of those casual little incidents which in this lawless land are fraught with sinister meaning. I had often been told by nut gatherers of the danger of standing under the trees. One of the falling nuts is heavy enough to stun or kill a man if it strikes him on the head. A heavy object swished by my ear as I stood there struck me a glancing blow on the shoulder and landed with a thud on the ground. I leaped aside and glanced up swiftly, and I was sure that I caught sight of a human figure concealed in the branches overhead.

It may have been an accident. But it would have been a most convenient accident for the King of Xingu and his overseer, who want no intruders to escape from their premises with reports of the slavery practiced there. Though I passed it off with a laugh, I was glad to make my way back to the camp. There, incidentally, behind the main shack, I saw a specimen of the stocks, of whose punitive purpose I had heard so much. Beside the crude apparatus of imprisonment were several thick, sinuous whips.

Meanwhile, I discovered that my Indian canoeman and his squaw had vanished. Whether they were spirited away, or what their fate may have been, I have not learned. But I saw more clearly than ever that despite the capunga's oily pretense of friendliness my presence was extremely irksome to him and dangerous to myself. Without my Indian guide I might fail to find my way back to civilization through the tortuous channels by which we had come.

I determined to demand a showdown. I insisted that I be taken at once to the King's dwelling. I told the capunga that I knew the King personally, that I had met him a year before at Para when he was there purchasing supplies. The shade of a smile flickered over the overseer's lips. He started to speak, then checked himself. I warned him that the King would punish him, just as the peons were punished, if I were not taken safely to the clearing where the famous jungle palace stands.

"All right," said the capunga, at last. "I will give you two guides."

Two leering halfbreeds took their places in my dug-out and started to paddle me up stream. Soon we turned into a lagoon and paddled up a stream which became increasingly narrower. Then they told me we would have to portage the canoe to another river. When we were aflot again upon the silent stretches of this new, uncharted stream my guides turned northeastward. I was the wrong direction, I felt sure, and I remonstrated with them. "It's all right this is the way," the man in the stern insisted.

For the time being I gave him the benefit of the doubt. I suspected that he was taking me back toward the Araguaya, but I could not be certain as yet, and was confident that with my revolver I could cow both men in an emergency. I reckoned without the simple deviltry of their plot. Toward dusk we rounded a sharp bend and a sudden vista of tossing, rock-shattered water opened up ahead between sheer walls of foliage. Accustomed to the Brazilian canoeist's skill in shooting rapids, I thought little of the situation at first. But just before we were swept into the swirling torrent the paddlers swung the canoe about so that it was broadside in the stream. In the next instant both men had dived overboard and were swimming the dashing current for shore. I realized what was up when the canoe was in the worst of the rapids. It was hurled up and down and forward at dizzying speeds. As it swung stern down in the current I could see far behind the two halfbreeds wading ashore.

Whether to cling to the tossing canoe or dive into the rapids was a

What Was Justice In This Case?

The Strange Killing In Utah of Don Solovich, Who Was Known As Hollywood's Mystery Man, and the Trial of Sheldon Clark, the Slayer, Threatened Sensations In Filmdom

CONSIDERABLE mystery was attached to the murder of Don Solovich. Solovich had formerly been Yita Grey Chaplin's butler. He had known a great deal about the private lives of various Hollywood celebrities. It was said, indeed, that he might have been Lita Chaplin's star witness if her divorce suit had gone to trial.

* * * *

Hollywood's "man of mystery," as the papers later called him, came to his end in a roadside ditch on the desolate Levan cut-off, two miles from Gunnison, Utah, and twelve miles from Manti, January 6, 1928. He was not dead when his body was found, but he died shortly afterward of a fractured skull. He did not regain consciousness.

The police in their search of the body to learn the man's identity observed that he had been rather thoroughly stripped except for a California automobile driver's license and a great many newspaper clippings. The clippings told of a Don Solovich, and they indicated that this Don Solovich might have been something of a personage. He had been an opera dancer in 1925 and later a screen actor. Furthermore, the clippings stated that he had been bequeathed half of an estate in southern France valued at more than $6,000,000.

One item told how Solovich had been promised $2,000,000 by a sister, the Duchess of Marland, formerly Josephine Tartaree Solovich. A bond of $50,000 had been deposited in a Los Angeles bank, it was said to bind his agreement. In addition the item stated:

"Don has been advised that $866,000 in cash is being held in trust for him in the Bank of England, to be paid in April, 1926, when a year will have elapsed after the death of his grandparents."

The grandparents were named as Rudolph H. and Emaline Tartaree, of French nobility. Solovich had been a person of about 35 or 40, rather slight and dark—hardly the type to be found in the middle of Utah. One could see that he would have been far more at home in an urban drawing room than in the wide open spaces.

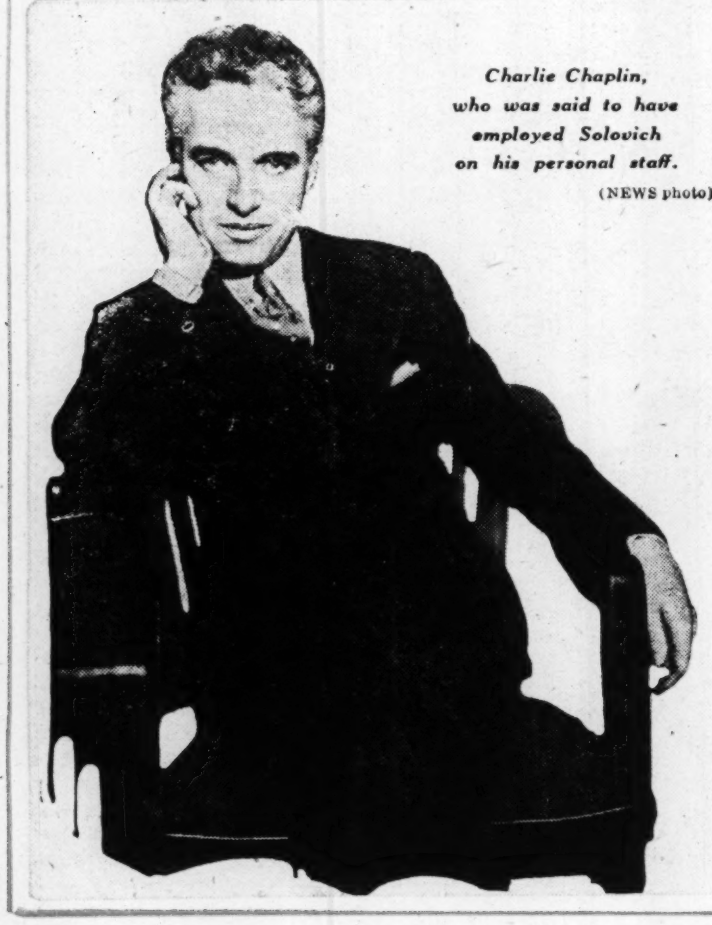

But there he was, dead, most obviously murdered. When there is a murder, there must be a murderer. And a motive.

In this instance the police were not long in finding the murderer. Within a few hours of the discovery of the crime, Sheriff Clifford Patten, in Salt Lake City, arrested Sheldon Reid Clark, 22, of Manti, Utah. Clark was driving the dead man's car and spending the dead man's money. He had in his pockets $2,169 in cash, including one $1,000 note and one $500 note.

Clark admitted the killing after he had been questioned a short while.

He said that he had known Solovich about four months, that they had met in Los Angeles and left there by auto the previous Tuesday, intending to enter the sheep business in Utah. He said that shortly before they reached Guunison his companion became abusive. After they passed through the city the man became so offensive that they got out of the car and fought.

Solovich, he said, had attacked him with a hammer. Clark said he finally seized the hammer and struck the other man in the head with it. He left Solovich in the ditch and drove off in his car.

The late Don Solovich

He said that Don Solovich had been Lita Grey Chaplin's butler.

He said that Charlie Chaplin would help him "if he knew about this."

Solovich, he said, had become involved in financial difficulties with Lloyd Wright, Lita Chaplin's lawyer in the Chaplin divorce case, after Wright had advanced Don $15,000 with the understanding that the attorney was to obtain 25 per cent of a large estate Solovich had inherited in Australia. The butler was charged with obtaining money under false pretences after Wright learned that the estate story was false.

Solovich had left Los Angeles, according to the prisoner, because he was afraid of Kono, Charlie Chaplin's Japanese secretary, bodyguard and chauffeur. Clark asserted that Solovich had owed Kono $2,500. Solovich, he said, was a coward always talking about Kono would kill him.

"Whenever a car would come behind us in Los Angeles he would tell me to drive fast," said the prisoner.

Clark had been Solovich's bodyguard as well as driver.

Sheriff Patten sorted over the various articles found on Clark and picked out a claim check in the slayer's name for a trunk shipped to the fashionable Hotel Utah in Salt Lake City from Pasadena, Cal. Along with many expensive articles of wearing apparel, this trunk contained:

Scores of Christmas cards from Lita Chaplin, Pauline Starke, Dorothy and Lillian Gish, Mildred Harris Chaplin, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Chaplin and many other prominent members of the Hollywood elite.

Several clothing bills issued to the Chaplin studio, indicating heavy purchases by Solovich.

A purported note from Mildred Harris Chaplin to the film comedian, whose first wife she was, asking for an early meeting and requesting that Charlie give Don a note to advise when it would take place.

Pictures of Solovich as a femile impersonator.

Powder puffs and a screen make-up box.

Hundreds of letters signed "Tom," professing regard for Solovich, which later were traced to Tom Harrington, former Chaplin employee, and before that secretary to King Gillette, safety razor manufacturer.

Photographs from famous movie stars extending well wishes for good luck.

A passport from Austria-Hungary, dated during 1907, for one Darius L. Sabovich.

More clippings, most of them from a New York newspaper, featuring Solovich as "the handsomest man in the United States" and heir to a huge estate in France.

Lita Grey Chaplin

And a sheaf of legal paper on which was written, but unsigned, a purported contract of employment of Solovich by Charles Chaplin at $1,000 a month, plus living and clothing expenses, for a period of five years and stipulating that Solovich should not marry.

It later developed that Solovich had had eight trunks, though only this one was ever found. It was stated that the mystery of why Solovich had been killed would be completely cleared once the police solved the enigma of the seven missing trunks.

On May 6 a news dispatch from Hollywood stated:

"Peyton H. Moore, attorney, and James H. Foese, investigator, today asserted that new evidence uncovered in the mysterious slaying of Don Solovich, former butler for Mrs. Lita Grey Chaplin, indicates a connection between unnamed prominent Los Angeles men and Sheldon Clark, who is awaiting trial in Utah for the killing of Solovich near Ogden last January 6.

"Solovich, who was a member of Charlie Chaplin's personal staff before being employed by Chaplin's estranged wife, left a will that purported to bequeath more than $1,000,000. According to Attorney Moore, only a few thousand dollars have been found.

"Clint Edwards, county attorney of Manti, Utah, where Clark goes on trial May 14, has been furnished with evidence, Moore said, concerning Solovich's premonition of death and his charges, before leaving for Utah, that his life was in danger and that he THAT'S no news. He always has been since he was a youngster alone with the servants in that big house and Nan made pies for him and me." She tossed off the implication of any feeling deeper than old friendliness Terry might have had for her, but her brain peered back of Violet's statement into Violet's motive. Why was she troubling to stir up the old ashes of Terry's lazy, foolish affection? Was she trying to turn Sally to him from Joe? "He's loved almost as long as Joe has," she said. "The difference is that I've always loved Joe, and I always shall."

She had the swift, uncomfortable thought as Violet went out that she had started a snowball down hill, but, "O, rot," she told herself as she went back to her songs, "I've more reason to worry about Joe's fists than I have about his lady loves."

She had reason in plenty, as the days sped toward the fight with Godwin, to trouble over Joe's condition. He was hard enough when it came to hitting the bag or sparring with the boys whom Grimes set up against him; but she recognized, even before Grimes and Stebbins caught it, that he had lost something of the poise which had been his when he had stepped into the ring with the Australian. He was no longer drinking, but, too highly strung to be able to shake off the aftermath of drink in the way of the lusty giants with whom he trailed, he bore the scars of his excesses even after the memory of them was obliterated. "You cut out everything but work and home," Stebbins told him grimly when he apprehended his weakness.

"I have," Joe told him.

By turns too gay or too morose, he screwed himself up to tension which was ready to snap at a sound. Nan, looking white and worn from a winter of piling work at the overcrowded hospital, pretended to ignore his sharp angers. Sally cajoled and petted him even to the extent of postponing her appearance at the Casino until after his battle with Godwin. "You're going to win," was her morning and evening ejaculation, but under the veneer of her confidence ran the tremor of her fear. What's the trouble with Joe?" she asked Pat Mangan when she could no longer ignore her trepidation.

"He hasn't the right slant on this fight. He thinks he really won the title when he knocked Walford. If he'd held to it, he'd have been right, but he gave in, and now he must go through with it. If he'd only see that this is a bigger fight than the other, he'd win it. Can't you make him, Sally?"

Valiantly through the few remaining days until the battle she strove to make Joe see the psychic need of regarding Godwin as a more important contender than Walford had been, but he refused to regard it from that point of view. "Walford beat him, didn't he?" he would come back at her. He worked as hard, however, as Stebbins and Grimes dictated, and by the night of the fight the hope had grown in her that he would triumph.

She felt, though, as Pat Mangan took Nan and herself to ringside seats that the atmosphere of the armory had changed in some subtle fashion from its stinging excitement on the night of Joe's fight with the Australian. Not till long afterward, when her red tam o' shanter was as well known at ringsides as the trumpet tones of Silver Joe Humphrey's announcing, was she to learn that the thrill of life, like its beauty, lay in the soul of the beholder. On that other night she had brought undimmed hope to Joe's backing. Tonight she brought underlying dread which grew as the preliminaries dawdled toward the climax of Joe's fight.

The crowd, twice the size of the one which had come to see him beat Walford, was Joe's. Godwin, making his fame in the sticks, had never caught the fancy of the Chicago fight fans, who acknowledged his ability in the same breath with which they belittled his personality. Judges, bankers, politicians, policemen and firemen in uniform, they were putting heart and money on the sleek-haired, blazing-eyed boy who carried their colors of the west side. "Joe," they shouted, "Joe Gates!" when he came through the doorway from the dressing rooms; but it was the bulldog thrust of Godwin's head that Sally saw as the men went up to the corners of the ring.

Not once in the wheeling rounds did she lose sight of that menacing jaw as they thrust and parried, and smashed under the roar of the crowd. On the instant of the gong Joe had rushed in to hook two blows close to Godwin's head, swinging down into wild punches on the other man's body. Godwin lunged at him, jabbing with right and left, and ducking away from Joe's return thrusts. Once Joe, rising on his toes, flung in a solid right upon Godwin's jaw, but Godwin flashed back with a solid left on Joe's body. Almost like marionettes they closed up, striking each other on shoulders and chest and ribs with no more apparent effect than puppets in a show. Suddenly Godwin pounded up left and right to Joe's head, and moved back to project a long, left-handed swing that missed as the bell clanged out the end of the round.

It had been a great exhibition of skill and strength, and the crowd rose to it in staccato yells, but with sinking soul Sally realized that Godwin had something in his punch that Joe lacked. It wasn't generalship—Joe was thinking better than was he—nor was it strength. It was simply the staying power of a man who knew just what depended upon the last ounce of his pertinacity. Joe was faster, Godwin steadier. He could outreach Joe, ducking blows without effort, and widening his mouth in a grin which seemed to madden Joe to wild plunges. "Hold him, Joe!" the crowd roared, but even to them it began to be plain that it was Godwin who was holding Gates. Round after round thudded on, the bell only a punctuation mark on the relentless limning of the record. Sally could see that Joe was garnering every atom of his energy to drive over a loaded right upon Godwin's jaw; but the chance never came. With a thud which resounded down the nerves of the ringside spectators Godwin drove in a crashing blow just below Joe's ear. For ten seconds—Sally counted them on the stop watch in Pat Mangan's hand—Joe rocked, swayed like a ship about to capsize, then went down, and took the count. Without cheers for the winner, without jeers for the loser, the crowd poured out from the armory. The Godwin-Gates battle was over. Joe Gates had lost!

* * * *

The city, dark and sinister in midnight menace, pressed in upon them with living force as they drove home. Joe, crouched in the corner of the cab, watched outward with eyes that gave back the glints of the saffron lights of open saloons, of the red and green signal lights of drug stores, of the occasional blue arcs of street lamps, of the sudden red flares from Bridgeport furnaces. Failure, the unutterable impenetrable misery of it, gripped their throats so that neither of them could speak for long. Against it all, menace, clutch, wretchedness and silence, Sally summoned her voice: "It doesn't matter, Joe," she said.

"It does."

"It won't. You're going to win—again."

"How can I? It was the championship, and he took it. What can I do against that?"

"I don't know yet, but there's always a way."

"Not in this."

"But there is, and anyhow, it's not the end of the world, Joe, dear."

"Pretty nearly."

"We won't let it be."

"We can't stop it now."

"We can." She bent toward him, her cold hand on his colder hand. "We will."

"Maybe." His tone was sullen.

"Joe, you'll stick? You won't go off again?"

"No."

"We're not badly off, Joe. We had a good time while it lasted, and we've plenty yet—and each other."

"I don't know yet how little we've got," he said, sullkily. "I guess it'll be tight going for us."

"I don't mind that," she said with a flash of the blitheness the night had dimmed.

"You don't know yet," he told her, and the gloom of the city pressed back upon them, shrouding streets and houses and hearts as the cab lurched them homeward.

* * * *

Not for days did she realize how close to the wind Joe's defeat had brought him. She knew that he had been given the greater part of the gate money, and she foolishly thought the time propitious for urging him back to his course at Rush Medical. "You can use your money for that," she told him, "and I'll keep everything else running with mine."

"I'm not going back there now, or ever," he said.

"Joe! You don't mean that? Not after you've done all this so that you could go back?"

"I'm not going back a beaten prize fighter."

"But if you win again?"

"How can I?"

It was not from him but from Pat Mangan that she found how he had bet on himself, losing all his share of the gate money except enough to clear his bills. For herself she cared nothing, knowing that she would soon be earning at the Casino more than enough to carry over a low tide, but for Joe she hated the scrimpings of poverty, the visible badge of his failure. Unless he could win back to the place he had lost he would never regain his hold upon the moral need of continuance in that road of his boyhood intention. Through the lucid insight of her love for him she saw that the profession of medicine was to him not vocation, as it was with Fred Damon, but leverage from the swamps of his own temperament. Not for livelihood but for the conquest of life he must earn the degree toward which he had once striven. "Isn't there any way he can come back?" she asked Pat.

"None that I know."

"There must be."

She beat the bushes of her own resourcefulness as she went about her work, plunging into final practice for the downtown theater with a determination which made Gregg pull her up with tight rein. "This isn't grand opera," he told her. "It's vaudeville. You aren't driving a four-horse team. You're singing to make people forget themselves and remember you. Also they're not paying money to look at a jaw like John L. Sullivan's. They're paying for the smile, sister, and don't you forget it!"

She did not forget it as they went into rehearsal in the theater beyond the river. In the house on Harrison street Joe might sulk and Nan sit in quiet strange to her, timing the days that would bring Tom Burt home from prison, but on the bare boards of the stage, with Gene before the big, black hulk of the grand piano, Sally Gates poured into the songs of her day all the tearing, gripping, throbbing emotions of the life of her city. It was no long repertoire she made ready, a gay rondel of live in springtime, a crooning lullaby, and the song she had started in the West Town, that saddening melody of a haunted home-sickness which brought the tears to her eyes whenever she sang it. "I don't know why," she told Gene. "I never saw the darned place."

"O, yes, you have," he said. "You call it another name, but it means the same—home. Some day, when you're a couple of thousand miles away, some one'll sing it, and you'll think of Harrison street, the way I think of Shenandoah, Iowa, and you'll blubber all over the map, the way I did when I first heard you sing it at the West Town. That's why it's gonna bring down the house."

With all his surety of the song and of her she had none of the certainty of herself on the night she opened at the Casino that had been hers when she had first sung at the West Town. There the show had been something of neighborhood fiesta, with Violet and herself revellers in carnival. There had been need, to be sure, of her earnings, but she had not known then, as she knew now, what lack of skill to earn a living might mean to man or woman. At the larger theater, facing a crowd that seemed distant and alien, although she was to know in a little while how long and well many of them had known her, she felt like an untried swimmer flung out into deep waters. "Steady," Gregg warned from the piano, and struck the first note of the rondel.

She sang it well, her voice soaring out over the house, but the applause, starting from where she knew Nan and Joe, Pat and Doctor Damon, May Temple and John Dalton sat, told her only that she had not entirely failed. She saw the little pucker on Gregg's forehead, and threw herself into the lullaby. Of more than the first did it go across. Hands pattered through the theater, but she could feel the chill of defeat. "Never mind," Gene said under cover of a moment's interlure, "it's the songs. I picked 'em wrong. It's not you. Now for the sure fire. One, two, ready—go!"

He played the prelude softly, wistfully, as if he were musing into chords rather than remembering them. For Sally, bright-haired, dewey-eyed, gallant, an April gleam of clouds and sunlight, as she lifted her chin and faced the faraway galleries, the music was a weaver of dreams. With the strange prescience of the artist she saw not the upturned faces beyond the dazzling footlights, not Nan, nor Joe, but herself, older and wearier, briar-torn and buffeted, standing far away from the old house on Harrison street, remembering it with the old fond affection with which her father must even then be remembering it from his cell in Joliet. Not the Sally Gates of the youth and beauty of her outward

America Celebrates a Double Anniversary: A Quarter-Century of Flight and 20 Years of Military Aviation

TWENTY years ago a group of civilian dignitaries and army officers, headed by William Howard Taft, then Secretary of War gathered at Fort Myer, Va., to witness the initial flight of the first army airplane purchased by this country

Seated at the controls of the flimsy craft, which represented the primary step in military aviation in any land, was Orville Wright, who, with his brother, Wilbur, had startled the world five years earlier by accomplishing what seemed to be impossible—human flight.

The distinguished observers at Fort Myer—the majority of whom had never cast eyes upon an airplane before—saw a spindley thing of wood and canvas mounted on ski-like runners and equipped with a 25-horsepower four-cylinder motor which turned two eight-foot wooden propellers. To launch it, a monorail, a tower-like structure, a long rope and a hefty weight of one sort or another were required. The plane was placed on the end of the rail nearest the tower. The rope was attached to the plane, run to a pulley at the other end of the rail and pulled back to the tower, where it was fastened to the weight at the top.

To take off, the airplane's motor was started, the weight suspended at the top of the tower was released. As it plunged to earth the weight pulled the rope, which in turn pulled the plane over the track. This forward rush in addition to the momentum furnished by the power plant, was sufficient to shoot the craft into the air

Of that first army plane the government expected great things. It demanded that the ship should have a cruising radius of 120 miles; a cruising speed of not less than thirty-six miles an hour, be able to remain in the air for at least one hour and have accommodations for one pilot and one observer. The plane, in various tests, met those specifications.

That was in the late fall of 1908. Ten years later, when the World War had drawn to a close, army aviation, due to the amazing forward strides made not alone in the construction of airplanes and motors but also in the equipping of planes for combat purposes, had demonstrated its great value in military operations.

The pre-war military planes flew at low altitudes, slow speeds and landed often. Also, they were "military" in name only, as it was not until after the World War had got well under way that military planes were given barbs wherewith to sting. In fact, during the early days of the war planes were used entirely for observation purposes and aerial combat was limited to pilots' pot-shots at each other with revolvers or rifles

This state of affairs had changed materially when the war ended. From a quite harmless flying observation post the airplane had developed into a weapon which scattered death and destruction wherever it flew. It proved its worth not alone in aerial combat but also in harassing ground troops, in destroying ammunition dumps and in shattering morale. The airplane had just begun to reveal its terrific striking power when the Armistice was signed.

That was in 1918. Ten years have passed since the last aerial patrol of the war taxied to its hangars "somewhere in France"; twenty years have slipped into the great ocean of time since the first flights of the Wright military plane at Fort Myer. It is now 1928, with the airplane soaring, fast and high on a strong tailwind of well deserved popularity based upon brilliant and beneficial performance.

I am not going into a detailed account of aviation development since the war, but will confine myself to a general summary of the progress in my own branch of aviation during those ten years.

The best way to impress upon the minds of the readers the advances that have taken place in military aeronautics during the last decade is, in my opinion, to compare war-time military aircraft with present military machines. These comparisons speak far more eloquently than any thesis I could write on the subject.

During the war we had three principal types of army planes—bombardment, pursuit and observation. To-day there are three types of army aircraft in addition to those mentioned: Attack, photographic and cargo. The latter are used for the transportation of troops and material.

The best war-time pursuit plane had a high speed of 132 miles an hour, a cruising radius of 250 miles, gasoline capacity sufficient for two hours of flying, 30 caliber machine guns, 200 rounds of ammunition, an altitude capacity of 13,000 feet and a motor the life of which was about thirty hours.

The pursuit plane of to-day has a high speed of 180 miles an hour, a cruising radius of 535 miles, has gas for four hours of continuous flying, is equipped with 50 caliber machine guns and 600 rounds of ammunition, has a ceiling of 30,000 feet, while the motor's life has been increased several hundred per cent.

War-time bombardment planes had a speed of ninety-four miles an hour, a cruising radius of 700 miles, could reach an altitude of 7,400 feet, could carry 2,000 pounds of bombs, had a crew of four and carried 484 pounds of armament. The bomber of to-day has a speed of 130 miles an hour, a cruising radius of 800 miles, a ceiling of more than 16,000 feet, carries 2,400 pounds of bombs, 810 pounds of armament and a crew of five.

Observation planes during the war could do 124 miles an hour at high speed and travel 450 miles. They had a ceiling of 15,800 feet and carried 282 pounds of armament. Our observation squadrons to-day are equipped with planes to do 143 miles an hour, with a cruising radius of 630 miles, a ceiling of 16,300 feet and carry 238 pounds of armament. The reason the armament load is less than it was ten years ago is because lighter machine guns are being used.

Tremendous progress has been made in military aerial photography. Only recently pictures were taken by army air corps photographers from heights of 39,000 feet. These photographs were as clear as if they had been taken from only 3,900 feet. We have equipment whereby it is possible to take a picture in the air, develop it in the plane, and drop it on the ground twelve minutes after the exposure was made. Flashlight bombs have been developed, enabling camera men of the sky to take pictures at night, and cameras have been built with which photographs have been taken covering tremendous lateral distances and enormous areas.

airplane into constant touch not only with the ground, but also with other planes. The science of bombing has been developed to a high degree of perfection by means of the automatic bombing sight, while the progress made in the construction of aerial bombs has rendered these missiles more than twice as effective as they were ten years ago.

One combat craft which does not enter into our table of comparison is the attack plane, for the simple reason that attack aviation, as we know it to-day, did not exist during the war. It has been compared to a hornet with many barbs, and it is an apt nparison. An attack plane has a high speed of about 140 miles an hour, a ceil' ; of 3½ miles above the earth and a cruising radius of about 700 miles. These planes carry no less than six machine guns. Two are placed in the wings and two in the nose. These four forward guns are fired by the pilot. The rear, ' p and sides of the ship are protected by two machine guns mounted on a movable tourelle over the rear cockpit. In addition to these six messengers of death, the attack plane carries ten high explosive calling cards in the form of ten 25-pound fragmentation bombs. The attack ship is equipped to give a good account of itself.

While it can fight three and a half miles high, the attack plane is principally designed to skim above the ground in raids upon trenches, machine gun nests and enemy concentration points, to engage in action with tanks and to destroy ammunition and supply depots near the front lines

In has been the custom during recent years to test the p formance and efficiency of Army Air Corps tactical planes and the skill and training of army pilots in annual maneuvers. The mimic warfare to be staged by the Army Air Corps next spring will be conducted on the most elaborate scale ever attempted. After air demonstrations at the various service schools of the army and at Kelly Field, Texas, more than 200 planes will be concentrated at Dayton and Columbus, Ohio, to participate in a two-sided combat program. There will be at least 100 airplanes on each side of the opposing forces. The operations will last about a week

Persons interested in aviation in all its phases, including army aviation, by this time are familiar with the provisions of the five-year Army Air Corps expansion program, which, in brief, prescribes an army air strength of 1,300 planes, 1,650 flying officers, 500 reserve officers on active duty, 500 cadets undergoing training and 15,000 enlisted men by the end of 1932.

The fulfillment of the five-year program is of fundamental importance. It is the first objective of the Air Corps and can be smoothly and efficiently carried to completion if sufficient funds are made available and if legislation is enacted by Congress to eliminate difficulties with respect to personnel. There is no doubt that the promotion of officers is the most pressing question in the Air Corps. Junior officers perform duties out of all proportion to their rank and with discouraging prospects of promotion.

The result is that we have lost numerous valuable officers, who have been attracted by opportunities offered them in commercial aviation. Indications are that we will lose more unless early steps are taken by Congress to unravel the promotion tangle. We can ill afford to lose these officers, and we should not expect officers, whose enthusiasm keeps them in the service, to live on faint rays of hope.

The year of 1923 is a milestone in military aviation in more than one respect. In addition to being the twentieth anniversary of army flying, it is the anniversary of the operation of the first of the five annual increment units for Army Air Corps expansion as provided for in the five-year program

The period covering the first of the five annual increments ended on June 30, 1928, and it is now possible to say how nearly the War Department was successful in its effort to carry out the requirements of that program, which fall into two logical sections—namely, planes and pilots. The first increment required that there be on hand or on order at its conclusion 1,186 airplanes. There were actually on hand 939 airplanes and 237 planes on order—only ten planes short of the mark.

The personnel program for the first increment called for 1,100 officers; we had 1,014 . called for 9,590 enlisted men; we had 9,514

The 1927-'28 increment also scheduled 110 Air Corps reserve officers on duty with Air Corps tactical units, but only sixty-five reserve officers were called. The reason was entirely due to shortage of planes and quarters at Air Corps stations.

Our experiences to date indicate a shortage of aircraft. It seems that the complete program should call for 2,400 planes rather than 1,800. However, before submitting a definite recommendation for an increase, one year's additional experience is desired in carrying out the second increment. Shortage of planes is even more serious than shortage of personnel It only requires a few months at most to make up any deficit in personnel after an emergency has arisen, but it would take from a year to eighteen months to build aircraft in numbers sufficient to meet our requirements

As a result of frequent inspections of Air Corps activities I am convinced that unit training has been considerably handicapped in the past by lack of equipment. As soon as the Air Corps tactical units have their pro rata of service type equipment this deficiency will be relieved.

The prime objective of Air Corps units in time of peace must be preparation and training for immediate and effective use in the event of hostilities. Hence, every tactical unit must practice the function which it would be called upon to perform —namely, reconnaisance, bombing, machine gunnery and so on. One interesting and very important mission which was accomplished during the last year was the bombing of the Pee Dee River bridge in North Carolina. These tests were not only important to the Air Corps, but to the Ordnance Department as well. Some valuable lessons were learned. More work of this type should be accomplished and such will be the case as soon as the present shortage is relieved.

Last summer the Army Air Corps engaged in a series of training maneuvers at each of the service schools of the other arms of the service, to acquaint the students at those schools with the role of aircraft in warfare. A group composed of seventy-two officers and eighty-six enlisted men, flying in seventy-four airplanes, visited each of these service schools, of which there are four.

One remarkable lesson gained from these demonstrations was the reliability of modern airplanes and engines. These seventy-four planes were flown over 4,000 miles without a single casualty, accident or damage to aircraft or personnel. Seventy-four planes started on the maneuvers and seventy-four returned to their home stations.

Realizing the necessity of securing a large number of graduate pilots from our flying schools, the methods employed and the courses of instruction given are being carefully analyzed. Some very important changes have been made. To date the number of graduates, compared with the number of entrants in flying training, has been less than 25 per cent. With the very careful attention which is being paid to this phase of Air Corps work, it now seems that the number of graduates will be increased to more than 40 per cent of those who enter.

One of the important changes which has brought about this very desirable result is raising the standard of qualifications of those who enter training. The impetus and aroused interest in flying training as a result of prominent flights and general air activity have made it possible to get a much higher type of personnel. The class now undergoing instruction at the flying schools is composed largely of college graduates. Notwithstanding this high requirement, more than 200 qualified applicants were not taken because they could not be accommodated at the schools.

These schools have a very important function to perform. First, they must provide qualified pilot personnel for our regular Air Corps establishment. Second, they must provide training for all the Air Corps flying reserve. This alone will call for at least 550 graduates of the school annually at the conclusion of the five-year program. In addition, civil industry and air commerce are calling for every pilot which the army can train.

Every authority connected with military flying has probably been interested in nothing quite so much as in the reduction of fatal accidents in the Air Corps. The record of 1927-'28 is worthy of scrutiny. The Air Corps flew 182,903 hours, or more than 18,000,000 miles, with only twenty-seven fatalities. This means that 677,400 miles were flown to each fatality. During the year before there were forty-three fatalities, while only 140,000 hours were flown, or 327,600 miles per fatality. In other words, there has been more than 100 per cent improvement in the number of flying hours and miles per fatality. The record of last year is better than ever before. In 1921, for example the Air Corps suffered seventy-three casualties, although it flew only 77,359 hours. In other words, there was a casualty for every 1,059 hours flown.

The Air Corps, unlike the other arms of the service, functions not only as a combat branch, but as a supply branch as well. This latter function is delegated very largely to the Material Division, located at Wright Field, near Dayton, Ohio. The principal duties of that division are as follows: To conduct experiments and research so that in the event of war the Air Corps will have flying equipment up to date and comparable to that which the combat forces of the opposing nations may be expected to employ; to supply the existing Air Corps establishment with service type planes, engines, flying clothing, spares, machine guns and adjunct equipment and accessories; to maintain and repair Air Corps equipment; to provide an industrial war plans organization to take care of the manufacture of aircraft in increased quantities at the outbreak of hostilities.

The work of the experimental engineering section of the Material Division has proved of incalculable value to the civil industry. Not only has this been true in the development of aircraft and power plants, but also in regard to the development of certain adjunct equipment, particularly air navigation devices. In this latter field the Army Air Corps has taken the lead and the instruments which have been and are being successfully developed will be equally valuable to planes flying the air mail or in civil air commerce.

This ends the summary of the progress of army aviation since that day twenty years ago when Orville Wright made his flights at Fort Myer in the first army plane.

What will the record read twenty years hence? No one can say—it is senseless to speculate.

Military aviation, like aviation itself, has not as yet reached an altitude high enough for those interested in its advance to see the border lines of its limitations. On the other hand, it seems perfectly sound, safe and sensible to predict that the strides bound to be made during the next twenty years will be as startling and as epoch-making as those which it has been this generation's privilege to observe during the last two decades.

What Was Justice In This Case?

was under constant surveillance in Hollywood."

As the day for the trial neared, the "enigma of the seven missing trunks" continued to puzzle the police and, it was said, others besides the police. Attorney Edwards asserted that there was some "mysterious significance" in the keen interest in the Solovich documents on the part of lawyers for a number of film notables.

It was said that Solovich was prepared to be Mrs. Chaplin's principal witness had her divorce suit against the comedian come to trial. It will be remembered that this suit was settled out of court, Charlie paying his wife a settlement of $650,000 in property and cash. Her interlocutory decree was granted August 22, 1927, and the final decree was granted August 24, 1928.

The accused man, according to Edwards, had taken the dead man's $2,000 automobile, a $5,000 diamond and opal ring (gift of a famous film character), some $2,000 in cash and immensely valuable papers, possibly secret divorce depositions.

In Los Angeles it was revealed that Solovich had an asserted claim against Lita Chaplin for $100,000, based, according to report, upon his services to Mrs. Chaplin in procuring her divorce and alimony settlement. This disclosure came when Jesse E. Jacobson, a Beverly Hills, Cal., attorney, filed a claim for $5,000 against the Solovich estate, charging that he had prepared a claim for Solovich against Mrs. William S. Hart.

Solovich was conspicuous in the discussion of the terms of settlement, according to the authorities, and there was some evidence that he had received $40,000 for his services. He claimed $100,000 more, it was said. According to statements by Jacobson to the Utah investigators, the lawyer called on Mrs. Chaplin and asked her to settle.

"I shall not pay Solovich another penny," she told him, according to Jacobson. "He's a blackmailer!"

This conversation, Jacobson said, took place late in 1927. In December Solovich fled to Los Angeles.

Attorney Moore, attorney for Nich Solovich, brother of the dead man and his executor, admitted that Jacobson's claim had been rejected.

Clark's lawyer, Louis Larson, announced that they would contend Solovich was depraved, that he had masqueraded as half man and half woman, that he had made improper suggestions to young Clark and, when rebuffed, had attacked the youth in a frenzy. Clark, they averred, had defended himself—nothing more.

The prosecution had hinted that several surprise witnesses, including Lita Chaplin, would take the stand. Clark himself had predicted plenty of sensations.

"When I take the stand," he told reporters, "I am going to clear up the mystery surrounding Charles and Lita Grey Chaplin's connection with Solovich and you'd better sharpen your pencils and tell your readers this is going to be one of the hottest trials they've ever heard about."

Another statement showed his apparent confidence.

"I wish they'd hurry up this trial and let me tell my story of what happened before Solovich and I left Hollywood. I'll walk out of here as soon as I do."

But as to revealing any of this story beforehand—no. All in due time.

"Solovich," he remarked, "always was a Nemesis to Charlie Chaplin."

Clark, incidentally, appeared in court with his eyes penciled, his lips rouged, and his gay clothes fragrant with perfume.

Attorney Larson in stating his case to the jury unearthed a new version of where Solovich was bound for when Clark laid him low. He had not been en route to Salt Lake City to buy a sheep ranch, Larsen declared; he had been en route to Europe to escape the ire of Hollywood notables he had blackmailed.

Deputy Sheriff Douglas Naylor related how, when Clark was arrested, he had said that Solovich had made immoral proposals to him. When he refused, the other man had seized the hammer and attacked him. Naylor said that the prisoner had stuck to this story stoutly ever since.

Other witnesses for the state were placed on the stand in an attempt to show that Solovich had been beaten so severely that there could have been no question of self-defense involved.

For the defense, Frank Clark, of Los Angeles, father of the defendant, gave evidence in support of the contention that Solovich feared Chaplin because he had aided Lita in the maneuvers that led to her divorce. The witness asserted that Solovich had fled Los Angeles because he feared he was pursued by Chaplin's detectives.

"Solovich constantly repeated the statement that Charlie Chaplin had detectives after him," he testified. "Solovich also said he expected an attempt on his life would be made."

Carl W. Fawcett, Los Angeles attorney, testified that Solovich had attempted to extort hush money from Lita.

Solovich obtained three $1,000 bills from Chaplin, according to Clark, before the trip to Utah. Papers for both suits had been drawn, he testified, before the trip.

As for the killing, the defendant testified that it came about after Solovich had inquired if Clark was going to leave him after they reached Salt Lake City. When Clark replied in the affirmative, his companion became enraged, seized a hammer and attacked him. Clark wrested the hammer from the other man and "managed to give him a swipe on the head."

"When I hit him, he fell to his knees," he continued. "He got up with a rock in his hand. He hurled the rock at me but missed, then charged again. He grabbed at my throat and missed, gripping me by the knees and pushing me backward. I fell beneath him but I kept hitting him on the back of the head and in the face with the hammer and kept beating him as he raised up to get off me.

"I don't know how many times I hit him. When he finally fell, I walked back to the car and thought I had killed him."

He told how he dragged the body into the ditch and how he decided to remove the man's valuables lest they be stolen.

Then he got into the car and drove to his uncle's home in Manti, later going to Salt Lake City.

Fred W. Keller, prosecuting attorney, brought out in cross-examination that Clark in his first story after the killing had stated that he had struck Solovich only once.

"If I said that, it was a terrible mistake," the defendant said. "I was excited and hadn't had much sleep for three or four days. You just got me confused, Mr. Keller."

In his summation Keller asked for a verdict of murder in the first degree. "Clark and his family have attempted to paint Solovich as an evil character," he said, "but if Clark knew that to be true, why did he remain in Solovich's employ?"

The case went to the jury June 11. After three hours and twenty-four minutes' deliberation the jury returned a verdict of guilty of voluntary manslaughter. In other words, the defense had triumphed. This verdict in Utah calls for an indeterminate sentence of from one to ten years.

Judge Wooley denounced this verdict when he sentenced Clark on June 14. He stated that the evidence warranted a first degree murder conviction.

Glaced Fruits and Nuts

Glaced Fruits and Nuts Are Made as Simply In Your Own Kitchen as Fudge and the More Common Candies. They Are a Great Addition to the Holiday Sweets

BY EDNA COLEMAN

GLACED fruits and nuts are one of the simplest and at the same time one of the most delicious and beautiful candies to make for holiday entertainments.

In making glace candies it is of first importance to select a clear, dry day. Any dampness in the air will make hard candies sticky. If there is a change of weather after you start making these hard candies you can save them from complete stickiness by rolling them in granulated sugar.

It is also very important to make a careful selection of the very best candied fruits and nuts obtainable. By making glace candies at home the cost will be so much less than commercial prices that you can afford to put extra money into the quality of the pieces to be dipped.

The utensils for making glace fruits and nuts are not elaborate. You will need a deep-sided saucepan, a measuring cup, a candy thermometer, which you can buy for about $1.50, and a small round brush (percolator brush is good) for removing crystals from the boiling syrup. You can purchase this little brush for 10 or 15 cents in any store which supplies kitchen equipment.

The fruits which you use for dipping should be candied or dried fruits. Do not try to dip fresh fruit, as the acid which it contains will dissolve the sugar. The nuts which you use should be thoroughly dry, as the moisture will affect the sugar syrup. To prepare candied fruit for dipping in glace simply cut it into small pieces. The only nut which really needs blanching before dipping in glace is the almond. To remove the skins from almonds place them in boiling water until the skins are loosened so they can be easily slipped off with the fingers. Then wipe them with a cloth and place them in a wire basket. Immerse them in deep fat at a temperature of 410 degrees F. until they are a very light brown color. Lift them out and let them cool and they are ready for dipping in glace.

A candy dipping fork is easily made. Take a good, strong copper wire, double it and twist the ends together, leaving a loop about the size of a dime at the end. This fork is for lifting the candies out of the hot syrup. Be careful not to make the loop to large or the smaller pieces of fruit and nuts will drop back into the boiling syrup. You can also use a small pair of tweezers for dipping but they are not as satisfactory. Toothpicks and skewers are sometimes recommended for this purpose, but the nuts slip off.

From the following simple recipe you can arrange to glace as few or as many fruits and nuts as you like. The recipe which is given below will make about one pound of finished candy. If you want to make a larger amount simply double or triple the amount of syrup and handle it exactly the same way:

1½ cups of sugar
1 cup water
1-16 teaspoon cream of tartar.

Measure out the cup and a half of sugar and level off the top with a knife. Add one cup of water and cream of tartar. These ingredients should then be mixed thoroughly in a deep-sided saucepan, and after the thermometer is placed in the batch put it over a high flame to boil.

Glace nuts and fruits belong to the hard candy class of confections and the syrup must be cooked quickly. This is important, because it helps to obtain the hard, dry finish which is so desirable. After the syrup begins to boil do not stir it or it will become grainy. Use the small round brush to remove the crystals which bubble up around the sides of the pan. But when the thermometer reaches 260 degrees Fahrenheit cease using the brush, because after this point on the thermometer is reached the syrup is much more easily grained.

When the syrup has cooked to 310 degrees Fahrenheit remove the pan from the stove and place it in a larger pan of cold water for just a second to stop the boiling. Drop dried or candied fruit, or any kind of nut meat, one piece at a time, into the syrup and use the candy dipping fork to remove them. Some recipes give a lower temperature than 300 degrees Fahrenheit for glace. It really depends on the altitude of the city in which you live. If it is sea level, 300 to 310 degrees Fahrenheit is the correct temperature.

Lift quickly out of the syrup and place them on oiled marble or the oiled top of a porcelain table, working as speedily as possible, as the glace cools very rapidly.

Be very careful not to stir the syrup as you work in it, as any stirring will grain it almost instantly. Simply drop the piece to be glaced into the syrup, push it below the surface and lift it out with the dipping fork.

In this dipping process make as few strokes as possible, and make them as deftly and quickly as possible.

Red, green, yellow and orange glaced fruits and nuts make an interesting variety. Vegetable color pastes can be bought in very small jars for 25 cents each.

The color should be added to the syrup before it boils. If it is added afterward the danger of graining is increased. However, a compromise is sometimes effected by glaceing a quantity of fruits or nuts in a light-colored syrup and then adding some brighter dye for the rest of the batch. For instance, red coloring may be added to a light yellow syrup. In adding the coloring to the boiled syrup be careful not to stir it into the batch. Put the paste on the tip of a knife and cut the knife carefully back and forth through the syrup until the color is well distributed.

Alcohol extracts cannot be used in glace candies, or any candies made from a sugar and water syrup. The proper flavorings to use are the oil essences—oil of peppermint, mint, wintergreen or anise, if you want a refreshing flavor, or oil of orange and lemon for a more tart flavor. These oils can be purchased in very small quantities at any well equipped drug store.

Above, utensils assembled for glaceing — deep-sided saucepan, candy thermometer, long-handled spoon and brush

Left, use the brush to keep crystals from forming on the sides of the pan. After the thermometer reaches 260 degrees, however, no brushing or stirring is advisable, as the mixture is likely to grain or set

Above, drop the nuts or fruit squares, one at a time, into the hot syrup (310 degrees F.), push below the surface, and remove immediately with home-made candy fork. (Directions for making this fork given in text).

Place the glaced nuts and fruit on an oiled table top and proceed with the dipping. Work as speedily as possible, as the syrup stiffens on cooling seeming, but a Sally Gates of sorrow and middle age and loneliness poured out her golden voice into the song that was to be hers, and yours, and mine, the song of all of us who look back through tears to the memories of what home used to be:

The Good Red Bricks

"O, the moonlight's fair tonight along the Wabash,
From the fields there comes the breath of new-mown hay,
Through the sycamores the candle-lights are gleaming
On the banks of the Wabash, far away."

Sure-fire stuff, simple, sentimental, but with a reality of emotion which opened a door to the past for men and women who had for long striven to forget the towns of childhood, universality of appeal which made the Wabash not a little river of Indiana, but a stream in every state, a poignancy of longing which brought the ache of memory to any one who had aught to remember, it was a song for every singer. Most of all, it was a song for an artist who knew, and understood, and felt the crowds of life, the trampling, struggling, striving men and women with longing in their eyes and yearning in their souls. It is a long time since that night at the Casino, and to the whirling world Sally Gates is now hardly more than a name; but there are men and women in Chicago today who catch their breaths in little gasps of remembrance of her when they hear in some chance radio program the song of the Wabash.

Even before the cries and calls and cheers she could not repeat its chorus. With tears streaming down her cheeks she went to the footlights, holding out her arms as if to welcome the friendliness which surged over her. "Sally!" the crowd took up her name from those who had long known it, "Sally, Sally Gates!" She laughed a little at that, and the galleries sped the cry with theh rhythm of a chason, "Sally, Sally, Sally Gates!" stamping and whistling until Gregg rang down the curtain. "I told you so," he chuckled, "I told you, told you, told you so. It's the big time, Sally, whenever we get tired of the little old Casino here."

Nan, seeking her behind the scenes, kissed her with trembling lips, her eyes soft with tears. "I knew you would, my dear one," she told her. "I'm glad I've been spared to be sure." Joe, a little too excitedly for her contentment, exulted in her success, but she found the thorn in the rose of her happiness when he said, "It's lucky one of the family can make good, isn't it?"

She ignored the thrust, but she could not ignore the fact that afterward he lasped into a melancholy which lifted only when he blazed into excitement. If her success had not thrust her into the hard work of constant rehearsal, for Gregg was unsatisfied with the rest of her songs, and was trying to build up a group which would make the song of the Wabash climax instead of lone star, she would have given more heed to Joe's restlessness. She had to notice his jealousy of Terry Gorman, however, when Terry, back in Chicago, sent her violets to the theater. "I didn't ask him to do it," she defended herself. "I've seen him only once. I didn't want his flowers." Outside the consciousness of a winging freedom her success meant little to her, the only cherished trophy out of it the note which came to her with a Joliet postmark. "God bless you, Sally," was all it said, but she was beginning to understand how much of human misery might be beneath a word or two. She wept over the letter, and did not show it to either Nan or Joe.

With a little money still in his pocket Joe had taken to loafing, telling her that he would find something soon. Already she began to see in him little indications of deterioration, a carelessness here, a coarsening there, slacked wires of the spirit. She wondered sometimes how he spent the day while Nan worked in the hospital and she went through the performances at the theater. The suspicion that he might be seeing more than a little of Violet crossed her mind. "I'm as bad about her as he is about Terry," she thought, and put jealousy away from her.

Every afternoon, her act over, she came out into the downtown crowds with that sense of oneness with them which was base of her ability to get to them across the footlights. No matter what her mood, the westward look of the city beyond the river lifter her above thought of herself as she started to walk homeward. It was a world for an hour all and only her own, and, with disillusion beginning to creep into love, she held it to her heart.

She was just stepping into it on the afternoon when Gregg, his smooth face pale, his brow puckered, hurried after her. "There's a telephone call for you, Sally," he said, but as she started toward the theater office, he held out his arm. "I've taken it," he told her. "It was Doctor Damon."

"Not—my mother?"

"She's sick, pretty sick." His tone told her more. "I'll take you home."

"No, no," she protested. "You'll have to stay. I won't be back. Call me a cab."

He whistled and a cabman, cruising Clark street, drew up at the curbstone. He gave him the number, urging speed. "Call me if there's anything you need," he told her, and she felt the words curiously final. The cab rocked up the street, but she saw nothing of the city, although she felt its roar rising in terrible tide. It had, she felt, almost overtaken her when she came to the old house, and ran up the steps. Joe opened the door to her. "Is she——?" She could say no more.

"She's here." He put out his arm to steady her. "Damon's working with two other doctors and a nurse. They're doing all they can."

"What is it?"

"Stroke. Hemorrhage. Cerebral, I'm afraid."

"I know." She was moving up toward Nan's room. "The mainspring's broke." In strange, dulled consciousness she saw the inevitability of it all. Nan had fought, and fought, and fought until something within her spirit had snapped. Now she wasn't going to fight any more. A terrible, blinding fear gripped Sally at thought of death. Not that, not that for Nan Burt, who had laughed at the worst life could do to her! Not before she had won harbor, not before Tom came home! "I won't let her." Sally told Joe, and went past the doctor who was standing at the door.

She saw Nan lying across the bed, her face a little reddened and distorted, her eyes blazing bright. "Sally," she said. Doctor Damon, holding her hand, motioned to the doctor across from him to give place. Sally knelt beside the bed, and took her mother's hand in her own. It was cold but it moved restlessly. "Sally," Nan said again.

"Mother, dear." Stubbornly she fought back tears. This was no time for grief. That night, it would inevitably come—afterward. Now she must fight as Nan was fighting, as Nan had always fought.

"I'm sick, Sally."

"Not very, mother."

"Very." Her voice was thick, husky with effort.

"You mustn't talk, mother. You must keep quiet." She turned to Fred Damon for reinforcement, but he shook his head.

"I must talk now. I mustn't wait. Sally, you told me once that you'd wait for him here."

"I remember."

"You will, Sally?"

"I will."

"It won't be long now. He'll be coming home. I'm—I'm going, dear one."

"No, no!" In spite of restraint the cry was wrenched from her.

"Going. Far. Farther than the banks of——. Are the lights out, doctor? Farther than—Sally!" Her voice had gone low, throaty.

"Lady, dear."

"There's nothing in all the world but love, nothing but—love." She muttered something they could not hear, then was still. Sally, not breathing, lifted her eyes to Fred Damon. He motioned the other doctor back to his post, and nodded to the men at the door. He came, bringing the nurse with him. "We'll call you," Damon told Sally, "when she rallies."

She went out, draggingly, taking her stand outside the closed door. Joe came to her, putting his arms around her. "O, Sally, Sally, dearest, I'm sorry," he said. She felt the reality of his sympathy, knowing that love for Nan as well as for her rang in his grief, but the misery of her own sorrow engulfed her beyond chance of his comforting. Nan was dying, her brace, blithe mother, Nan, who had stood between her and every one of childhood's troubles. Nan, who had worked and worried for her, saved for her, slaved for her; Nan, who loved her as no one, not even Joe, had ever loved her, as no one would ever love her again! Nan! She couldn't be going into that darkness, that terrible mystery of death. Not Nan of the gay banners and the dancing feet! "I can't let her go!" Sally cried. "Joe, I can't. I won't!"

"You must, Sally, if she has to go." There was fear in his own voice. "We can't keep her. Not if——"

"I will keep her. O, God, God, God," she moaned, "don't take her. Leave her to me. I'll work for her. I'll take care of her, no matter how she lives. Only don't let her go out—alone."

"She won't be alone," he said, but there was no surety in his tone.

"You don't know. I don't know. Nobody knows."

Her voice rose to a shriek. The door to her mother's room opened, and Doctor Damon came out to her. "You must stop this," he told her. "I don't know that she can hear anything, can understand anything now; but if she can hear at all, know at all, it'll be you. Sally, you mustn't hurt her."

"Hurt—her?"

"Hurt her." He bent down over the girl. "She's going on the journey we'll all take one day. She's facing forward as she's always faced forward. She's looking death in the face as she's looked life. We want her to stay, but we can't keep her. Don't make her going hard. Be her daughter, Sally. Brace up!"

"I'll brace," she said. He went back into the room and for hour after hour she sat in the hall, shivering, with Joe's arms tight about her. Sometimes one of the doctors passed, sometimes the nurse, but Fred Damon did not come out until just as a clock in a railroad tower to the eastward chimed midnight. He held open the door, and Sally went in. Nan lay, white and calm, beneath the sheets. "She'll always be young," Damon said, "and she'll always be brave."

Afterward, when crowds of people surged through the house, Sally had no time for thought. Above the dulled ache of loss, an ache that she knew would burst into throbbing pain when the anodyne of necessity for keeping up had worn away, she had to plan, to talk, to give orders. Sometimes, with the stream pouring in, she wondered whence it came. Men, women, children whom she had never before seen, came with tribute to her mother's gift of friendliness. Some of them brought flowers, sheaves, wreaths, great baskets, little clusters. All of them brought remembrance of her. Gazing down upon her marbled beauty in the flush of a dawn, Sally thought for the first time of the greatness of her mother's gift. An artist in life! With a nod, a smile, a laugh she could change the face of the day for those whom she met. With a word she could conjure cheer. With a crust of bread she could share a banquet with those whose need was greater than her own. With work of the day for palette, and surge of the spirit for brush, she had painted her pictures, every one of them overtoned with the silvery gleam of her courage. "O, God, make me a little like her," her daughter prayed from the depths of her sorrow.

"Why Suffer INDIGESTION," Asked her physician

"Gas and 'sour' stomach can now be corrected without the use of burning, irritating soda, or vicious, habit-forming cathartics."

Calcium carbonate, in proper form, is the ideal anti-acid: sure, swift and positive in its soothing relief, yet utterly safe in its use. It is the only remedy which does not upset the acid equilibrium of the body and is incapable of over-dosage.

Stuart Tablets are calcium carbonate in its best and most convenient form blended with other soothing substances. That's why we urge their use as the only kind for children, and best for men and women.

Solutions of Last Week's Puzzles

Sunday Health Talks

—By—
William Brady, M. D.

THOUGH it be trite, let us begin with the remark that Alexis Carel's researches show that the cells of which the human body is composed are perennial, if not eternal; Carel has kept detached masses of tissue cells alive and growing for many years. In spite of the everlasting life of our cells, we aggregations of specialized cells have a sad habit of dying, that is, as organizations, and, as we pass on, dragging our still living cells into the crematory or cemetery with us. Old lady who turned up her toes the other day asked in her will that her dog be chloroformed and laid away with her, but this request was not fulfilled. We are not so humane toward our own living cells, when we become defunct as a going organization. We consult neither the cells nor nature about it, but simply drag 'em all down with us.

It is really hard to tell just when we die. There are various opinions, depending on point of view. But my own notion is that, barring accidents, dying is a slow, even tedious process or change, and most of us are a long time doing it—fifteen to thirty years, at least.

We begin to die at the average age of 48 years for women and 54 years for men. I am utterly at a loss to explain why man, who certainly seems the less essential for the perpetuation of the race, should remain pottering around and encumbering the earth a good five years after woman, God bless her, has left this sphere, perhaps to find a better appreciation in some other planet. I used to fancy that maybe man is just put on the waiting list for a few years, until the stokers can clear a place for him where he is going. But not now I don't. Times have changed and the sexes are changing with them.

However, that's getting off my own preserve.

In this country the average age at which a man attains full growth (both in stature and weight) is 28 years. Of course, we know that most men gain no more height after the age of 18 or 20 years, but scientific measurements show that as a rule there is still some slight increase in height up to age 28. Women beat men to it by four years. A woman reaches the full perfection of development and growth in all respects at the age of 24 years. This is not to say that she knows as much or is just as good a man in any other respect as her sweetie is at his attainment of perfection, but these days she comes darn near it. Yea, brothers, and indeed, girls, I fear that if it came to a showdown many a woman of 24 could show up many a man of 28, by every test in reason. The sexes are not only approaching each other, but if we don't watch out, boys, they'll be leaving us trailing far behind 'em. Even now, when one looks about, one sees too many instances where the presumptive head of the family really keeps house while the real boss is out getting the groceries. This is no facetious suggestion, but a disturbing truth.

We begin to die the instant we begin to decline below the top hole level of perfection and fitness. For instance, a perfect man or woman can hold the breath 40 seconds; try it, and if you can't hold out for 40 seconds, you're dying, that's all. Don't be alarmed about it, for there are millions of us dying with you, but I mention it just as a fair test of life. It is much better than the old mirror test.

Not that one can do very much about it if one finds he is already well along with his dying. If you can hold your breath only twenty seconds you're only about half dead. We'll say you still have ten or twelve years left before you will require a certificate. If, on the other hand, you are already past fifty and yet find you can readily hold your breath the full 40 seconds or even 45, lucky duffer. then, read on, duffer, read on, and maybe you'll learn something yet to spoil this day for you. I must now explain that this breath-holding test is good only up to the age of 65 years. After that, we don't care if you can hold your breath a whole minute or more, as many old geezers can; after 65 you're dying anyway, and that's all there is about it. If by reason of great care of your health and habits in earlier life, your well modulated song of youth, you find that certain of your functions continue even after 65, do not boast about it; no particular credit to you; it just happens that the two single cells with which you started the business of life were choice, hardy stock. But mind you, we all start off as well, bar actual disease. As for your breath-holding performance, if you're over 65 you're so nearly dead that you can get along without breathing—soon it will be forever.

I am not making a joke of dying. Expect to do it myself in due time. But neither do I see anything tragic or ghastly about it. After all, dying is invariably a painless experience, at least for one who has lived right. Why, then, take it so cowardly? If you believe death is the beginning of eternal life, you ought to be plumb happy about it. If you believe it is just the end for you, then you ought to be sport enough to take it cheerfully, for you've had your life, haven't you?

Death, like some nostrums, comes in three forms—standard, household size, hospital size. Ordinary or standard death is that which is caused by recognized disease or evident accident. Most of us die a very ordinary death, thanks to our own ignorance or carelessness. This is also the usual death of all animals, domestic and wild.

So-called intrinsic death is a rather arbitrary form which a few of us affect; this is a premature termination of life attributed to some inherent deficiency or abnormality of the germ plasm, some flaw in the original parent cell. To my mind any one purporting to die in this way is just indulging in a bit of self-flattery and trying to get reverse action on the old saw that inspires a potential grandfather to go ahead and cut as loose as he likes, for his grandchildren will have to pay the piper anyway. In other words, I take no stock whatsoever in the theory that, apart from disease, certain individuals are poorly born. I believe that all men are born equal, that there's nothing in heredity and everything in environment.

Biologic death is the kind of finish every one should wish to achieve. Columbia river salmon beautifully exemplify this type of death. Certain butterflies and certain insects achieve biologic death. Birth, growth, development, reproduction, then a sojourn long enough to care for the young till they can care for themselves, and then good-bye forever. Read and learn about these other biographies and you will soon lose any fear or horror of death you may now feel. Few if any human beings achieve biologic death; we're too dumb. But the salmon, bees, butterflies, and I suspect also the elephants do, at least until man, the most predatory beast of all, interferes with the scheme of nature.

Pirates Ahoy!

sea out of Buenos Ayres, Captain Hackett called him a soldier.

Now, you must understand that "soldier" is a fighting word at sea. From old times, no sailor has been known to fail to resent this epithet. Nevertheless, Captain Hackett, as daring as he was cruel, fell to cursing John Williams while the latter was reefing the foretopsail, and brought his cursing to a close with, "And you are a damned soldier!"

John Williams climbed down quickly, fronted the captain, and told him he would not stand for being called a soldier by any man who ever trod a deck. Captain Hackett struck him with a clew line, and threatened to knock his brains out.

"Very well, Captain, but you will not call me a soldier!" answered Williams.

In a towering rage, Captain Hackett rushed to his cabin and returned with a loaded pistol in each hand. Williams, standing by the mainmast, opened his jacket and cried out, "Why don't you fire? You are a coward!"

That quarrel passed over. Williams shipped again under Captain Hackett. This time, the cruelty of the Captain brewed genuine mutiny. The Captain, tempting fate, called the whole crew "a parcel of soldiers."

In mid-ocean the entire crew rose at a signal and threw Captain Hackett overboard. The two mates were murdered, also. Williams, it developed, was unwilling to join the mutiny, until some one goaded him into revolt by reminding him of the time when the Captain had called him a soldier and had afterwards drawn pistols on him.

After the murders, the crew made Williams captain, and the money on board, about $40,000 in silver, was distributed to all hands. There was a scheme hatched to hoist the black flag and go "upon the account," but Williams was not in favor of the plan.

Williams and three other seamen who had engaged in the mutiny and in the piracy of the ship, deserted the vessel in various Scandinavian ports, and took service where they could find it. All four were arrested in European ports within a few months after the crime, and held for American officers. They were returned to Boston aboard the United States warship Hornet, and were tried before an admiralty court in Boston. All four were found guilty of piracy and murder.

On Thursday, February 18, 1919, John Williams, Frank Frederick, Nils Peterson and John Rog, were hanged near the Burying Ground at Boston Neck. Their bodies were turned over to Boston surgeons, who stood beside the scaffolds until their merchandise was officially delivered to them.

John Williams made but a poor defense at his trial. He tried to justify his crime by alleging that the Captain had called him a soldier.

dilemma that looked fatal either way. But I did not have to make a choice. A shattering crack shook the dug-out from stem to stern, and I was plunged into the depths of the torrent. Coming to the surface, I was dashed along helplessly, bruised against sharp rocks and finally hurled against the left bank of the river. I seized some projecting roots and pulled myself out onto the shore exhausted.

I built a fire, painfully, by the use of firesticks. All of my supplies were gone, but I still had the revolver and cartridges in my belt. I spent most of the night trying to kindle the blaze. Then I began to take stock of my chances of getting back to the Araguaya afoot through the dense jungle.

But the fire had an unexpected consequence. I had suspected that I must be in the neighborhood of the Gaviaos. While I was still pondering on how to escape without encountering members of this hostile and treacherous tribe, I became aware of three figures, armed with huge bows, silently regarding me through the thickets. My hand was on my revolver. They stood silent, ominously ready with their bows.

I spoke a few words of Caraja, but in vain. Finally I arose, smiling as ingratiatingly as I could and throwing my arms wide in a gesture of friendliness, but I think it was my height, rather than the cordiality of my gesture, that impressed them. They began to mutter among themselves as I approached and then turned and melted into the jungle.

The next morning I was picked up by a big flat boat, manned by twenty men and laden with nuts and rubber. In command was the negro I had met in Conceicao, the former army lieutenant.

One morning we pulled into the shore at Para, where, from twenty-foot scows like our own ragged wharf-rats were unloading rubber, cacao, nuts and medicinal barks. Here was the point where the products of the Zingu King's empire first entered the markets of the world. There was a great clamor of dickering between the men on the boats and the purchasers ashore. My negro companion walked part way up the sloping bank with me, through the gesticulating throng of this riverside market.

As we were saying adieu he asked me again to describe the overseer at the mysterious camp I had visited.

"Very short?" he asked. "And fat? With thick lips, and a big mustache? And little eyes? Did one of the lids droop?"

"Yes," I said. "And he wore a snakeskin around his sombrero."

"That," said the negro, as we parted, "was the King of the Xingu himself."

Things New and Old About the Bible

BY REV. W. P. KING

IT IS evident that the table of nations in the tenth chapter of Genesis contains no scientific classification of the races of mankind, nor historical account of the origin of the races of mankind.

According to Prof. Sayce, the enthonologist is not able to trace back to a single original type these different races, and if they actually had a common origin as modern anthropologists think, the process of separation and differentiation must have been many centuries before the traditional dates. As depicted on Egyptian monuments 4,000 years ago, the negroes differed as greatly from other races as they do now.

There is the account of the origin of language. The narrative in the eleventh chapter of Genesis containing the account of the confusion of tongues at Babel is certainly not to be relied upon as the historical origin of languages. The Biblical date of the flood is either 2501 B. C. or 3066 B. C., and so far from the whole earth being at either date of one language, numerous inscriptions are in existence, dating considerably earlier, written in three different languages.

The Biblical narrative contains simply the answers which the Hebrew folk-lore gave to the question which difference of language directly suggested.

In reality difference of languages are the result and not the cause of the diffusion of mankind over the globe. It was the old traditional notion that Hebrew was the primitive language of mankind. Comparative philology shows the Arabic to be older, and what the original language of mankind was is unknown.

The Patriarchal period is given in Genesis, from the twelfth chapter through the remainder of the book.

A narrative committed to writing for the first time so far as we know, 1,000 years or more after the events related in it occurred, would be regarded under ordinary circumstances as destitute of historical value.

These are some considerations that modify this unfavorable conclusion as regards the patriarchal narrative.

In nations possessing no written records the memory is more exercised and more tenacious than others. The memory must be expected to be exceptionally tenacious in the case of initial records or accounts of ancient worthies, whose memories were cherished on the part of a nation which held aloof from its neighbors and was proud of its ancestry.

The critical analysis of Genesis furnishes an argument of some weight in favor of the general trustworthiness of the patriarchal narratives. We have two independent narratives of the patriarchal period, one within all probability in Judah, and the other in the Southern Kingdom. These while exhibiting discrepancies in detail, on the whole agree.

The patriarchal narratives possess strong historical probability. There is almost the complete absence of incredible marvels, fantastic extravagances, and surprising miracles. There are particular details which are impossible, but the narrative concerning Absalom, Isaac, Jacob and Joseph are in the main credible.

It is possible that the Joseph narratives contain more dramatic situations than are likely to have happened in real life. But the changes in Joseph's fortune are of a kind quite natural in oriental countries, and in Egypt in particular, the monuments supply examples of foreigners attaining to positions of political distinction.

Particular episodes and details may have been added, but the narratives give evidence of being in substance historical. The historical imagination of the narrator played its part. The marriage of Abraham and Keturah could not have taken place at the time designated. One passage J. represents Hagar carrying Ishmael as if he had been an infant, while another passage P. furnishes dates which make Ishmael at least fifteen years of age. According to one narrative J. E., Isaac is on his death-bed, but according to another narrative P., he survives for eighty years, dying at the age of 180.

One narrative J. E. places theh origin of the names Jacob and Bethel earlier than another narrative P. In the history of Joseph according to one narrative P., Judah takes the lead, and dissuade his brethren from carrying out their purpose, and induces them to sell Joseph to a caravan of Ishmaelites. According to E., Reuben takes the lead, and at his suggestion they cast Joseph into a pit, and Midianite traders passing by draw him out of the pit while the brethren are at their meal. But this does not undermine the substantial historical accuracy of the patriarchal period.

The religious position of Moses stands before us unsupported and incomprehensible unless we accept the tradition that he appealed to the God of his fathers. Moses would have hardly made his way among the people, if he had come in the name of a strange and hitherto unknown god.

But he might reasonably hope for success, if a fresh revelation had been made to him by the God of Abraham, who was still worshipped in some circles, and still lived in the memory of the people. In spite of the great deliverance achieved by Moses, Israelitish tradition goes back beyond Moses and finds in the patriarchal period the first roots not only of the possesion of the land, but also of the people's higher worship of God. This cannot be accounted for except on the historicity of the patriarchal period.

Twenty-Five Years of Aviation

a particularly romantic lure. As early as 1910 there had been an experiment with air mail covering a few miles on Long Island and having only a sentimental interest. Within a couple of years thereafter Zeppelins were carrying passengers in Germany on a regular inter-city schedule. But prior to 1914 it all amounted to little.

The nature of the relationship between the war and commercial aviation has been the subject of much dispute. Undoubtedly the war experience disseminated ideas that steered the ascent of commercial aviation in 1919 on courses distorted and undesirable in some respects.

In commercial air transport, as in putting the airplane to work for the military and naval arms, we in America made the first experiments and then displayed great caution in following them up. Even before the armistice the postoffice department started the first regular air mail service, connecting New York and Washington, but it was some years before any further important step was taken.

In the meantime European countries created and steadily expanded a network of passenger air lines, operating most of them with planes especially designed for passenger service.

American air transport has been the beneficiary of four successive impulses since the postoffice department began the great experiment of putting the airplane in the service of the letter writer. Regular night flying was introduced through the efforts of Colonel Paul Henderson, then second assistant postmaster general, in 1924. The Kelly bill, authorizing the award of air mail contracts to private corporations and paving the way for taking the government out of the business, became law in 1925.

The air commerce bill, introduced by Senator Bingham, to give detailed effect to certain of the recommendations of the Morrow aircraft board, of which he was a member, was passed in 1926 and made possible the notable work of the department of commerce under Herbert Hoover and Assistant Secretary MacCracken in stimulating the opening of new air routes and air navigation facilities. Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh flew to Paris in 1927 and made the whole nation devotedly air minded.

The collective effect of these vitalizing events is too well known to need more than the merest recapitulation. Nine years ago there was in America a single air line, barely 200 miles in length and carrying only mail and using slightly modified military airplanes. Today our commercial aircraft fly 43,400 miles each day on regular schedules with mail, express and passengers; 16,300 miles of routes are served, 6,300 of them lighted for night flying—and expansion goes on apace. European countries have worked on different lines, but all of the great powers have progressed notably in the commercial field.

The officers and men of the service would cheerfully assume any necessary risks and reflect, as they have in the past, that "the air service is always at war." It goes without saying, however, that no effort must be—and none is—spared to reduce the risks to a minimum.

The experience of the navy again will serve as an apt illustration of what has been accomplished. In 1921 the service had a fatal accident for every 2,200 hours flown. There has been steady improvement until last year the corresponding figure reached 7,200 hours, and for the first four and a half months of the present fiscal year, which started July 1, the record has been approximately 8,000 hours for each fatal accident. This is believed to be a record which has never been beaten, if, indeed, it has ever been approached, by any non-American military or naval air service.

To recount what has been done is easy. To forecast is not so simple. Yet there are certain points that stand out as almost assured. It is assured, in general terms, that progress will continue. The performance of airplanes will improve. They will be more economical, more rugged, more reliable, safer. The present range of their usefulness is dimly suggested by the extraordinary variety of the topics listed for consideration by the international civil aeronautics conference during the coming week. There will be still further diversification ahead.

Under the specific head of military operations we may anticipate that the place of the airplane will grow still more important and that the proportion of total appropriations for national defense which is directly or indirectly allocated to aviation will continue to increase. The airplane to some extent will replace other instruments of war, and will be developed at their expense.

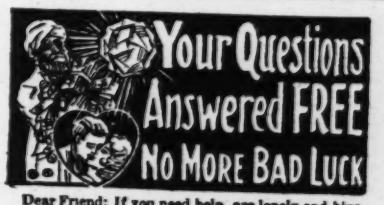

Especially may we safely anticipate that the airplane will become increasingly the dominant factor in coast defense and that airplanes based at coastal stations will fly long distances over the water to co-operate with fleets and the aircraft based on them. The proportion of naval vessels carrying aircraft and depending on the airplane and its bomb as their principal striking force, rather than on the gun and its projectile, will increase.

Commercial aviation has a vast field to exploit within the continental United States. We shall run far afield on a false scent if we devote ourselves to the promotion of trans-Atlantic air travel at the expense of simpler and more urgently needed development at home. Trans-oceanic commercial service is important, but for the airplane it is far away despite the success of a number of trans-Atlantic flights carried out under selected conditions and with specially prepared equipment and little or no commercial load.

There are 16,300 miles of air routes operated in the United States now. That figure can be multiplied by five or ten and the traffic increased a hundred-fold or more. It imposes no undue strain upon the imagination to foresee the transport by air of all first-class mail between great cities 200 miles or more apart, and passenger business has possibilities as yet hardly touched. The commercial operator of airplanes is far from having reached the point where he will have to weep with Alexander for the lack of fresh worlds to conquer.

So far the omens are plain and legible, but they are only for the immediate future. We have seen what wonders twenty-five years of flight have brought forth. Few will be so bold as to don the prophet's mantle and attempt to look ahead for another twenty-five years, or to guess how much there will be to celebrate at an international gathering marking the semi-centennial in December, 1953.

Your Sons and Your Daughters

vid first met Kitchener. By June 5, 1900, Roberts had entered Pretoria, and David began to prepare for the reconstruction he knew must come.

In 1903 he had made his first million and received a knighthood for his share in guaranteeing part of the reconstruction loans. In 1905 little Mary was born at her father's fine house in Parktown, the Mayfair of Johannesburg. Sir David and Lady Logan and family returned to England in 1913, because young David, aged eighteen, would be leaving Eton very soon and eight years old Mary's education had to begin. When the great war broke out in 1914, Sir David was forty-four and Mary forty.

Young David went at once into the Guards, and his father gave a hundred thousand pounds to the Red Cross. That eventually changed him from Sir David Logan to Viscount Ivinghoe. He importuned the war office for a commission, and the war office, acting under instructions, refused. Kitchener remembered the David Logan of Cape Town in 1900. This was to be a war of finance as well as fighting, and great financiers had other work to do.

Lord Ivinghoe spent the war years serving on financial commissions in allied countries and the signing of the peace treaty brought him an earldom. Young David left the army with an honorable wound, two decorations, and the rank of captain.

Young David, now Lord Wendover, had been responsible for the few threads of gray in her fair shingle. "He was born," she reminded herself, "in our fighting days, but I didn't want him to die fighting, and he served with his battalion the whole time and the Guards were in every big show."

Lady Ivinghoe, having reviewed her own career, summed up the situation as it occurred to her.

"I don't blame Mary a bit for deciding to marry George Pont. After all, there isn't much adventure left, and politics are always amusing. Besides, the young generation aren't taking any risks. They're in the shadow of the war and they play for safety. But I wouldn't do it myself, and I wouldn't have missed one second of the littlest dog fight David and I ever had for anything in the world."

IV.

The big, silent limousine drew up at the ladies' entrance of the Plantagenet club. Mary entered with a certain mingling of triumph and trepidation. The Plantagenet club, for membership of which the names of boy babies careful in the choice of their fathers are put down at birth, has only of late permitted females to breathe its rare atmosphere. It was Bertie Maxwell's final gesture—"My club, therefore my home; my club, to which I belong not because of what I have but of what I am. Mr. Midas might take you to the Ritz, but he would never enter here except as a guest."

The ex-cavalry man commissionaire with the row of medals led her to a waiting room, and almost immediately Bertie appeared, a very pleasant auburn-haired young man two years older than herself, with the Rugby football of his youth and boxing matches when he served his time in the shops still evident in rippling muscles and eyes and skin clear as crystal.

Mary said, "Hullo, Bertie!" gliding the casualness of 1928 with her nicest smile.

"Hullo, Mary! Jolly decent of you to come."

He led her into the ladies' drawing room, decorated by the committee with a kind of sacrificial charm, enthroned her at her superlative table, and looked after her with the devotion of a well bred young man etherealized by hopeless affection.

Mary poured tea, rested her elbows on the table, leaned her chin on her hands, looked at him consideringly, and commanded: "Tell me all about everything."

"It's just the old, old story—the younger son digs out. As you know, my mother died a little while ago. She left me a few hundreds—a thousand, as a matter of fact. I've got a very little money put by, and I'm going out to Tommy Hunter, a very old pal of mine, in Kenya. He's got a place right up in the blue Gil Gil way, and the coffee he planted when he went out is just about bearing now.

"He'll be glad of the extra capital, and as I'm an engineer, I'm interested in the mechanical side. I shall take out a tractor or so and a couple of six wheel lorries. He's a bit far from the railway. The beauty of being an engineer is you come in all over the place in a new country.

"But, my dear, isn't there anything for you to do in England?"

"Nothing on earth compared to what I might do out there. I can't see myself in a Picadilly motor showroom with a salary of about twopence, selling cars on commission. The really good works manager jobs are all filled, and besides, who'd give me one? They'd say I was a baby; you've got to have gray hairs before they respect you in England. I haven't the flair to be a crack racing driver; they are born. Somebody's got to go out and people the great waste spaces, Mary dear, and at least you're a white man out there. All being well in the long run. I shall own the equivalent of half an English county, and my children, if any, will be lords of creation."

"What about the old place in Sussex?"

"O, Peter'll have that. Poor Peter, I'm sorry for him. He can't do anything about it because it's entailed; he can't charge economic rents because agriculture doesn't pay; and with income tax at four shillings in the pound, motor tax at a pound a horsepower, and whisky at twelve and six a bottle, not to mention night club champagne at thirty-five bob, what's he going to do? Better be a younger son with all your responsibilities under your own hat."

"So you're not sorry to go?"

"O, yes, I'm sorry in a way. One'll miss one's friends."

"Any particular friends?"

"Well, a girl here and there, I s'pose."

"Any particular girl?"

"No questions, no pack drill."

For the life of her Mary could not forbear looking through him to his very soul and comparing him to Sir George Pont, ten years older, dripping with this world's goods, already a political power, scheduled as a future prime minister. Mentally she opposed him to Bertie Maxwell, both stripped to the waist, with nothing but bare fists and herself as the prize. Heredity being what it is, she knew whose hand in the long run would drag her off by the hair of her head. Girl-like, knowing how it would hurt, knowing he loved her, she put him to the torture.

"Why don't you ask the girl to go with you?"

"Couldn't. It isn't done. Can't ask a nice girl to give up everything and go and live with an impecunious younger son in a grass hut up in the blue."

"Why not? Girls aren't made of sugar."

"Think of the loneliness. Think of what she'd be giving up. Do you realize the size of Africa?"

"A girl who's got any guts would give up anything if she were fond of a man. We like to do our share of building, Bertie."

"Mine's an exceptional girl, and anyway, she isn't mine."

"You can't think her very exceptional if you don't give her the chance to go with you."

"She'd have to give up more than any one has a right to ask her to give up."

"If you love her, you've a right to ask anything."

"Shut up, Mary! This is getting too personal. The girl's rolling in money and I haven't a bean."

"What's that got to do with it?"

"Everything. One has one's pride."

"Evidently one loves one's pride more than the girl. You're just a filthy egotist, a baby, a funk, in short. You don't want to marry an equal; you prefer a slave, something you've bought and paid for."

"Unfortunately," said Bertie Maxwell, with the sweat standing on his forehead, "the world would be with me and against you. The world would say I was a fortune hunter out after an easy meal ticket."

"The world might say that of ninety-nine girls out of a hundred who marry."

"It's natural for a girl."

"You might at least tell me who she is."

"Mary, darling, don't be so unkind. You know perfectly well who she is."

And then, with almost ludicrous precision, Lady Mary knew exactly the man she wanted above all others and that his name was not George Pont. Thereupon, being a girl and logical, she cast all her carefully acquired theories to the winds.

"Bertie," she asked in a calm voice, "are you going to make me ask you to marry me?"

few fathoms from the ship, stood up in the stern-sheets and demanded that Captain Hardy put back for the purpose of getting the oblong box!

"Sit down, Mr. Wyatt," replied the Captain, somewhat sternly; "you will capsize us if you do not sit quite still—we are almost under water now."

"But the box—in the name of heaven, put back for the box!"

"Mr. Wyatt, you are mad. I cannot listen to you. Stay! Hold him! There—I knew it—he is over!"

The man succeeded in getting to the ship. In another moment he was on board and rushing frantically to the cabin.

We saw the boat there like a feather in the breath of the tempest and we knew that our unfortunate artist was doomed. As the distance from the wreck increased we saw the madman emerge carrying the box. While we watched, he wrapped several turns of a three-inch rope about his body and the box. In another instant both body and box were in the sea, disappearing suddenly at once and forever.

We lingered awhile sadly at our oars, with our eyes riveted on the spot.

Finally I hazarded a remark:

"Did you observe, Captain, how suddenly they sank? Was it not an exceedingly singular thing. . . ."

"They sank as a matter of course, and that like a shot. They will soon rise again, however, but not until the salt melts."

"The salt!" I ejaculated.

"Hush!" said the Captain, pointing to the wife and sister of the deceased, "We must talk of these things at some more appropriate time."

We suffered much and made a narrow escape; but fortune befriended us as well as our mates in the long boat. We landed, in fine, more dead than alive, after four days of intense distress, upon the beach opposite Roanoke Island. I was soon again on my way to New York.

From Captain Hardy later I learned the particulars of the peculiar story of poor Wyatt:

The artist had engaged passage for himself, wife, two sisters and a servant. His wife was indeed, as she might be expected to be, a most lovely and accomplished woman. On the morning of the 14th of June (the day that I had first come aboard the ship) the lady had suddenly sickened and died. The young husband was frantic with grief, but circumstances imperatively forbade the deferring of his voyage to New York. It was necessary to take to her mother the corpse of his adored wife, and, on the other hand, the universal prejudice which would have prevented his doing so openly was well known. Nine-tenths of the passengers would have abandoned the ship rather than take passage with a dead body.

In this dilemma, Captain Hardy arranged that the corpse, embalmed and packed in a large quantity of salt, should be conveyed aboard as merchandise. The maid was to personate the wife, and she remained in the extra stateroom. In the daytime she did her best to take the part of her mistress.

My own mistakes were just those of an over-inquisitive person. But there is a hysterical laugh which will ring in my ears forever.

Seckatary Hawkins Club for Boys and Girls

Club Colors Blue & White

A Letter From the "Seckatary"

Dear Club Members:

Just fifteen more days of 1928—and then comes New Year's Day. It is a most happy time for all of us boys and girls, because it means that we are closer to the goal we have set for ourselves when we grow up. New Year's Eve is perhaps one of the most beautiful in the year, because at midnight you hear the mournful bells and the wailing whistles that are bidding farewell to the old year. It has been a good year, all in all, and we do not like to part with it, somehow. And as we listen to the bells and whistles blowing, we look out of the window, and in our minds we might see the old year, shambling off like an old, gray and withered Father Time, to his place in the hall of history. We feel a little pang of sorrow, perhaps—but before we have time to think further on it, lo! a new note comes into the sound of the bells and the whistles—a joyous note of welcome and gladness, for the New Year is standing upon our threshold, smiling and bidding us happiness! We rush to clasp the New Year in our arms, and in our joy forget the sadness that the passing of the Old Year caused. "Happy New Year!" rings the glad cry from every tongue. And from the four corners of the earth the winds bring back the echo: "Happy New Year!"

What a beautiful title for a contest, you say? Well, that's what we all thought, too, and so we are going to have a contest this week in which your contribution's title must contain the words "NEW YEAR." Remember, now the early bird catches the worm, and get busy at once—don't wait. Send in your contributions as early as possible—put your full name and address and your age—don't forget your age, that must be with your name and address on every contribution you send in. Some very nice ones that might have won prizes had to be thrown away because the member did not follow instructions. So read the rules carefully again, and then sit down and write at once your story, or verse, or make a drawing, and send it in without delay.

A NEW YEAR'S PASSWORD

Last week our password was "Yuletide," which means the happy season that we call Christmas time today. In the old days they used to say "Yuletide" instead. In some places it is still called by that name.

Now, some of our younger members could not get our last week's puzzle. So, to be fair and square, and to give all an equal chance, this week we will give the following:

—A—P—N—S—.

It is only one word, but it means a whole lot, in fact, every thing there is in life, if we are fortunate to have it. There is one sure way of getting it, too and that is by following out our motto—"Fair and Square." As you see it above, the dashes represent the missing letters. Fill in the right letters, and you will have a word that means what we are wishing you for the New Year. Now it ought to be easy. Let's see you work it out.

"NEW YEAR"

Prizes announced each Sunday for best letter, story, drawing or poem.

READ THE RULES CAREFULLY

In our next contest the title must contain the words, "NEW YEAR." You may write a letter or a verse or draw a picture.

WRITE ON ONE SIDE OF PAPER ONLY.

YOUR COMPOSITION MUST BE ORIGINAL. YOU MUST WRITE IT WITHOUT ANY ASSISTANCE FROM OLDER PERSONS.

Drawings must be made in black drawing ink. Those made in ordinary writing ink cannot be considered.

Manuscripts or drawings will not be returned unless accompanied by self-addressed and stamped envelope.

All contributions must bear the writer's full name, address and age. Don't forget to give your age.

The contest is open now. It will close next Thursday at 4 o'clock. All contributions must be received by that time.

Prize winners will be announced Sunday, December 30th.

PRIZE: A BOOK OF "OUR CLUB'S ADVENTURES"

Address all submissions in this contest to Seckatary Hawkins, care The Atlanta Constitution.

OUR WEEKLY MEETING

The meeting will please come to order, and we will proceed to introduce a few of our new members, from different states, beginning with Missouri:

Dear Seck:

I am mighty glad to have a chance to join your club. My two brothers and two boys across the street and I have a club. Our colors are orange and black. We didn't have any motto until I read yours, and then we made it Fair and Square, and it is always going to be that—fair and square.

Yours, fair and square,
DICK COX,
631 S. Fuller St., Independence, Mo.

We will give three cheers, Dick, for Independence, Mo. And strange things happen, in the same mail comes a letter from a new member in Independence, Ky. We are happy to introduce the two:

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:

For a long time I have read your story in the Sunday paper, and know more besides me who are interested in it, and I would like to become a member. I also week out your passwords every Sunday, and find it interesting.

I am 14 years and and sure am sorry I didn't join before. I would like to hear from some of the members of your club.

Yours, fair and square,
ANNA LOUISE PARDICK,
Fowler Creek Park, Independence, Ky.

The good old state of New York sends us a new member, whom we are glad to introduce next:

Dear Friend:

I have just listened to the Seckatary Hawkins radio meeting, and think I would like to join the club. I was interested very much in your story, to see how it was going to come out. I am 10 years old.

Yours, fair and square,
EDNA FERRIS,
R. F. D. 2, Cooperstown, N. Y.

Now let Wisconsin's voice be heard; a little fellow whose mother reads this for him:

Dear Seck:

I am 6 years old. I can't read very well, yet my mother reads the stories about you to me. I enjoy them very much. I would like to join your club.

Yours, fair and square,
CLAYTON DICKEY,
128 E. Mill Ave., Wauwatosa, Wis.

Time to adjourn this meeting. We will meet here again next week on this same page. All of the members whose letters are printed in our Weekly Meeting will receive by mail this week a copy of our club's adventures on the river bank. If your letter has not appeared, don't give up. Write again.

Bye, till next week.

Yours, fair and square,

Seckatary Hawkins

IN THE SECKATARY'S MAIL BOX

Dear Seck:

I am very interested in your club and about you. I hope you do not get caught by the red-headed boy.

Yours, fair and square,
FRANCIS E. WATSON,
506 S. Lee St., Fitzgerald, Ga.

Dear Seck Hawkins:

I have been keeping up with your adventures and am very interested in it. I am eleven years of age and in the seventh grade. Will you accept me as a member?

Yours, fair and square,
ANNA BELL CALDWELL,
Crawfordtown, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I am a little girl ten years old and I am in the sixth grade. I am fond of reading and I wish very much to have one of your books. This is my first letter and I hope it is printed on your page. Every one write to me.

Yours, fair and square,
ELAINE STILES,
Blue Ridge, Ga.

FAIR AND SQUARE.

Boys and girls be "Fair and Square" in all you do. In the long run it is better. If you "do unto others as you would have them do unto you" I am sure you would have to be "fair and square."

Mother and daddy would be so proud of you if you would be fair and square to everyone, everywhere. Last, but not least, Seckatary Hawkins has selected for us the motto, "Fair and Square," and we should try to please him by being fair and square.

If you quarrel and fight, or fuss and rattle around those about you will copy you. Then you are setting a bad example—don't do that—set the best example that you possibly can. You know that the smaller children copy older children always, so don't let them see you setting a bad example.

How many of you are already members of Seckatary Hawkins' Club? I see so many hands. How many are going to join real soon? That is real good. Promise me to join real soon and don't forget to be Fair and Square.

EVELYN JOYNER, 12,
Eastover, S. C.

Dear Seck:

I would like to join your club. I am a boy eight years of age. For pets I have a dog and a kitten. All you boys and girls write to me and I will answer all letters I receive.

Yours, fair and square,
JAMES McCLENNY,
Route 2, Fayetteville, Ga.

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:

I am very interested in your club and read it every Sunday. I wish I could be with you sometimes even if I am a girl. The holidays will soon be here, and won't I be glad. I like to do Christmas shopping. Now think I should tell you something about myself. I am 13 and in the eighth grade at school. My birthday is May 18. I am tall and have brown eyes and hair. I like to read. Some of my favorite authors are: Gene Stratton Porter, John Fox, Jr., Zane Grey and Louise M. Alcott. I sure do like to get letters and please all of the club members write to me and anyone else that will. I will be sure to answer all letters.

EVELYN WYNN,
Pregnall, S. C.

Atlanta Girl Wins "Fair and Square" Prize

Dear Seckatary:

I am not a new member but I am writing just the same. I get your magazine every month and I read your stories in the Sunday papers. I enjoy them very much. When I haven't anything to do I get my "Seckatary Hawkins" Magazine and read. I must describe myself. I am a blonde. I have fair complexion and blue eyes. I am 9 years old and am in the fourth grade.

Yours, fair and square,
SARAH KAY,
Age 9. Rome, Ga.

Dear Seckatary:

I have been reading your stories and enjoy them very much. I have made a booklet of your adventures on the river bank, and read them to my brother, W. O. I am eight years old and in the fourth grade. I like to go to school.

Yours, fair and square,
VERNELLE THOMPSON,
Lawrenceville, Ga.

Dear Seckatary:

I have been reading your club page each week and I would like to join your club. I also like your motto, "Fair and Square." "I would enjoy receiving letters from your club members.

Also have a football and two small balls to play with. Have an air rifle to shoot birds with. Have a lot of boys and girls to play with. Well, guess you all are looking forward to Christmas.

Yours, fair and square,
RAYMOND AMOS,
Box 267, Cornelia, Ga.

FAIR AND SQUARE.

I think "fair and square" is a good motto, and "blue and white" are beautiful colors for our club. You could not have selected prettier colors.

Fair and square means, be fair with your playmates, so they will be fair to you, because the Bible says, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." And that's what this means.

No club has such a good motto as "fair and square," and the other rules as the club has.

Your club member,
MARTHA RAY RHODES,
Taylorsville, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I have fun reading your stories in the paper and sure do enjoy them. I would like to have seen you when the girl give you a big kiss. I am 12 years old and in the 6th grade. I take the Palmer method of writing and sure do like it. I have one gets four squirrels and a cat. The cat will jump three feet when you hold your hands in front of him. I want you to tell all the boys and girls to write me. I will answer them.

Yours, fair and square,
CHARLIE ALEXANDER,
Baldwin, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I am very much interested in your club. I have been reading about your club about three weeks. I am ten years old and am in the fourth grade. I would like to join your club. I hope to be a good member for you. Yours, fair and square,
CLAYTON BALER,
1011 Cleburne Ave., N. E., Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Seckatary:

I am a little girl 9 years old. I am in the fourth grade at school. I read your letters and stories every Sunday and I enjoy them very much.

Dear Seckatary:

I have been wanting to join your club for a long time. Now is my chance. I am very much interested in your club. I am nine years old and in the fourth grade at school and want you to send me a membership button where I can be in your club. We are taking The Constitution and I am reading your pieces as much as I can and I am hoping to get your prize book of you and your club's adventures.

Yours, fair and square,
BRUCE WILDER,
Cornelia, Ga.

Dear Seckatary:

It is so good to live fair and square. You live so good and everybody likes you. I guess that is why we have it for our motto. Yours, fair and square,

THE RABBIT MYSTERY

As soon as school let out on Monday, I hurried down to the river bank. We boys have been holding meetings there every day, since we were little kids, in a little old shack we call our clubhouse. When we first started our club we used to meet in an old stranded houseboat, but we got in trouble once and old Judge Granbery chased us away from the river and had the houseboat torn down. We've got a good friend though, Doc Waters—he always had a liking for us boys and he got the judge to let us hold our club meetings again, and we took this little old shack that had been built by three boys who had run away from college. I started to live for themselves down on our river bank. They got enough of it before many days passed, and they decided it was much better back at college, so they deserted the shack. Then we got it. Doc Waters fixed it up for us, with a little porch around the front and side, and had a long pine table and chairs put in, around which we could hold our meetings. Believe me, we boys sure liked Doc Waters.

There were only nine of us boys left in the club now. There had been a lot more, but one thing or another made them leave the old river bank, and today we only had nine members. That's not counting the twins, Oliver and Harold Court, who are up in a fancy school in Massachusetts. They'll be back in another week, now, as they always come home for the Christmas vacation and then we'll have eleven members for about two weeks. Of course, it's nice to have as many boys as you can get in the club, but I always say it's a lot easier for me to have fewer boys, because it's always up to me to get out of all the fights and trouble we get in. Dick Ferris is our captain, but most always he comes to me to figure out things. Shadow Loomis lives up in Watertown and comes down every day in his motor boat. Jerry Moore is the biggest and roughest member in our club, but he's a real, true blue scout at that. Roy Dobel lives on the nearest farm to our town, his pop being a farmer. Bill Darby and Johnny McLarren are two old pals of mine—we used to know each other ever since before the club started, and we always stuck together. Lew Hunter is our Music Master. He plays the old battered organ which we have in our clubhouse, and we all get around him and practice singing so we can sing in the church choir on Sundays. Perry Stokes is the last member; he calls himself overseer of the clubhouse, but the other boys call him the janitor, because he cleans up the place every day and sets things straight after we get through with our meeting.

Well, on Monday as I hurried down the river path, I heard the rattle of a motorboat on the water, and I knew Shadow Loomis was just arriving. So I went on down to the little landing to meet him. He had the boat tied already as I walked on to the landing, and as he leaped out I saw he had some shiny metal things hanging from a piece of chain.

"Hi, Hawkins," he says, "look at the fine new traps!"

"Yeah," I says, "what you goin' to do with 'em?"

"Goin' partners with Jerry Moore," he says, with a grin. "Jerry's goin' to set 'em, and we are goin' to sell the skins of all the animals we catch. Then we're goin' to divide the money."

"If you get any, you mean," I said, with a grin. "Believe me, you got to know how to coax a fox into one o' those things, and I kind o' think a fox is smarter than Jerry is, so you'd better pick out somebody else instead o' Jerry. He hasn't got any too much sense—"

"Aw, we don't expect to get any foxes," broke in Shadow, as we started to walk up to the clubhouse together. "Most likely we will get nothin' but rabbits and skunks, and the rabbits we can sell for meat and the skunks for their pelts."

"If the skunk sees you first," I said with a laugh, "you'll have to buy yourself a new suit of clothes. You know that—"

"I know," said Shadow, with a frown; "but I don't think there'll be many skunks caught—most likely nothin' but rabbits—"

"And if the fellow whose farm you catch those rabbits on ever finds out about it," I said, "You'll have to pay for every one you catch—"

"Aw, shucks!" says Shadow, "it ain't likely we'll catch any rabbits, Hawkins. But just for the fun of it, you know—I'd just like to see if we really can trap anything in these things."

"Most likely you won't catch anything," I told him. And with that, then, we walked up the steps and into the clubhouse. All the other boys were waiting for us, to begin the regular meeting. Jerry Moore jumped up as soon as he saw Shadow with the traps, and all of the other boys ran over, too, and listened to the two trappers telling about how they were going to set these traps and get rich by selling the animals they would catch.

Perry Stokes, however, did not seem to be interested in the traps. He watched for a chance to catch my eye, and motioned for me to come back in the little room where I did all my writing.

"Well," I said, "what's wrong, Perry? Your face looks like you're worried—"

"That," he says, suddenly, pointing toward my desk. And then I saw. My inkwell had been upset, and the ink had made a great big blot on the blue blotter on top of my desk.

"Golly!" I exclaimed. "How many times did I tell those guys to stay out of my writing room!"

"They didn't do it, sir," said Perry, shaking his head. "It wasn't there last night when I locked up. And I was the first one down here today. I came right in with my own key, and you are the only other boy who has a key, sir. You know that. We only have two keys to this clubhouse, sir, and for the life of me I couldn't imagine you tipping over your own inkwell and leaving it like that, all blotting up the desk-top, sir—"

"No, of course not, Perry," I said; "I wouldn't let it lay like that, smearing up everything, anyway. Now, tell me this—do you think some stranger has been in here while we were at school?"

"What else can a fellow think, sir?" asked Perry, with big eyes.

"You were the first one down here, you say?" I asked. And as he nodded: "Well, then, Perry how did he get in? Was any window open?"

"No, sir. The door was locked, and all the windows closed. There's no way he could have got in unless he had broken a window. But all the windows were locked, too."

"By Jinks! That does sound funny. You don't think somebody could have borrowed your key, Perry—"

"Not a chance, sir! The key was in my pocket all the time. It's a mystery to me, sir."

"Well, how the dickens did anyone get in here, then? He couldn't come down the chimney unless he was Santy Claus, because our chimney pipe is too narrow for a cat to squeeze through."

"I'm not sayin', sir. I was minded to tell you, only that, but what else could have upset that inkwell."

"An earthquake, maybe. But I don't seem to remember anything like that happening last night. Any earthquake that would upset that inkbottle would surely have thrown me out of my bed, and by Jinks! I slept sound all night—"

"Hey, Hawkins!" came Jerry Moore's voice, calling from the meeting room. "Come on, we're going to set the traps."

So we forgot the mystery of the upset ink bottle, and went along to watch Shadow and Jerry place the traps. Through the woods we went, stopping everywhere there seemed to be a good place to fasten the trap to a peg in the ground. Jerr knew all the different ways to hide the trap so that the animal, coming for the bait nearby, would step into it. By the time we got back to the clubhouse, it was dark, and we went home.

We got another bottle of ink the next day. We held our meeting as usual and went to look at the traps. The first one was just as we left it the day before. The second one was sprung, but nothing was in it. A hind foot of a rabbit, cut clean as a whistle, was lying a little to one side of the trap.

"That one caught something all right," says Jerry, "but it got away—look at that, cut his hind foot off."

We went on. The next trap was sprung, too, but empty. Jerry was down on his knees in an instant, and picking up something, held it up to compare with what he took from his pocket. Two rabbit feet!

"By golly, Shadow!" he exclaimed. "These traps you brought are too sharp—they cut right through, and the animal gets away. You got to get some that ain't so powerful."

"No," said Shadow, "that trap's guaranteed to catch a rabbit—"

"How's it goin' to catch 'em if it cuts their hindfoot off all the time?"

"Listen, fellas!" spoke up Bill Darby. "Maybe we can catch that rabbit whose foot was cut off—listen, here, a rabbit on three feet can't run very far—"

"Can't it, though!" exclaimed Jerry Moore. "Say, boy, you don't know rabbits. My pop told me once a rabbit what had two feet in front cut off—"

"Got up on its hind feet and danced away," broke in Bill, with a laugh which every boy joined except Jerry. I could see there might be a fight in a minute if this went on, so I said:

"Look here, if that rabbit's foot was bleeding, Jerry, why don't you track it by the blood spots—"

"Oh, boy! I never thought of that!" he exclaimed. "Sure! It will lead us right to the rabbit's hole—maybe we will find a nest of 'em—"

"Now, look here, Jerry," said Shadow, "see where the trap claws caught his foot? If these traps were too powerful, why wasn't this bunny's foot cut off, too, like the others?"

"Oh, that one trap might not be as strong as the others," said Jerry.

"Let's—prove it," said Shadow. And he led us back to where the nearest of the two traps were in which we had found a rabbit's foot.

"Gimme one o' those foots," he says, and Jerry reached in his pocket and handed him one.

"Now, look here," said Shadow, holding the tip of the foot just so it would be caught by the claws of the trap. He took a stick and from underneath the claws he set off the spring. The claws snapped up and caught the rabbit foot, but did not cut through. The claws held it tightly, but neatly.

"There you are!" exclaimed Shadow. "These traps are all right. Three rabbits they caught for us today, but we've only got one. What's that mean?"

"Somebody stole the other two!" exclaimed our captain.

"Sure," said Shadow, nodding; "see how clean this rabbit foot was cut off? That trap's claws couldn't make such a clean cut. No. Somebody came along and killed the rabbits they found in the trap, then cut off a hindfoot to make us believe the rabbit got away."

For a few seconds we all stood there without saying a word, watching Shadow as he took the one rabbit they had caught, and which Perry Stokes was holding. Shadow smoothed down the long ears and snuggled the creature in the flap of his topcoat.

My inkwell had been upset and the ink had made a great big blot.

"Well, I be doggone!" exclaimed Jerry Moore, at last. "I'd just like to see somebody doin' that when I'm around—"

"You won't," said Shadow; "trap thieves don't usually work when you're around. They sneak around when nobody's lookin' and empty your traps and then try to make you think your traps were too powerful and cut the animal's foot off, or maybe they expect us to believe the rabbit chawed his foot off to get away—"

"This foot wasn't chawed off!" broke in Jerry, holding up the other hindfoot. "Well, we got one live one, anyway, Shadow—you keep that other hindfoot and I'll keep this one—for good luck—rabbit foot's always good luck if you keep it in your pocket, you know—and maybe tomorrow we'll have good luck and catch a lot of 'em."

"All right, Jerry," says Shadow, "but let's sell this one—we can get twenty-five cents for it, anyhow—I'll take it up and kill it and skin it—"

"Ah, no!" cried Jerry, stepping up and taking the rabbit away from Shadow. "Ah, no, Shad," he repeated, in a softer tone, "don't let's do that."

"Well!" I exclaimed. "I'd never think you were soft-hearted, Jerry."

"Soft-hearted!" he exclaimed. "Who's more soft-hearted than you are, I'd like to know! You couldn't kill this little bunny yourself—"

"I know it, I wouldn't want to kill him myself—"

"Well, what you want me to kill him for then? No, sir, you guys ain't goin' to get me to hurt this bunny-rab—I don't care what you all talk about. Here, Shad, reach in my pocket and get your profit—"

But Shadow smiled. He stepped up and laid his hand gently on the little rabbit's soft fur.

"No, Jerry," he said, "I don't want any profit out o' that one. It's the first catch, you know, and since you took such a liking to him from the start, why, he belongs to you. Take him home and keep him—if you can."

"Thanks, Shad!" said Jerry, talking hurriedly—"and tomorrow if we catch another one like this, he will be yours to take home and keep alive—"

"You can't keep wild rabbits alive, penned up in a coop!" broke in Bill Darby, who knows it all.

"Is 'at so?" said Jerry. "Well, you can if you know how. And do I know how! Ask me, do I know how. I'll say I do, and then some. I can teach you fellas a lot you never knew—you want to ask me something, sometime—"

"I'll ask you something," spoke up our captain. "Since you think you can tell us so much—who was it that took the other rabbits out of the traps and left just a hindfoot for us to find?"

Jerry stared at Dick for a moment, with a foolish look on his face. Then he grinned, as he answered: "That was smart of you, Dick, to think of that. But 'taint fair to ask questions like that. You might as well ask me how far is up. Silly, you see. But I'll answer you that question some time—very soon. Hold me to it—'cause you'll get the answer."

And with that, then we all wended our way back to the river bank. It was getting dark, and most of the fellows went home, because Jerry and Shadow went to take the rabbit up to Jerry's barn where they were going to make a hutch for it. I had to smile as I followed Perry Stokes up the steps of the clubhouse.

"Well, Perry," I said, as I waited for him to unlock the door, "I think we're going to have a lot of fun with these two trappers, don't you?"

"Maybe, sir," he answered, as he turned the lock and swung the door open, "but I think we are going to have some more trouble on this river bank, sir."

"Ah, Perry," I said, "why do you always croak about trouble—"

My voice died away and I stopped dead in my tracks as I gazed at the meeting room. Two chairs had been placed together near the cupboard in the corner, and a third chair stood on top of the two. One of our lamps had been knocked from its nail on the wall and lay in a mess of broken glass and oil on the floor. I stepped over the mess as I walked around the long table to my writing room and gazed inside. Perry had put a fresh blotter on top of my desk, after we had found the ink bottle upset upon it the day before, and had bought a new bottle of ink. The first thing I saw was the ink bottle open; the cork was gone. And upon the blotter, as though it had been daubed with the stopper, were two big letters—"G. G."

"By Jinks!" I exclaimed. "Look here, Perry!"

"As I was telling you, sir," came Perry's voice over my shoulder, "I think we are going to see some more excitement on this old river bank."

Which we did.

The Gentle Traveler

Her Costumes Must Be Few But Smart, and of Materials Not Easily Wrinkled

Some suggestions for the fair traveler, sketched aboard the S. S. Ile de France. The three costumes above, reading from the left, represent—A Jane Regny sports dress in beige and brown wool jersey; another Jane Regny model, this time a coat developed in a brown and beige tweed and having a pocket at the scarf end; a beige tweed coat by Jenny, collared and cuffed with smoke colored raccoon. Directly at the left is a hat of green velours from Reboux. Another Reboux chapeau is sketched directly to the right, this time being developed in beige felt. A very smart turban by Agnes, combining light gray felt and ivory blue wool jersey is shown in the circle to the right.

THE principal clothes problem for the prospective traveler is to assemble a wardrobe which is adequate and yet not too profuse numerically for comfort. While it obviously will not do to fare forth into a strange country underdressed, the discomforts caused by too many costumes are quite as ennervating. Generally speaking, the ideal wardrobe should be capable of being packed into one large week-end suitcase, a hat box and a smaller personal bag fitted with vanity articles.

The ideal number of dresses to take along on your journey will vary between four and six. If your trip will take you into such exotic climates as the Riviera or Palm Beach, the latter number will be preferable as there will be numerous occasions to display them. If, on the other hand, Quebec, St. Moritz or Lake Placid is your destination the lesser number will be found quite adequate. A three-piece ensemble for general daytime wear, a knitted sports dress, one long-sleeved dinner gown of lace that will serve for formal afternoon wear as well, and one robe de style must be included. The question of coats will vary, of course, with the climate of the place you visit, but in any case a rough sports coat suitable for motoring, deck wear or inclement weather must be taken along.

Three pairs of shoes should be sufficient—one for evenings, one for sports wear and the third for daytime occasions. Two, or possibly three hats will be required and one of these must be the crushable sports type which can be crowded in a single corner of the suitcase. Easily laundered lingerie of silk jersey, nightgowns of plisse crepe and a fairly warm negligee will all be found to make your voyage more pleasant. Four pairs of gloves and handkerchiefs with your full name monogrammed in the corners are the final touches to complete the traveling wardrobe.

The only absolutely essential accessory beyond these is an envelope purse sufficiently large to contain passport and letters of credit. This may be selected to harmonize with the traveling ensemble mentioned above.

All of these selections, of course, must be made from the most advanced Paris models of the moment. The visit to a foreign climate entails the definite sartorial obligation to exploit the newest and smartest models which Paris is offering. Even if you are going to Paris itself you will find it for once advisable to carry coats to Newcastle.

Among the hats from which you may make your selection perhaps the most fashionable at this moment are the skilfully wound flat turban shapes of Agnes that form a skull cap and a flaring out pleat at each side of the back. One such model is sketched in the circle on today's page. The Breton brim and the beret crown liaison is another fashion which this designer is offering for winter. In case you are venturing into more frigid climates you will find the Reboux mixtures of felt and fur, which utilize astrakhan or broadtail to face up-turned brims, particularly suitable.

In at least one of your dresses it will be advisable to incorporate the beltless princess line which Jenny has inaugurated for mid-winter. Claudine collars and flaring cuffs, pointed or asymmetric necklines, and an occasional bracelet band of trimming placed on the forearm above the wrist are among other themes which are being sponsored by Paris at this moment. For your rough sports coat the new Louiseboulanger models of mixed tweed are suggested. These coats are invariably straight, and are usually lined with wool jersey. Perhaps the most effective models in this tweed category employs its selvedge as a border and is worn over a brown wool jersey dress which is horizontally pleated across the bodice and hips, and then gathered in at the skirt.

For your evening gown the back-drooping movement is still essential. Louiseboulanger makes it a specific point to concentrate fullness completely toward the back in her mid-season evening models. One of these gowns, which will be found quite acceptable for traveling purposes, is of sky-blue satin and has two detached back panels whose hems slant down to a center point. The skirt portion of another effective model by this designer is made of two ostrich frills that slant down to the center back from the left side of the waist under a surplice bodice opening.

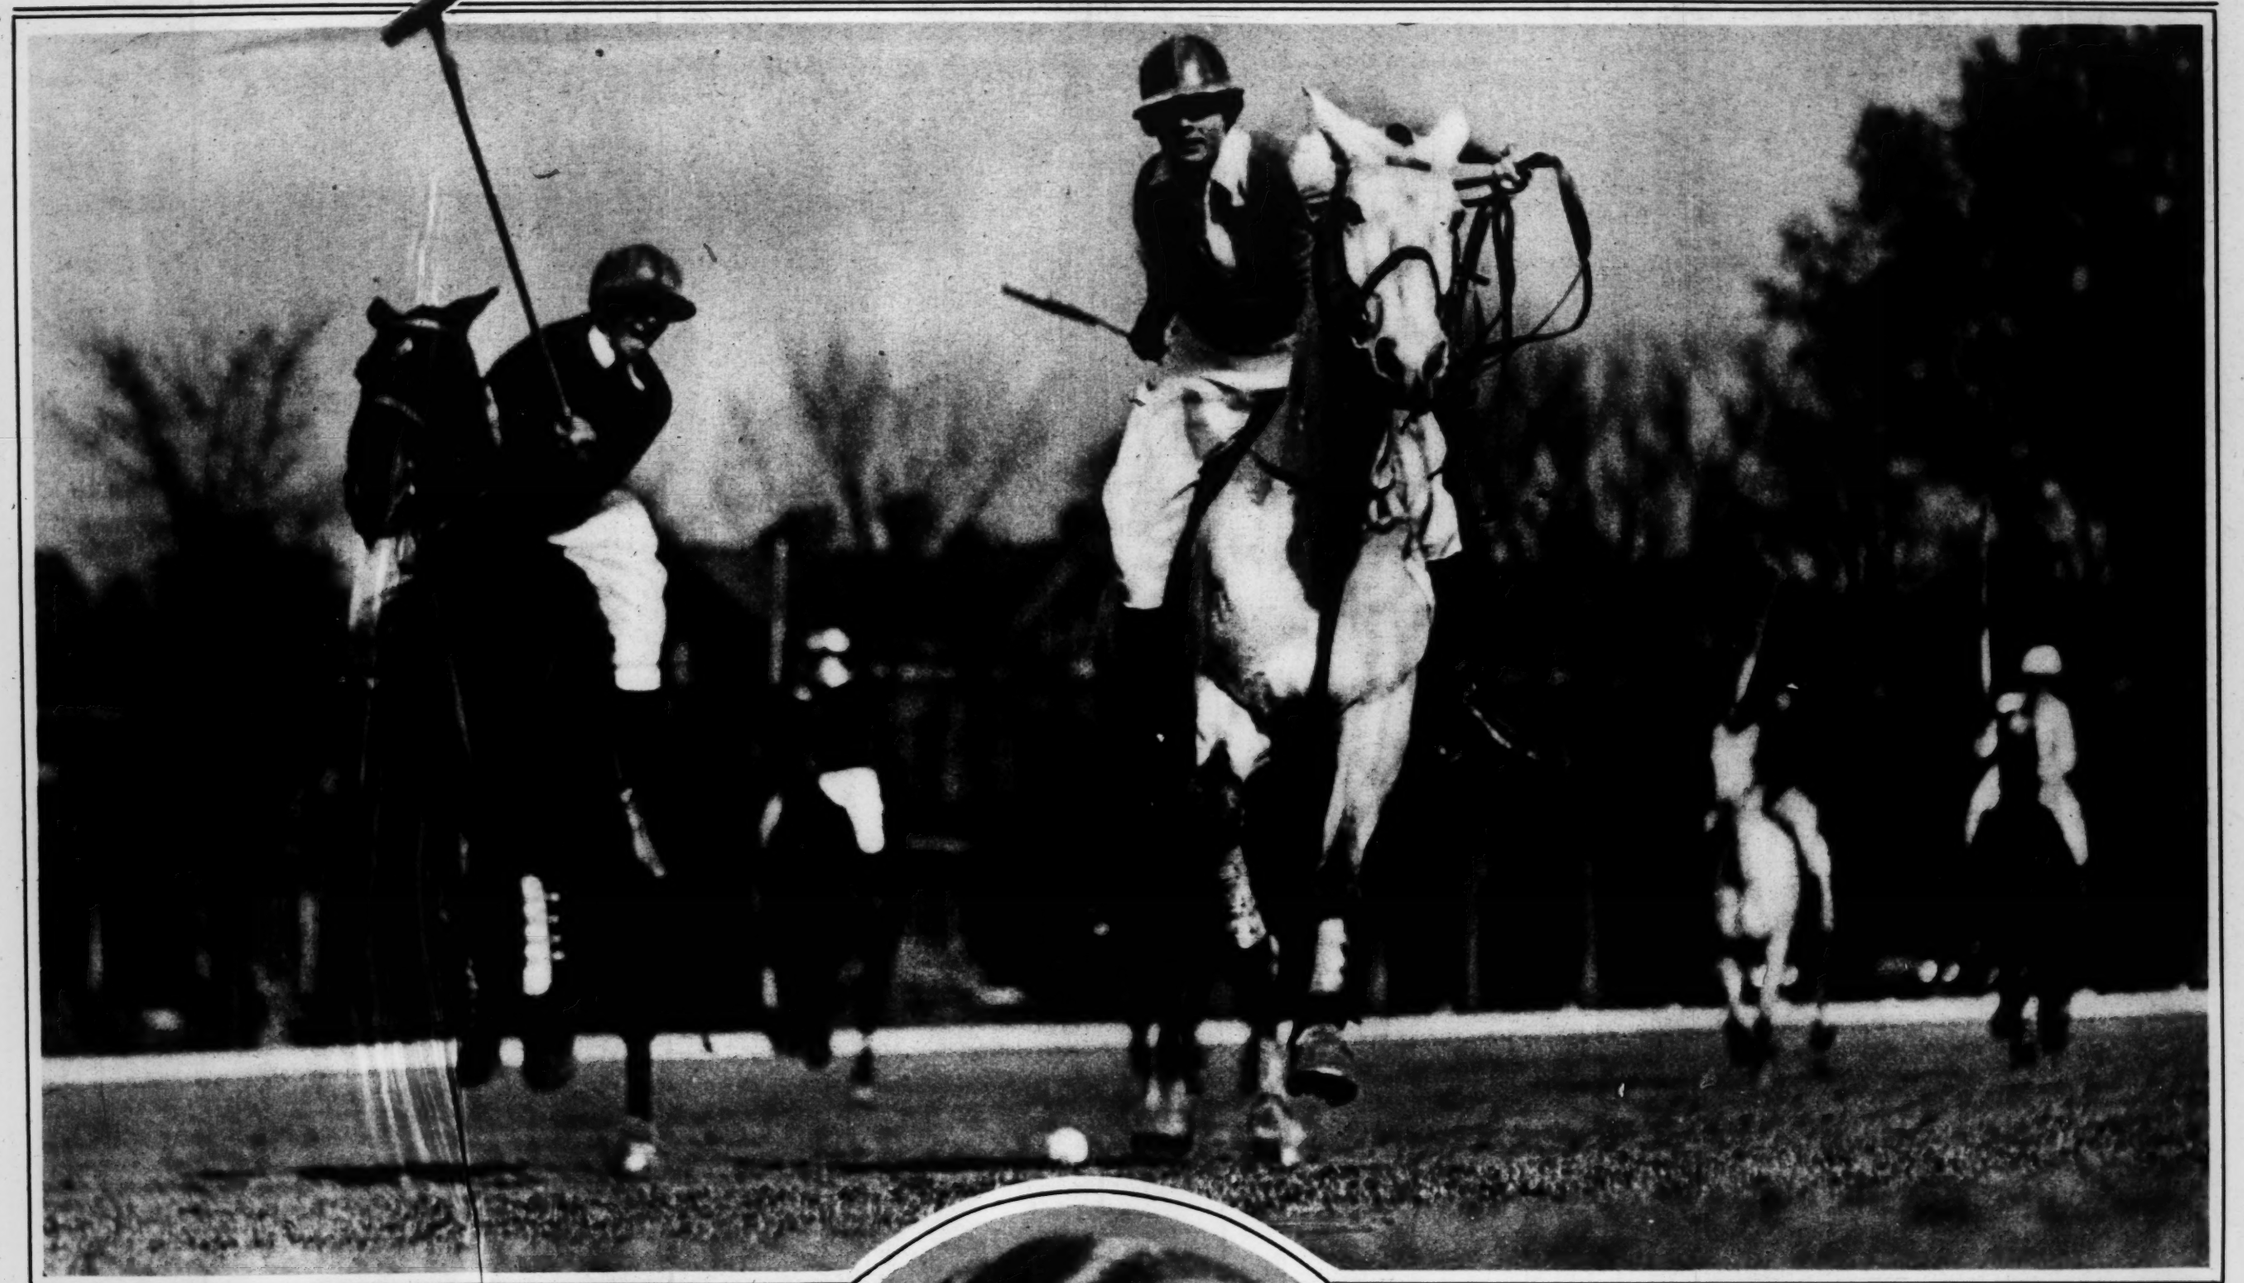

The sports dress, of course, must be simpler than any other member of the wardrobe. Excellent models in category are the Jenny mid-season sports frocks made of pastel-colored chine wool jersey, with bell-shaped skirts which are attached to the bodice just under the normal waistline.

Revamping the Heart of Atlanta

Vigorous prosecution of work on the Pryor street and Central avenue viaducts has changed the physical appearance of the entire area and bids fair to cause a change in the skyline of the south's Gate City. Completion of the projects, Atlanta's biggest civic improvements at a cost of $2,400,000, is expected early in 1929. Engineers, construction chiefs, Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, members of the bridge committee of city council and the bond commission recently surveyed the improvements.

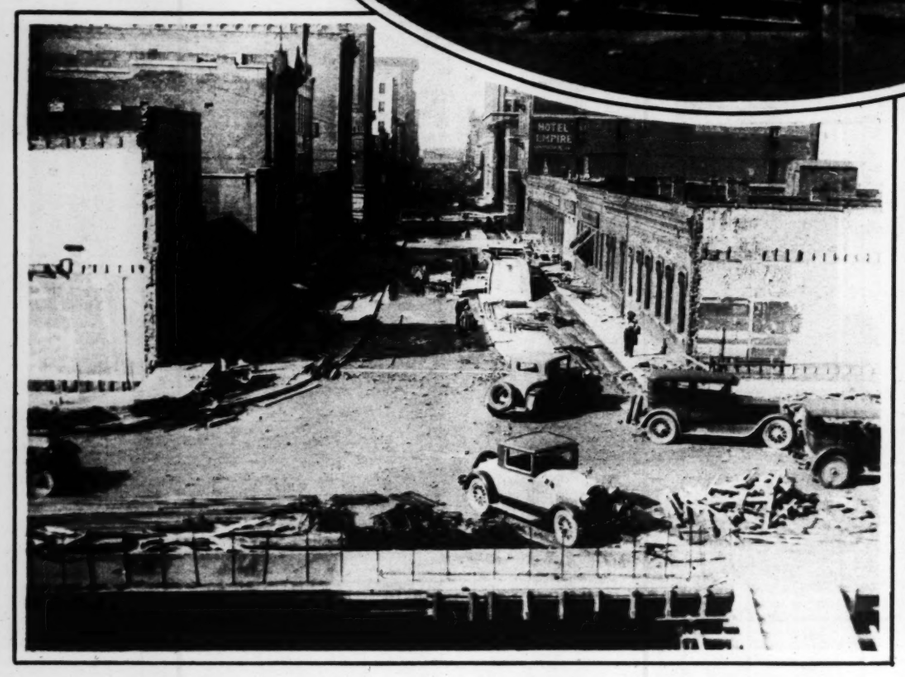

Photos by Kenneth Rogers, Staff Photographer

Pryor street viaduct looking north is shown in this print. Workmen are now busy erecting the foundations for the superstructure to extend through from Hunter street to Decatur. Part of this is already in, as is seen in the photograph.

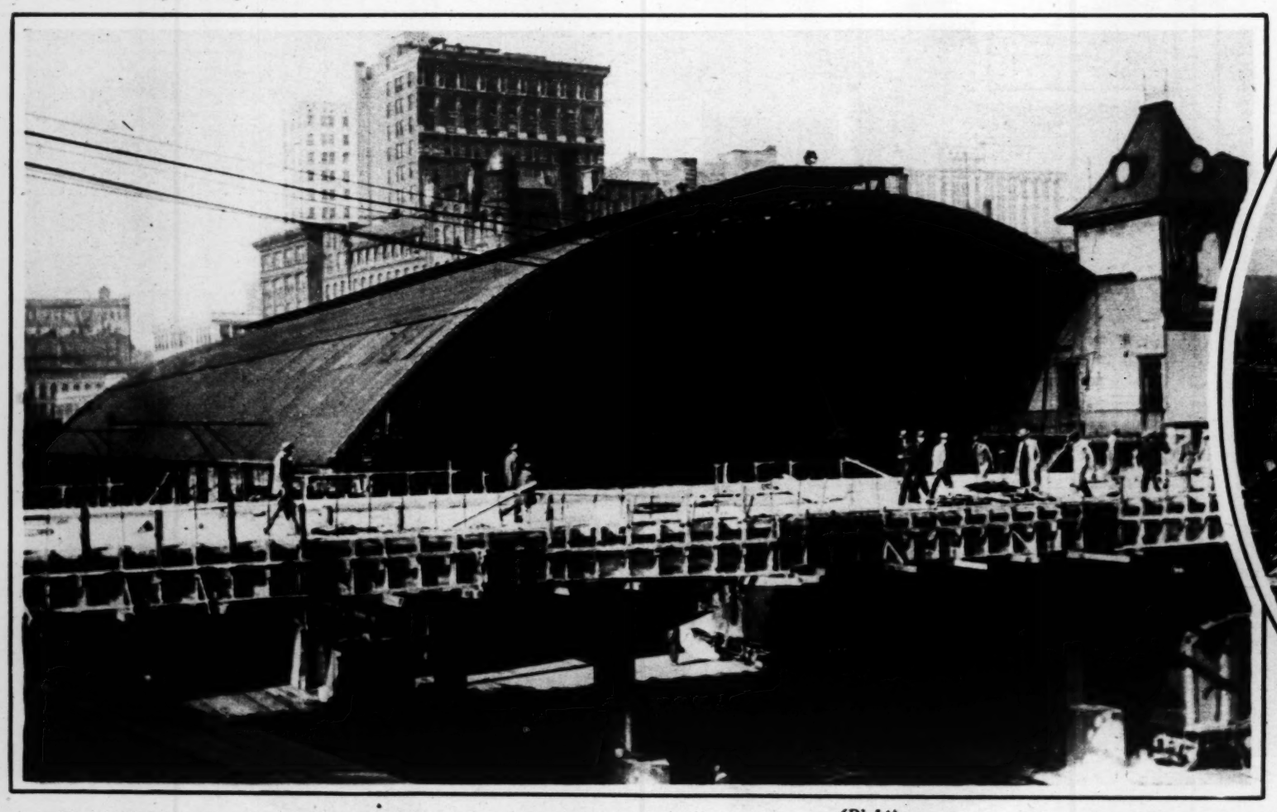

Hunter street looking west. The new grade has been fixed and the thoroughfare is open to traffic.

The new Alabama street viaduct looking west. The picture shows the Alabama approach as it connects with the Central avenue viaduct. The Atlanta and Lowry National Bank building is seen in the right background.

Inspecting Atlanta's biggest and most recent bridges—C. E. Kauffmann, bridge engineer of the city; Alex MacDougald, president of the MacDougald Construction company, contractors on the projects; Wiley L. Moore, councilman from the seventh ward and a member of the bridge committee; Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, Frank H. Neely, chairman of the Atlanta bond commission; W. Guy Dobbs, alderman from the seventh ward and chairman of the bridge committee; Harry York, councilman from the sixth ward, and Charles L. Chosewood, councilman from the third ward, and members of the bridge committee are shown viewing the projects.

The old Union station, the site of a proposed new 12-story warehouse and its proximity to the Central avenue structure are shown in this picture. Towering in the background are the Kimball House, the Fourth National Bank building and at the right, the Hurt building.

Looking southward on the Central avenue viaduct one sees the Fulton county courthouse in the right background. This bridge will be open for use within the next two weeks, engineers have announced.

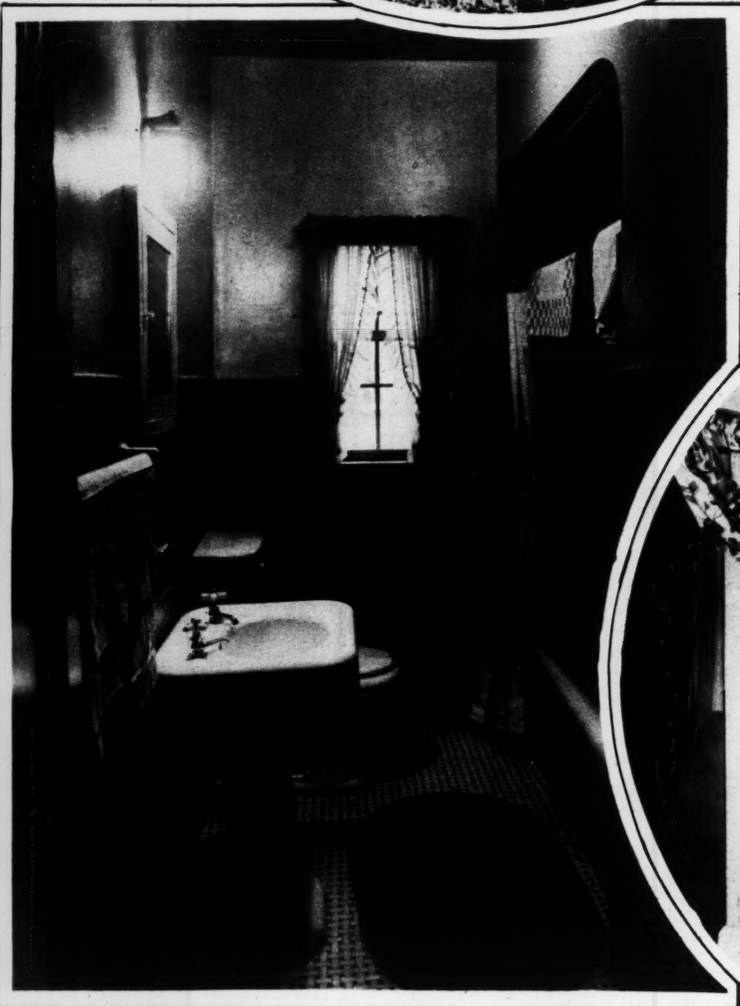

TYPIFIES BETTER HOME—An interesting view of The Constitution's Master Model Home at 705 Morningside drive.

Master Model Home Attracts Thousands

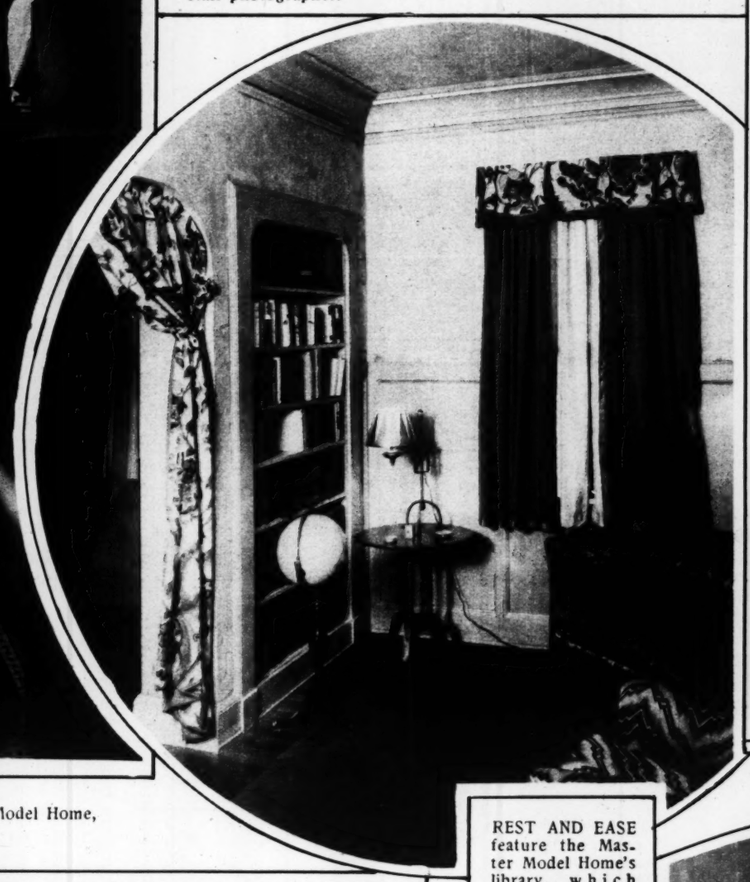

Universally pronounced the most outstanding forward step in Atlanta's history in the raising of home-building and home-beautifying standards, The Constitution's Master Model Home at 705 Morningside Drive has been viewed by nearly 80,000 persons since its formal opening on Sunday, November 25. The Master Model Home—the only one of its kind in this section—is built to meet the rigid specifications of the Home Owners Institute of America. In connection with it, The Constitution is sponsoring a model home at 1643 Rock Springs Road, a block distant from the Master Model Home. Nationally-prominent building material firms and Atlanta stores are cooperating with The Constitution in the educational home movement. Both homes will remain open for public inspection through December 23, visiting hours on week days being from 2 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon and on Sundays from 2 o'clock in the afternoon until 10 o'clock at night. Herewith are presented interesting views of the Master Model Home made by George Cornett, Constitution staff photographer.

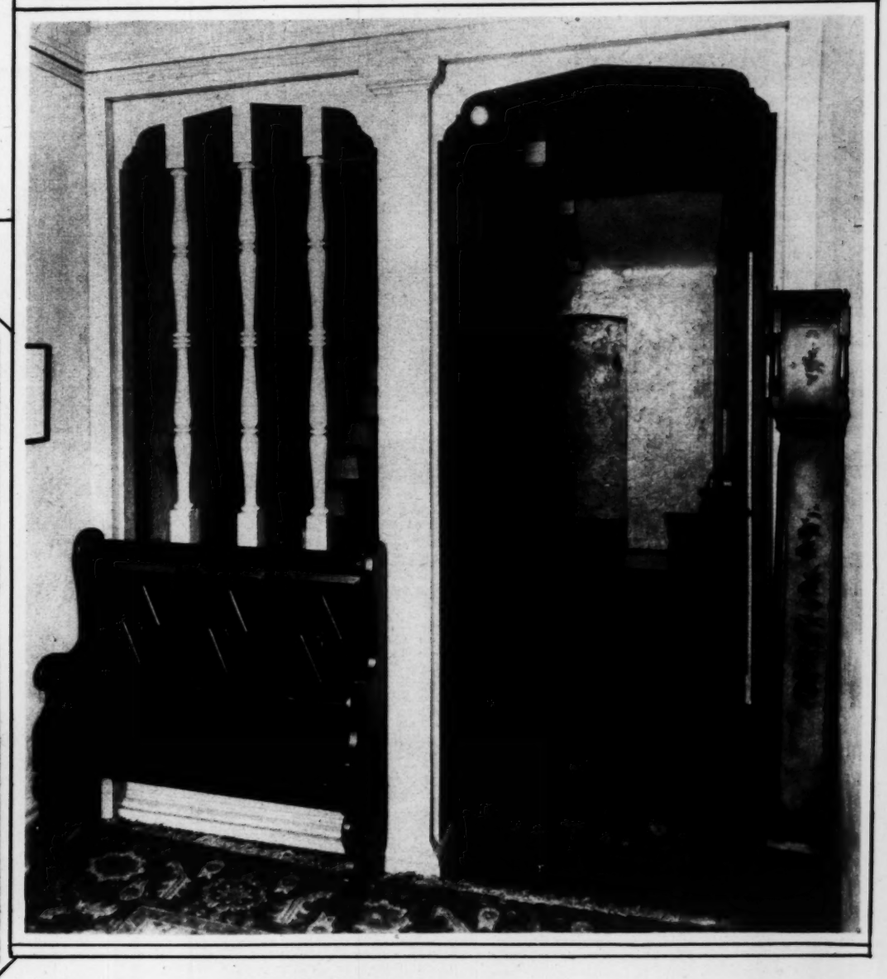

"HOME, SWEET HOME"—The atmosphere of the beautiful song clings about this spacious and delightful living room of the Master Model Home.

BEAUTIFUL BATH—It is one of two baths in the Master Model Home, one being tiled in peach and the other in pale green.

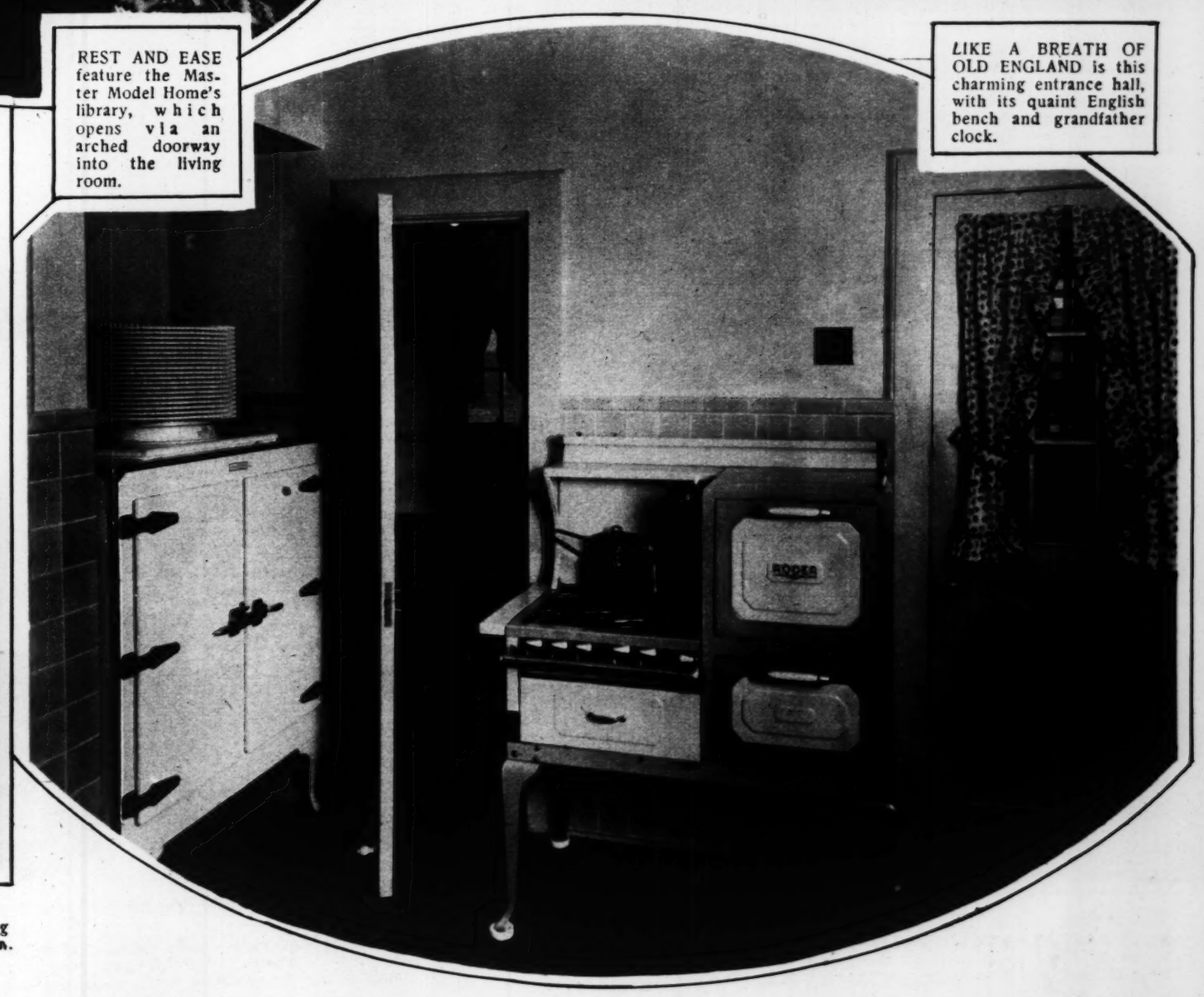

REST AND EASE feature the Master Model Home's library, which opens via an arched doorway into the living room.

LIKE A BREATH OF OLD ENGLAND is this charming entrance hall, with its quaint English bench and grandfather clock.

(Above)
THE GUEST ROOM—Facing Morningside Drive, this inviting room breathes an air of the old-fashioned times.

THE MODERN KITCHEN—Tiled in cool green and boasting every modern labor-saver, this Master Model Home kitchen is a model in every respect.

1928 Belles Are Not Fat

They end the excess in this easy way

Twenty years ago excess fat was common. Few people of 40 escaped it. Not so today. Slender figures are the rule. All ideas of style and beauty are opposed to fat.

This great change started when science discovered the chief cause of obesity. It lies in an under-active gland. A way was found to correct this deficiency, and multitudes employed it.

This factor was embodied in Marmola prescription tablets. People have used them for over 20 years—millions of boxes of them. That is one great reason for the slender figures you see everywhere today.

Marmola is not secret. Each box contains the formula and the reasons for results. No abnormal exercise or diet is required. Simply take four tablets daily until weight comes down to normal.

Try this method if you over-weigh. Watch the new health and vigor which come when the excess fat departs. Then you will know why so many people, for many years, have urged friends to use Marmola. Go start at once.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. If your druggist is out, he will get them at once from his jobber.

A New Reo Flying Cloud
The Mate

Racing for port, slim nose in the smother while the rival merchantmen hove to and rode out the storm—flashing down the Roaring Forties to make one glamorous record after another on the stubborn trip around the Horn . . . what made the "Flying Cloud" the darling of a nation in the good old clipper days? Craftsmanship! . . . Every inch of her tuned to its purpose. Every quality so balanced as to make a perfect whole. The last inch of canvas—that could be safely carried. The final foot of cargo space—that didn't cut down speed. No wonder—like to like—she gathered to herself the cleverest Master and the staunchest Mate who owed allegiance to the Stars and Stripes. Today, our field of action shifts to landward. Our cars crowd roads around the world as Yankee clippers filled the glittering lanes at sea. But balanced craftsmanship still turns the trick—so much of this, so much of that, no more—and so the Reo Flying Cloud sails on. Speed—much more than you'll ever need. Quick pick-up and such 4-wheel brakes as bring her up all-standing. A wheel that answers to a finger's touch. Dependability that hugs the road no matter how you let her out. A power that rides the hills as once the elder "Flying Cloud" rode equinoctial gales. More space—an extra-wide rear seat, a front seat with those unexpected inches that make an added passenger a pleasure, not a temper test. Beauty, of course—a sleekness and a grace inseparable from perfect balance of design.

From this day forward—here's the cheering news—there's not a single Flying Cloud—but two. The Master is the bigger car. The Mate is next in line. Every quality that distinguishes the first goes also for the second—except size . . . and price.

GASOLINE ALLEY

WHAT DO YOU DO WITH THE REINDEER, SANTA?

I USE THEM MYSELF. I'LL NEVER GIVE THEM UP.

- King

HERE'S SANTA CLAUS. HE'D LIKE A CONTRIBUTION TO HELP THE POOR PEOPLE TO A HAPPY CHRISTMAS THIS YEAR.

THANK YOU, SIR.

UNCLE WALT, HOW DOES SANTA CLAUS GO DOWN SO MANY CHIMNEYS TO SO MANY LITTLE BOYS ALL IN ONE NIGHT?

PERHAPS IF YOU WOULD GO BACK AND ASK HIM HE'D TELL YOU ALL ABOUT IT.

SANTA CLAUS, IS THERE ONLY ONE SANTA CLAUS TO GO INTO ALL THE LITTLE BOY'S HOMES TO LEAVE PRESENTS?

WELL, SKEEZIX, THERE IS ONLY ONE CHIEF SANTA CLAUS, BUT A LOT OF ASSISTANT SANTA CLAUSES.

YOU SEE THE BUSINESS HAS GROWN SO LARGE THAT ONE MAN CAN'T BEGIN TO HANDLE IT ANY MORE. IN THE OLDEN DAYS A SLEIGH AND SIX OR EIGHT REINDEER COULD CARRY THE WHOLE CHRISTMAS LOAD.

CAN'T THEY ANY MORE?

BLESS YOU, NO! IT TAKES FORTY-EIGHT AIRSHIPS FOR THE UNITED STATES ALONE, ONE FOR EACH STATE — AND NEARLY A DOZEN FOR CANADA.

WHO RUNS ALL THOSE AIRSHIPS?

EACH ONE IS IN CHARGE OF AN ASSISTANT SANTA CLAUS AND THERE ARE OTHER ASSISTANT SANTA CLAUSES THAT WORK FOR THEM WITH AIRPLANES.

HOW DO THEY COME DOWN ALL THE CHIMNEYS?

THEY CAN'T ANY MORE. ONLY IN HOUSES WITH GOOD OLD FASHIONED FIREPLACES. OTHER PLACES THEY HAVE TO COME THROUGH A DOOR OR A WINDOW.

DO ALL THE SANTA CLAUSES LOOK ALIKE?

YES, SO MUCH THAT THEY CAN HARDLY TELL EACH OTHER APART. BUT OF COURSE THE HEAD SANTA KNOWS THEM ALL.

ARE YOU THE HEAD SANTA?

NO, I'M ONLY ONE OF HIS ASSISTANTS. I HAVE A LOT OF BOYS AND GIRLS TO TAKE CARE OF BUT NOT NEARLY AS MANY AS BIG SANTA HIMSELF.

WHICH ONE COMES TO SEE ME?

WELL, I'LL TELL YOU, BIG SANTA VISITS ALL THE BEST CHILDREN HIMSELF, NO MATTER WHERE THEY ARE AND LEAVES THE ORDINARY ONES TO THE REST OF US.

I KNOW HE HAS TAKEN CARE OF YOU PERSONALLY BEFORE AND I'M SURE HE IS GOING TO DO IT AGAIN THIS YEAR. HE'S NOT GIVING UP THE LIST HE'S HAD RIGHT ALONG. ANYTHING ELSE I CAN HELP YOU WITH?

NO, NOT NOW, THANKS, SANTA CLAUS.

WELL DID YOU FIND OUT WHAT YOU WANTED TO KNOW?

YES, ALL EXCEPT I FORGOT TO ASK HIM IF CORKY IS ON BIG SANTA'S LIST.

SAY! YOUNG FELLER, DID YOU READ THAT — SIGN?

YEZZER — I DID.

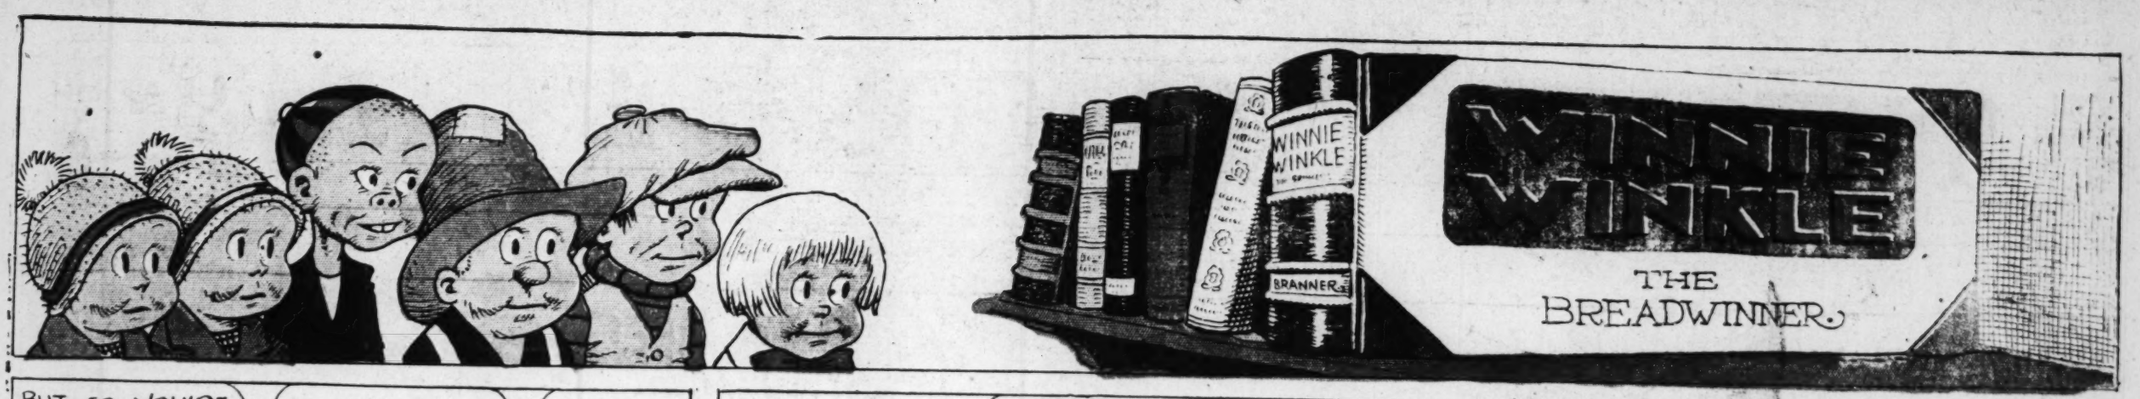

NO SWIMMING ALLOWED HERE.

THEN WHY ARE YOU DOING WHAT THE SIGN FORBIDS?

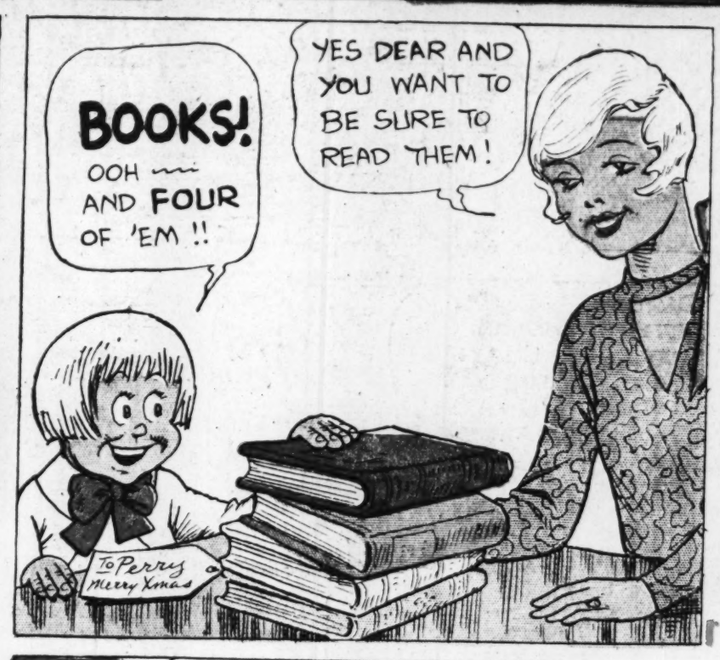

I AIN'T! I'M IN THE WATER —

AND THAT SIGN IS ON A TREE.

NO SWIMMING ALLOWED HERE.

BUT-ER-YOU'RE SUPPOSED TO WAIT TILL CHRISTMAS FOR THIS-ER-
I KNOW, BUT I SAW THE TAG! IT'S FROM UNCLE TOM IN TEXAS AND IT'S FOR ME! C'MON POP, GIVE IT TO ME !!
GO AHEAD DAD — GIVE IT TO PERRY!

BOOKS! OOH — AND FOUR OF 'EM !!
YES DEAR AND YOU WANT TO BE SURE TO READ THEM!
To Perry Merry Xmas

BOY! I'M GOING TO READ 'EM — AND HOW !!

GOODNESS! I NEVER SAW THAT CHILD READ SO MUCH BEFORE!

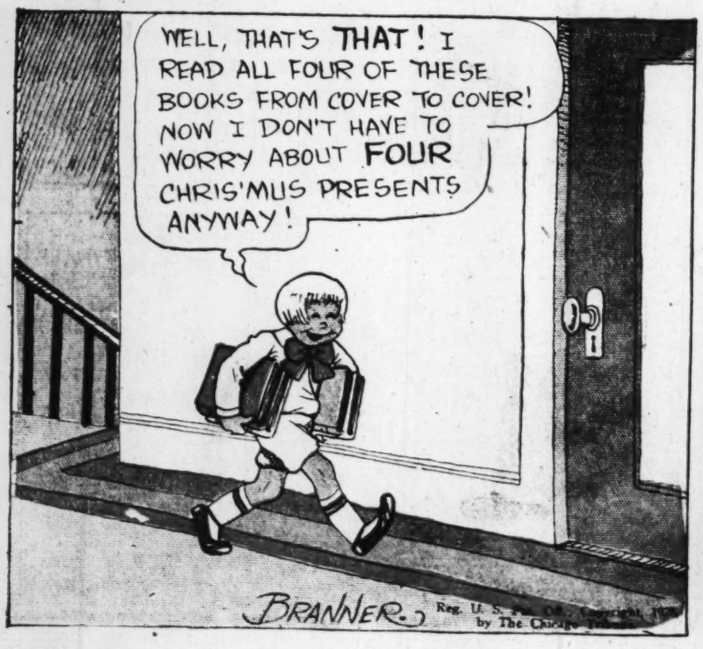

WELL, OF ALL THINGS! PERRY READING!! WHAT'S GOING TO HAPPEN ??

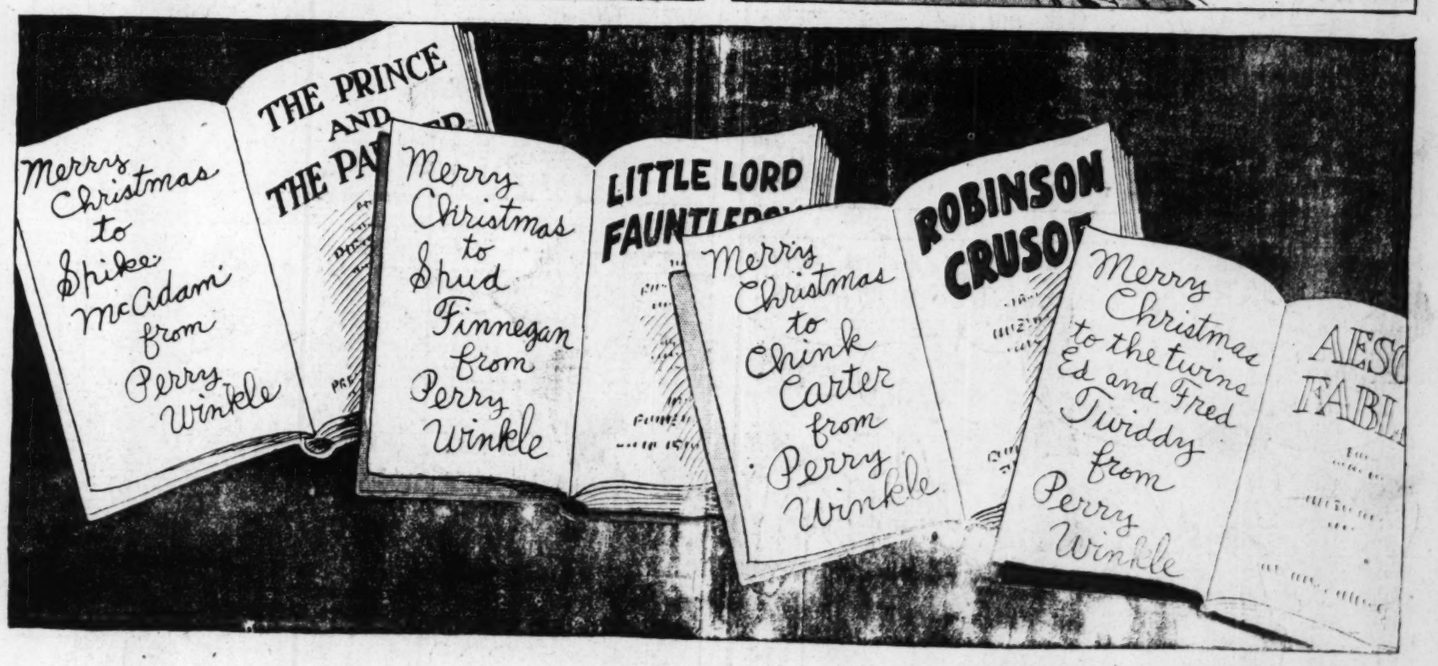

GOSH! HE AIN'T EVEN GOIN' OUT TO PLAY !!!

WHAT'S TH' IDEA OF LEAVING THE TABLE BEFORE YOU'RE FINISHED !!??
AW, I CAN'T EAT, PA !! I GOTTA FINISH A VERY INTERESTIN' STORY I'M READIN' IN ONE OF THEM BOOKS!!

I CAN'T UNDERSTAND IT! MAYBE HE'S SICK OR SOMETHING!
YES, WHEN A BOY SETS STILL AN' READS ONE BOOK AFTER ANOTHER, THERE'S SOMETHIN' WRONG !!
MAYBE HE'S REFORMING FOR CHRISTMAS !

WELL, THAT'S THAT! I READ ALL FOUR OF THESE BOOKS FROM COVER TO COVER! NOW I DON'T HAVE TO WORRY ABOUT FOUR CHRIS'MUS PRESENTS ANYWAY!
